66th Berkshire Regiment. The regiment moved yesterday from Gosport to Chatham.

73rd Black Watch, Royal Highlanders. The regiment is in readiness to leave Portsmouth on the 7th prox. for Aldershot.

81st Loyal North Lancashire Regiment is expected to reach Portsmouth on the 7th prox. from India. A farewell dinner was to be given on Oct. 26, by the members of the Allahabad Club, to Col. Bevan and the officers of the regiment. Lieuts. Savage and Atkin have been appointed to the 1st and 25th N.I. respectively, as S.C. probationers.

88th Connaught Rangers. Lieut. Webb has been granted leave from India to England for 15 months, on private affairs.

90th Light Infantry. Capt. Vivian has been granted leave in India for five months, and afterwards six months' leave to England, on medical certificate.

Rifle Brigade. Brevet Lieut.-Col. Robinson, 1st Batn., has been appointed an officiating Assist.-Adjt.-Gen. of Division on the Staff of the Bombay Army.

Medical Department. The Standard says:—"The Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has conveyed his thanks and praise to the officers composing the Medical Staff in Egypt, for their fearless and untiring services during the late cholera outbreak among the British forces serving in that country. The success which attended their ability and zeal, in stamping out a disease which at one time threatened to reduce the battalions more than actual warfare, has called forth his Royal Highness's special admiration and highest commendation."

Pay Department. "Paymaster" writes:—"Only a few days ago a War-Office Standing Committee was appointed to take into consideration all alterations in the conditions of service which it may be proposed to introduce into the Army, and to report upon the consequent changes which will be rendered necessary for the Departments thereof. An officer from every department, except the one to which I belong, has been detailed to sit upon this Committee; but the interests of the Pay Department, though inferior to none, are supposed to be sufficiently guarded by being entrusted to an official from the War Office. Now, no one who has ever had occasion to transact business with the gentleman I allude to will deny his unvarying courtesy, and his desire to do his best for the body of officers over whom he exercises considerable sway; but we do most strongly protest against being represented by any War Office official, feeling sure that it is impossible a civilian, however well-disposed, can understand our rights, wishes, or aspirations, as well as would one of our own body. Picture to yourself the indignation which would be felt throughout the whole medical world if a paymaster were appointed to look after the interests of the Medical Department, and yet I flatter myself that after some five and twenty years' service, I ought to be at least as well able to represent that department as a civilian can represent us. Is it any wonder that combatant officers refuse to join a department whose claims to be placed on a footing of equality with others are so persistently ignored?"

Veterinary Department. First-class Vet.-Surg. H. Dawson has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on medical certificate.

MILITIA.

Manchester Regiment. The annual dinner of the 3rd and 4th Batns. took place at the Café Royale, on the 14th inst. Present: — Col. Chambers, Col. Wrey, Majors Matthews and Powell, Capts. Kennedy, Dunlop, and Foley, and Lieuts. Leyden and Langton.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

1st Middlesex Engineers. Gen. Sir Andrew Clarke, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.I.E., Royal Engineers, has consented to distribute the prizes of this regiment at the head-quarters, College Street, Fulham, on the 8th inst.

1st Volunteer Battalion, Royal Fusiliers. This battalion (at first the 19th Middlesex, and subsequently the 10th Middlesex) had its annual prize distribution on the evening of the 16th inst. at Freemasons' Hall, Major-Gen. Kent presiding. Major Clarke, in his opening statement, announced the probable early retirement of Lieut.-Col. Blackburne Tew, who, he said, had left his mark on the regiment, and the announcement was received with much regret. The battalion has never been in a more flourishing condition, the efficients having increased from 798 to 907.

2nd London Rifles. The returns of this battalion, which have been sent to the War Office, show that 174 men have been struck off the rolls during the year. This is a large number, but as 246 recruits took their places, the strength has advanced from 836 to 908, 871 of whom are returned efficient. Lieut.-Col. Vickers has evidently a good battalion, which only requires careful handling to be maintained in an efficient state.

3rd London Rifles. Lieut.-Col. Laurie's command again shows well in the annual returns. The enrolled strength is two more than last year—1,082 as against 1,080—and the efficients six more, 1,053.

The Volunteer Service Review says:—"The recent endeavour of the Education Department of the War Office to afford further opportunities for examination in tactics to Volunteer officers is attended by a practical hardship to a considerable number of officers, which is well worthy of reconsideration. Emboldened by the numerous successful applications for permission to pass the examination in tactics prescribed for subalterns, the Education Department has now decreed that captains and field-officers shall be allowed to pass a superior examination in tactics, namely, that which is laid down for captains before promotion to the rank of major. Up to now, the only examination that could be passed was the one prescribed for subalterns before promotion to the rank of captain, and included the 15 subjects set out on page 567 of the small edition of the 'Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army,' recently published. These 15 subjects have already formed the basis of an examination which a number of Volunteer officers have passed, and successfully so, in many cases obtaining the requisite number of marks entitling them to special mention. It is now laid down that, in order to obtain a circled T in the Army List, it will be necessary for Volunteer officers to be examined in the whole of these 18 subjects, including, of course, the 15 in which a large number have already passed. There is a further hardship involved in the case of these officers. At the first examination in tactics, held at Wellington Barracks, the subjects 16, 17, and 18 were dealt with in the examination paper, and were successfully answered in a great many cases. It appears to us unreasonable that the Volunteer officers who have succeeded in passing, even in the 15 subjects, should be compelled to go through the whole curriculum again in order to obtain a new certificate; but it is a particularly severe discouragement to those who have already passed in the whole of the 18 subjects. It must not be thought that Volunteer officers object to learning, but it should be distinctly understood that they have but a limited amount of time to devote to military work."

THE ARMY.

"LXIII." writes to us:—"I hope you will find space for the following remarks from one whose love for the service is as intense as his disgust at the 'reforms' by which it is rapidly being ruined. Of the numerous schemes which the reformers of the British Army have carried into effect, the most unpopular was the abolition of the old Numbers, of which our Regiments were so justly proud. This freak has been, and is, the cause of endless trouble and confusion in every Regiment and Department, and even to our capricious reformers themselves. Another of their crotchets was to localise our Regiments, by giving 'Territorial Titles' to those that had none, and changing the titles of those that had special appellations. Their object, apparently, was to destroy the history and reputation of our glorious old regiments, and by this contrivance, together with short service, it must be admitted that they have, to a great extent, succeeded; for they have so jumbled up the titles, badges, and honours, that it is a difficult matter for corps, and an absolute impossibility for the nation, to distinguish which are the genuine honours that have been won by hard fighting in the long and arduous campaigns of the past, among the shoals of political, spurious, and burlesque honours granted for the butterfly campaigns of recent date. Again, the localisation scheme has proved a failure as regards recruiting, for in the territorial regiments, and indeed throughout the service, deficiencies are met everywhere and confusion is rampant. The regiments when at home are seldom quartered in the counties and towns to which, with loud blast of trumpet, they were assigned. The territorial designations are so inconveniently and ridiculously long that abbreviated titles have been devised. But these latter have no merit but their comparative shortness, for they are hopelessly confusing."

ARMY EXAMINATIONS.

Sir,—The following question appears in a geographical paper given at one of the recent examinations for entrance into the Army. It shows that our military rulers are as anxious that the officer of the future shall be as able to find his way beneath the ocean, as the question propounded by "X.," in your issue of Nov. 17, proves their anxiety that he shall be equally able to find his whereabouts whilst on the surface of the land. The solution of either question bears heavily, no doubt, on the matter of the fitness of the individual for the position of a regimental officer:—Question: Draw the principal contours of the bed of the Atlantic between 50 deg. N. latitude and the Equator?—I am, &c., M.

The Standard says:—"The recruiting for the Army still causes uneasiness, the majority of regiments being under strength of establishment. The weekly waste is, in many instances, in excess of the number of men recruited. A scheme, consequently, will shortly be carried out, in which the Post-offices in the United Kingdom will be nominally recruiting offices. The Postmaster will appoint on application men belonging to the Army Reserve, or Militia, or a civilian as "bringers of recruits;" having been so appointed, their duty will be to seek persons desirous of becoming soldiers, and upon such recruits being approved, the "bringers" will be entitled to a sum of five shillings in each case. It is thought at head-quarters that many who are willing to join the Army, but do not know the way to go about it, will thus be assisted, and the Army once more augmented to its required strength."

From Rome we learn that the nomination of Admiral del Santo to the post of Minister of Marine causes universal satisfaction. The Opinione congratulates Signor Depretis on having entrusted the portfolio to a sailor who is a complete stranger to political struggles. Even such papers as the Fanfulla, which systematically opposed the late Minister, Acton, now admit that during his administration great good was done to the Marine. The condition of the sub-officers and of the workmen in the docks was greatly improved. Admiral Acton was one of the few Ministers of Marine who really thought about the sailors. The maritime defence of the nation was energetically carried on under his administration, and the reform of the Naval School alone would entitle him to the gratitude of the country. Admiral Acton carried through his scheme on the Naval Reserve and the division of the coast in maritime districts, which answers in a most satisfactory manner. Admiral Acton resumes active service.

A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, Gordon Holmes, M.D., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1883.

WHEN Baker Pasha was requested by the Egyptian Government to secure the services of retired British officers for the expedition which was at the time being prepared to march against the Mahdi, he was informed that the Chief of the Staff must be a retired officer of Field rank, and that all the other Englishmen must have served in the Army. Baker Pasha applied to several officers (among others, to Colonel F. Wellesley, and Colonel Hozier, late Scots Greys) to take the post, and it was only on the recommendation of others he eventually offered it to Colonel Hicks, whose qualities and services have recently been eulogised deservedly by Lord Mark Kerr, in the Times. According to Hart, Hicks Pasha entered the Bombay Army in 1849; served in Bengal during the campaign of 1857-59 with the 1st Belooch Battalion, and as Staff Officer to the Punjaub Moveable Column; in the Rohilcund Campaign with Major-General Penny's forces; was present in the actions of Kukrowlee and occupation of Bareilly, Bunnee, Mahomdee, and Shahjehanpore, at the capture of Rampore Kussia and Amethee; subsequently, with Lord Clyde's force at Sunkerpore, at Dhoondia Keria, and capture of the fort of Buxar; served under Lord Clyde throughout the operations across the Gogra; present at Brijidia, Churdah, and capture of Mejeediah; commanded the right wing of the 1st Belooch Battalion with Brigadier Horsford's Brigade on the Raptee (mentioned in despatches, medal); served as Brigade-Major, 2nd Brigade, 1st Division, during the Abyssinian Campaign in 1867-68; present at the capture of Magdala (mentioned in despatches, Brevet Major, and medal). Was gazetted Ensign, December 19, 1849; Lieutenant, November 23, 1856; Captain, December 29, 1861; Major, August 15, 1868; Lieutenant-Colonel, December 29, 1875; Honorary Colonel, July 1, 1880; and to the Reserve of Officers, October 16, 1880. Hicks Pasha had rather a "scratch pack" under him. Captain A. Farquhar, formerly Grenadier Guards, who came out to Egypt in search of service last year, made himself so useful that General Hicks made him Chief of the Staff when he was named Commander-in-Chief, in lieu of the Egyptian Pasha at Khartoum, and he has probably met an honourable death at all events. If the intelligence brought by "a Coptic official" to Khartoum, and by "other persons" to Duem, of the annihilation of Hicks Pasha's Army, be confirmed, as we fear it will to a great extent, there will be good reason to congratulate Major the Honourable J. Colborne, whose long letter we printed last week, that he was peacefully living at Shepheard's Hotel, in Cairo, when the disaster took place; and to include in the felicitation those fortunate officers who were invalided from the Soudan after their excursion to the junction of the two Niles, and who are now at home in England or Europe. Major the Honourable J. Colborne, formerly 77th Foot, who had been living at Constantinople and Cairo some time previously, and was a candidate for service in the Khedive's Army, was sent up to Khartoum, and served as he described in our columns last week, but he was at Cairo when Hicks Pasha started, and was unable to rejoin the Army, owing to the state of the country between Suakim and Berber. He served with the 77th Regiment in the Crimea from January, 1855, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol (medal with clasp, and Turkish medal). Of Lieutenant-Colonel Coëtlogon, late of the 70th Foot, we have no precise information at present, but we believe he was with the Reserve, and that he is now at Khartoum, preparing for the defence of the place which the Mahdi may mask if he pushes on towards New Dongola. He is a good officer. He entered the Army on March 27, 1858; became Lieutenant, June 3, 1859; Captain, February 3, 1872; Major, August 7, 1878; and retired by commutation of pension from the 70th Foot. Major Martin, a highly intelligent, fine fellow, had been in Baker's Horse in the South-African campaign, and was in charge of the small force of Cavalry. Captain Forestier Walker, formerly of the 3rd Buffs, was in command of the Nordenfelt guns and field artillery. Captain Massey (formerly Middlesex Regiment), Major Warner, Captain Page Phillips, Mr. E. B. Evans, Surgeon-Major Rosenberg, were also with the column. Count Von Seckendorff, one of the superior officers of the force, was formerly in the Prussian service, and was a magnificent specimen of the German race, being about 6 ft. 6 in., and straight as an arrow. He and Baron Von Korpff left Cairo for the Soudan before Hicks Pasha was appointed. Some of the names given in the papers cannot be identified, but Allahdeen Pasha, Governor-General of the Soudan; Abbas Bey, Captain Massey, Captain Warner, Captain Page Phillips, Georges Bey, &c., were all well known. Morris Brady or Brodie, late Royal Horse Artillery, is also mentioned. Great interest will be taken in the fate of O'Donovan (decribed in the Times as "the correspondent of a London newspaper"), the famous representative of the Daily News in Merv, and in that of Mr. Villiers, artist of the Graphic. Although of late years the name of Mr. F. Vizetelly has not been much before the public, he was well known as the artist of the Illustrated London News in the United States, during the war in Spain, &c., and has had a most varied and eventful career. It will be hard if he has fallen at last in such a fight. Mr. Evans was with the Indian Contingent at Tel-el-Kebir, and was a very smart, active official. We think it probable the slaughter has been much exaggerated, and if the Mahdi be a man of ordinary intelligence, as they say he is, it is not likely he could commit the blunder of letting the Europeans be killed if they fell into the hands of his followers alive. Hence, we think there are some hopes to be entertained that there will be news of survivors. The Egyptians appear to have behaved well. To fight for three days, as they are said to have done, was creditable; but no one has a word to say for them or their officers, and yet the disaster will plunge Egypt in mourning. Had an Egyptian been in command, our papers would have written homilies on the stupidity of marching into a defile and in dividing the Army, &c. The remarks of the ex-Khedive on the situation, as reported in a contemporary, afford proof, if any were needed, of his sagacity and knowledge, and give additional force to the convictions, growing stronger every day, of those who understand Egypt and its affairs, that it was a very lamentable error to remove him from the post for which he seems so peculiarly fitted under proper surveillance to fill.

The Aldershot Committee on an Active-service Dress for the British Army have at last arrived at something definite. Two men of the 39th Dorsetshire Regiment, dressed in different styles of the new infantry "tunic," proceeded to the Horse Guards on Saturday last for inspection, and we understand that of the patterns then submitted, one has been finally approved by the Commander-in-Chief as the future dress of the British soldier. The shape of the new "tunic" is somewhat similar to that of the frock at present in use. It is provided with plaits, which can be ripped open on active service, and the garment made loose. The wristbands can be made tight or loose at will. Receptacles for holding ammunition —ten rounds on each breast—are placed in front. A notable feature of the new garment is a revival of epaulettes. These are detachable, and would only be worn on show occasions, or when walking out, and are intended to give the dress a smart appearance. What the colour will be of this "tunic" of the future is yet an open question.

As the period is approaching when Militia commanding officers will be called upon to send in the dates they recommend for the assembling of their regiments for the training of 1884, we would point out to the responsible officials at the War Office one serious danger against which they should guard. We refer to the habit which exists among some borough members of bringing "the weight of their influence to bear" to induce the powers that be to allow regiments to train in their own county towns. This political influence is used to a far greater extent than some suppose. It is one of the results of the present civil or political administration of the Army, and it is so damaging in its effects upon the discipline and efficiency of the Militia service generally, that the Deputy-Adjutant-General for Auxiliary Forces would do well to keep it in view. A commanding officer must necessarily be the best judge as to what is most beneficial for his regiment, and in cases where a training in camp or barracks is advocated, no considerations of a financial or political character should be allowed to interfere. Those who have undergone a Militia training know well how pernicious the influences of the billeting system are. It is a relic of a bye-gone age, and any measure taken with the view of removing the Militiaman from an atmosphere of debauchery ought certainly to meet with the cordial support of all those who desire to see the service raised to the rank and position of a reliable auxiliary to the Regular Army.

Quetta, now definitely occupied as a permanent military station with a large garrison, should no longer remain unconnected with the Indian railway system.

An amusing instance of official "management" is given in a letter to the Times of Monday. The command of a distinguished regiment being vacant, the two officers next in rotation were informed they were unfit to succeed. These officers not, however, retiring, as expected, the senior was appointed, notwithstanding his incapacity, to the command, and took his regiment abroad, —not so long ago but that it is easily remembered.

We wonder if the forthcoming Estimates will give effect to the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Defence of our Colonial Possessions, of which Lord Carnarvon was chairman. These recommendations have been for some time before the authorities, but the probability is, till some disaster takes place, no expenditure will be incurred.

Sir Arthur Hayter, the Financial Secretary to the War Office, stated at Reading last week that recruiting for the Army was so successful, he hoped by June the deficiency would be made up. It is evident the authorities do not include the Royal Regiment of Artillery—not an unimportant branch, we fancied—in "the Army."

According to recent returns of the Army in Egypt, published in the "inspired Press," the strength of the 3rd Battalion, King's Rifle Corps, is about 600, that of the 1st Battalion, Gordon Highlanders, 640. These regiments ought to have a strength of over 800 men; and the fact of battalions on foreign service whose linked battalions are at home being in this condition, is a strange and awkward commentary on the successful state of recruiting, as announced by the authorities.

Major-General G. V. Johnson, Royal Artillery, will be placed on the Retired List in an early Gazette. The vacancy will, however, be absorbed.

If the appearance of these Boer delegates in England tends to revive the recollection—"infandum renovare dolorem"—of the sad spring of '81, that witnessed the burial in the Transvaal of Honour, the wife of John Bull, it also brings to mind that the one British regiment privileged to uphold her unblemished fame in her dying moments has never received the slightest recognition of its services. It is enough to make old soldiers sore at the recent mode of bestowing honours, when one sees a man wearing four decorations for having muddled about with his regiment in the dark for some twenty minutes, trotting over a few miserable "café-au-laits," whilst the man remains undecorated who, for some three long months, was in actual command of his regiment and the few other troops in every successful enterprise against the Boers surrounding Pretoria, who was twice severely wounded in sorties, and who once personally pursued and captured, single-handed, one of the finest specimens of the armed Africander. Whilst the 2nd Battalion (head-quarters) of the Scots Fusiliers held Pretoria, there were two companies at Potchfstroom, enduring a siege; whilst another company, at Rustenburg, were under fire night and day for over 92 days, and the officer commanding was once dangerously, once severely, and twice slightly wounded! Would that Lord Cairns, whose memorable speech on "Peace with Dishonour" will never be forgotten by the present generation, would make an eloquent appeal for the country to recognise with some mark of honour, this handful of men whose conduct was the one bright spot in that dark page of England's military annals!

Major A. C. F. FitzGeorge, 11th Hussars, has been appointed an extra Aide-de-Camp to Lieutenant-General Sir A. Alison, Bart., K.C.B., commanding at Aldershot.

The supersession of six officers of the Army Pay Department eligible for promotion on the Staff Paymasters' List, has caused considerable excitement amongst the Departmental officers. It is difficult to believe that the six officers referred to, all at present holding positions of great responsibility in charge of military chests and districts at home and abroad, can possibly be disqualified for promotion to a higher grade, the duties of which would call forth no more than ordinary intelligence to conduct satisfactorily. All these officers have been looking forward to the highest prize in their service, and without any warning or intimation of the particulars in which they have failed to give satisfaction, they are passed over by their juniors in a most unaccountable manner. We can only ascribe this unsatisfactory state of affairs to a system which delegates to one man the power of ruining the prospects of so many old and valuable officers. They have practically no appeal but to the hand that has smitten them.

We do not believe that a copy of our chatty, agreeable, little contemporary, the Globe, ever reaches Egypt, and therefore the amusement which might be created in Government "sukkles" in Cairo and Alexandria, if they could have read "The Two Evelyns," will not be evoked there, for we cannot reproduce the funny writing. Every one in Egypt knows that the "facts" on which the Globe expatiates are fictions. The most amazing story that ever was propounded about France or Egypt would be swallowed holus-bolus by our friend, who has a cannibal appetite for his enemies—"Crudum manducet Priamum Priamique piscinnos"—so the Globe really believes that Cherif Pasha never could have suggested that it would be well to lighten the crushing weight of our Army on the Egyptian exchequer, if he had not been put up to it by Lord Granville! "'Tis a strange 'Globe,' my masters!" The mad wag, in the same paper, declares:—"The French Government have telegraphed permission to bombard Canton 1,000 miles away!"

Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel H. J. T. Hildyard, 71st Highland Light Infantry, lately employed on Staff service in Egypt, has been selected to succeed Major R. L. H. Curteis, 16th Regiment, as Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General at the Horse Guards.

Giegler Pasha, who is described in the Times as "an Austrian officer," was a telegraph employé who went to the Soudan with Gordon Pasha's expedition, and displayed so much ability that he was retained in the service of the Egyptian Government after the Gordon régime ended. He returned to Cairo last year from Khartoum with the rank of Pasha. Gessi Pasha, one of his companions in the same expedition, formerly acted as interpreter to the British troops in the Crimea, and evinced remarkable courage and conduct in the latter part of his career in the Soudan, but succumbed to the effect of the privations he endured in his last campaign, when on his way back to Cairo, at Suez. His body was honoured by a public funeral at Genoa this year.

The irregularities in the last examination of Lieutenants of Militia for commissions in the Line, to which we called attention in our issue of the 3rd inst., are admitted to have occurred. The paper on Fortification, which was "partially" given out by mistake in the morning, is said to have been "one minute at the utmost" in the hands of those who were thus, fortunately for them, placed at a manifest advantage over the other competitors. But unmeasured minutes differ much in duration, and the papers prematurely given out could not have been instantaneously taken back. Even in one minute, a sharp young fellow could not fail to learn at least the purport of some of the questions in which he was deeply interested. When the utterly unpractical and ridiculous nature of many of the questions propounded (as exposed lately in this paper, and in others), and the occurrence of inexcusable mistakes, are considered, it must be allowed that Military Examinations, as now conducted, are not satisfactory tests of the best qualifications for appointment or promotion.

A correspondent who wants to know why no promotions have been made on the Indian Establishment to Major-General, is informed that no vacancies have occurred.

ALEXANDRA, Capt. Rawson, C.B., flagship of Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, is expected to arrive at Malta, with the greater part of the squadron under his command, on Nov. 26. The Thunderer went out of Malta Harbour on Wednesday for a trial of her machinery, which proved very satisfactory, and returned in the afternoon. The Cruiser was to leave Malta on Monday for a cruise, returning on Nov. 23. The Grappler arrived at Malta from Gibraltar on Nov. 9, and returns to Gibraltar on the 25th. The Condor was to leave Tunis on Nov. 18 for Malta. The Carysfort has been sent on detached service to Cyprus. The Hecla was ordered to leave Portsmouth on Nov. 20 for service on the Mediterranean station. The Bittern arrived at Gibraltar on Thursday week. The Invincible is to leave Malta on Nov. 25 for Alexandria, to relieve the Iris, which ship will return to Malta.

BOADICEA, Capt. Church, flagship of Rear-Admiral Nowell Salmon, V.C., was at Simon's Town on Nov. 18.

CONSTANCE, Capt. Doughty, was at Arica on Oct. 4, and would leave the same day for Mollenda.

DUNCAN, Capt. J. A. Poland, flagship of Vice-Admiral E. B. Rice, C.B., Commander-in-Chief at the Nore. A court-martial assembled on board yesterday (Friday) morning for the trial of James P. Lawson, ordinary seaman, serving on board the Duncan, for stealing an Egyptian war medal and Khedive bronze star, the property of John Williams, ordinary seaman. The court was composed of the following officers:—Capt. Lord Walter T. Kerr, of the Pembroke, president; Coms. C. H. Hawkins, R. H. Paul, J. E. Musters, and Lieut. Gregg. Mr. W. B. Risk, the Admiral's secretary, officiated as Judge-Advocate. Prisoner voluntarily pleaded guilty, and threw himself on the mercy of the court. The circumstantial letter showed that prisoner was taken into custody by the civil police on Sept. 6 for stealing, for which he was tried and punished by the Sittingbourne Magistrates. Serjt. Wenham, of the Kent County Police, suspecting that prisoner had stolen other goods, obtained a key from him and went to the Sailors' Rest, where he examined his ditty box, and found the articles in question. Williams, who was on duty with a navigating party in bringing the Leander to Sheerness, afterwards identified the medals as his property. Prisoner handed in a written defence, in which he stated that he committed the act in a weak moment, and hoped the Court would take his case into their most merciful consideration as one for mitigation of punishment. When he was apprehended and charged with stealing by the police authorities, Serjt. Wenham found in his box, at the Sailors' Rest, a watch, silver match box, and the medals, the property of men belonging to the Naval Barracks. When brought before the Sittingbourne Magistrates he expected to meet the charge of stealing the whole of the property, instead of which his offence seemed to be split into two. The prisoner's certificates showed that he was a fair character. The court found the charge proved, and sentenced the prisoner to six months' hard labour, at the expiration of which to be dismissed her Majesty's service.

EURYALUS, Capt. Hastings, flagship of Sir W. Hewett, arrived at Bombay on Saturday last from Aden. Brant; Adolphus FitzMortimer, Mr. Leveson; Josiah Ponder, Mr. Murray; Grip (bailiff), Lieut. Paris; Amelia, Mr. Beaumont; cookshop boy, Mr. Brownrigg. "Bombastes Furioso," rewritten to suit the occasion, was performed on Sept. 12. The Briton left Zanzibar on Oct. 24 to visit ports in Madagascar, and would proceed to Mauritius, and thence to Colombo. The Tourmaline left Zanzibar on Oct. 25 to visit Comoro Islands. LIEUTENANT CONWAY-GORDON'S CASE.

[We have received the following letter in reference to the action of the Admiralty in a case of which, it would seem, the last will not be heard for some time to come.—ED. A. & N. G.]

SIR,—In gratefully acknowledging your warm advocacy of the case of my son, Lieut. Lewis Conway-Gordon, R.M.A., I would ask you to allow me to draw the attention of all well-wishers of the service to the action of the Lords of the Admiralty in one special point in connection therewith. In the Order in Council, dated March 21, 1862, issued on the separation of the Artillery from the Light Infantry of the Royal Marines, the following paragraph appears:—"The General List of the Corps to be divided into two separate and distinct lists for promotion by seniority; one to be composed of the officers of the Royal Marine Artillery, and the other of the officers of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, upon the understanding that after the lists shall have been formed, no more interchanges by promotion, as at present, from one corps to another shall be allowed." The transfer of two officers from the Marine Light Infantry to the Artillery is, I submit, in direct contravention of the above Order in Council, and is thus illegal, being beyond the powers of their Lordships. If their Lordships can at their pleasure transfer officers in the junior grade, I would ask, what protection have officers in the higher positions? And we may yet see political, or, as in the present instance, personal influence, brought to bear in transfers of officers in the high grades from one corps to the other. I make no further comment on the letter of their Lordships of Oct. 20, 1883, as it carries its own condemnation. But I would wish to inform your readers that I am publishing the whole circumstances of the case and the correspondence connected with it, and shall be happy to forward in due course a copy of the same to any one who is desirous of making himself acquainted with the last phase of "Admiralty justice."—I am, &c.,

F. I. CONWAY-GORDON,
Lieut.-Col.

Newport Cottage, Lincoln, Nov. 22.

Obituary.

Com. Lynedoch Needham Moncrieff, whose death is this week announced from Cairo, as having taken place at Toka, 45 miles south of Suakim, when landing the last of the reinforcements sent to Gen. Hicks in the Soudan, entered the Navy in Jan. 1856. When sub-lieut. of the Pelorus in 1865, he was engaged in the destruction of piratical junks in Tungroa Bay. He also served with the 2nd Batn. of the Native Contingent during the Zulu War, and was present at the battle of Ulundi, where he was slightly wounded. He subsequently had charge of Fort Cambridge, as commissariat officer, and was highly commended for his services by the Lieutenant-Colonel commanding; was appointed Consul for French Guiana, to reside at Cayenne, in 1880, and was afterwards transferred to Egypt, to assist in putting down the slave-trade. He retired with the rank of commander in 1873.

Mr. George W. Muir, paymaster, of H.M.S. Asia, died on Friday morning, the 16th inst., at Alberta Villa, Granada Road, Southsea. This officer served with much distinction during the Crimean War, was landed after the battle of the Alma to embark Russian wounded, and was attacked by Russians whilst so employed. Was again landed as A.D.C. to Captain Lushington, commanding the Naval Brigade; was engaged at battle of Inkerman, and had charge of rocket party. Was present at attack on the Redan, mentioned four times in despatches, served at the taking of Kinburn in H.M.S. ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The objects of the Company are to acquire freehold or long-leasehold property in the neighbourhood of the Parks and other desirable parts of the West End of London, suitable for the highest-class residential chambers, and (where necessary) to alter existing mansions, or to erect new buildings suitable for the purposes of the Company.

The inquiry which has sprung up for this description of dwellings has lately grown into something very like a pressing demand.

After considering various sites and buildings submitted, the following have been selected, not only on account of their exceptionally favourable situations, but also on account of their splendid capabilities for obtaining high rentals.

The properties are :—

1. A block of magnificent buildings at the corner of Green Street and Park Street, within a few yards of Park Lane and Hyde Park. Of the four mansions, one is already completed, and the other three will be ready for letting before the end of this year. By the acquisition of these mansions, the Company will at once enter upon an investment earning a large annual rental (see Surveyor's report). This property is held on 80 years' lease at a moderate ground-rent.

2. A site in Northumberland Avenue, facing the Hôtel Métropole. It appears from the report of the architect to whom the designs have been entrusted that arrangements for letting the latter can be made long before the building is completed. This property is held at an 80 years' lease from the Metropolitan Board of Works, with power to acquire the freehold at 25 years' purchase.

The Company's surveyors, Messrs. Jackson and Co., of Green Street, Mayfair, state in their report :—"Referring to your purchase of the block of mansions in Green Street, we congratulate your Company upon the acquisition of this really splendid property. Taking into consideration the space available, and bearing in mind the rentals asked and obtained for suites of rooms of a certain size in Mayfair, this building should yield a very handsome return to your Company. Each house contains five handsome floors, which at a small cost could be converted into five distinct flats, not including the top floor. These five flats should average at least £250 per annum, equal to £1,250, and the kitchens say £20 per annum each, giving a total of £1,350 per annum, or £5,400 for the building. We have not made any mention of premium, although we have no doubt that for the best floors a premium of say £100 could be obtained for a lease. We have under rather than over valued the property in the foregoing estimates."

As regards the Northumberland-Avenue property, the architect, Mr. G. D. Martin, reports as follows :—"I beg to enclose a tabulated statement of the rental value of the various lettings in the proposed building on this site, as represented in the plans now being prepared, amounting to £4,445."

It will thus be seen that at a low computation the gross revenue of the Company from these two properties alone is estimated by the before-named gentlemen, who are eminently fitted to judge of their value, at £9,845, and assuming that only £40,000 be raised on mortgage at 4 per cent., and making allowance for ground-rent, interest on mortgage and redemption, repairs, management, taxes, &c. (£6,055), an annual net income of £3,790 will remain, yielding considerably over 8 per cent. on the capital invested in respect of these properties, which dividend would be increased to over 10 per cent. in the event of £50,000 being raised on mortgage.

The difficulty of obtaining safe 5 per cent. investments is increasing from year to year, and with the sole exception of Consols, which now yields less than 3 per cent., and perhaps English Railway Debentures of the best class, which return less than 4 per cent., no safer investment than land and houses in the best part of the West End of London could possibly be found.

The majority of London Land and Building Companies pay between 6 and 12 per cent. annual dividends, though only earning the ordinary average rentals on houses, &c., while this Company will be in possession of properties commanding exceptionally high rentals, owing to the superior class of tenants with whom it will deal. Applications for tenancies from shareholders will receive the first consideration.

The only contract entered into by the Company through Gustavus Unger, as its trustee, is with the British and Foreign Contract Corporation (Limited), and it is dated October 15th, 1883 ; and two agreements, dated October 19, 1883, between C. Fish and the British and Foreign Contract Corporation (Limited), and October 31, 1883, between A. R. Jackson and the said Corporation.

Full Prospectuses and Forms of Application may be had at the Bankers, or Offices of the Company.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—RHEUMATISM and GOUT.—These purifying and soothing remedies demand the earnest attention of all persons liable to gout, sciatica, or other painful affections of the muscles, nerves, or joints. The Ointment should be applied after the affected parts have been patiently fomented with warm water, when the unguent should be diligently rubbed upon the adjacent skin, unless the friction should cause pain. Holloway's Pills should be simultaneously taken to reduce inflammation and to purify the blood. This treatment abates the violence and lessens the frequency of gout, rheumatism, and all spasmodic diseases, which spring from hereditary predisposition, or from any accidental weakness of constitution. This Ointment checks the local remedy. The Pills restore the vital powers.

As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose." OROIDE GOLD SCARF PINS, 2s 6d to 5s, post free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

From SYMES and Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Medical Hall, Simla, January 5, 1881. To J. T. DAVENPORT, Esq., 33 Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London.

Dear Sir,—We embrace this opportunity of congratulating you upon the wide-spread reputation this justly esteemed medicine, Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself, not only in Hindostan, but all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES and Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a Liquid Medicine which assuages Pain of every kind, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without Headache, and invigorates the Nervous System when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff), discovered a remedy to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE.

The General Board of Health, London, report that it acts as a charm, one dose generally sufficient.

Dr. Gibbon, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states:—"Two doses completely cured me of Diarrhœa."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

COUGHS, ASTHMA, COLDS,

BRONCHITIS,

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,

PALPITATION, HYSTERIA, and is the true Palliative in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,

TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

GREAT SPECIFIC for

DIARRHŒA,

CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.
The immense sale of this remedy has given rise to many unscrupulous imitations.

N.B.—Every bottle of genuine Chlorodyne bears on the Government stamp the name of the inventor,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE.

IT is no secret that the Sunday London paper which represents certain wealthy financiers in this country and elsewhere expresses the views and is under the direction of an able, consistent, and clamorous advocate for the virtual annexation of Egypt by Great Britain. He, perhaps, would repudiate the idea of annexation, and he would lay great stress on the merits of a Protectorate; but however specious the sophisms which could be formulated to establish the assertion that there was a difference, the difference to Egypt would not be substantial, and to Great Britain annexation would be as mischievous as a Protectorate would be dangerous. The Observer, in fact, desires that Egypt may be held by an army supported by the Navy of England, in order that a pack of bondholders and speculators may hunt their prey under cover of our flag. Egypt is their "wash-pot." It was, we hold now, as we did from the first, when the National party commenced to agitate against the foreign Directorate, an evil thing in itself, and a most dangerous course in its bearings on our general policy, to interfere at the bidding of France in the internal affairs of Egypt. It would have been quite possible to have accepted Arabi as the Minister called to the head of the State under the Khedive, and to have worked with him so as to have got rid of the Control, and to have inaugurated the reforms which are popularly supposed to be the outcome of our invasion of Egypt. But in opposition to the principles which have guided our statesmen in nearly every instance of the kind, we refused to recognise the peaceful and bloodless revolution at Cairo, and we demanded the disgrace and banishment of the idol of the army and the people of Egppt. The Bondholders must be protected to the uttermost farthing,—they must have their pound of flesh, let the patient die or live; that was our Shibboleth. See what has come of it! Does any one pretend to say that if Sir A. Colvin and Sir E. Malet had been instructed to recognise Arabi and his Ministry when the Khedive appointed them, and if they had notified the intention of the Government to give their moral support to any reasonable reforms and to the redress of well established grievances, whilst they were resolved to guard the interests of England, and to enforce respect for the international engagements of Egypt, the Arab Colonel would not have become our devoted friend? It may be asked of what use is it to go back to what might have been. The answer is easily given,—that we may take a warning from the past, and weigh the consequences of persisting in a policy which has placed us in the face of a great difficulty, and dragged us into complications with the founder of a new Mahommedan power under the Equator. The result of our violent declarations and demands regarding Arabi left him no alternative but to submit to disgrace and exile, or to fight for his own hand and for what he believed to be the cause of his country.

So when the Mahdi began his propaganda he was not molested, because Arabi could not and would not send any of his regulars up to the Soudan. He kept them all "to fight the English," who were, he foresaw, about to attack him. The Naval demonstration in Alexandria produced the irritation which vented itself in the horrible massacre of June 9, and as soon as the Khedive became the creature of the Infidel who was interfering with the National Government, in some sense a solidarity of views was established between the National party in Egypt Proper and the religious fanatics and slave-dealers in the Soudan. The Mahdi denounced the Khedive's Governor of the Soudan as the representative of an unfaithful Mahommedan Sovereign, and excited a real Jehad; and now we are in for an imbroglio of which no one can see the end, and which is certainly not to be remedied by the erection of a Church of England See in Central Africa! The situation is anything but agreeable or cheerful, and it may easily be made much worse.

THE Reorganisation of the Marine Forces has been a fertile subject of discussion for many years past; but up to the present, little or nothing has been done to place the corps upon a proper footing. The Egyptian Campaign gave the Marines the long wished-for opportunity of again acting in war in conjunction with their brethren of the Army, for the Marines are essentially soldiers, although their regular duty takes them on board ship. This, however, has never beeu recognised, and the Marines have, therefore, never enjoyed any of the advantages belonging to the Army, although their corps holds its place in the Army List. The brilliant, soldierly qualities evinced by all ranks of the Marine Forces in Egypt, raised them to the rank of public favourites. At the review of the troops returned from Egypt by her Majesty, the Marines received an ovation from their fellow-countrymen who lined the streets, and soon after the War Office decided to employ a certain number of Marine officers on the Staff of the Army. The fact was announced with a flourish of trumpets, but beyond this, the Marines have derived little, if any, benefit from the decision of the Military authorities. And yet, surely, so fine and useful a body of troops deserves better treatment. Though the Corps was recently honoured by the appointment of the Duke of Edinburgh to be Honorary Colonel, this confers no tangible benefit. Indeed, were we to believe certain of our contemporaries, the reverse would be thought. Only last week, a "Society journal" boldly asserted that his Royal Highness had sent invitations to regiments of the Army with whom he was not connected, for a ball at Eastwell Park, but that, although Honorary Colonel of the Royal Marines, by whom he has been entertained, he had neglected to send invitations to any Divisions of the Corps. The journal referred to then goes on to say that this sort of treatment of the Royal Marines is "a not quite friendly return for their courtesy to him. The slight on the Marines, which appears to have been made with much intention, is at the present moment exercising the Naval and Military world." This is not in accordance with the facts of the case, as the Naval and Military world would never have dreamt of putting such a construction on the omission to invite officers of the Royal Marines to what was in reality a family party. We have very high authority for asserting that nothing was ever farther from the thoughts of the Duke of Edinburgh, than to slight the gallant corps, for which he has ever entertained a strong partiality; and when the time comes, we do not doubt that the Royal Marines will find in their Honorary Colonel their best friend and supporter. The question is, what direction shall reform take? In what manner can the Royal Marines be reorganised, to their benefit and that of the country? No doubt, when these questions are officially put, the corps will find the advantage it derives from having the Duke of Edinburgh for their Honorary Colonel. In France, the Marines have this year been reorganised. There, one-tenth of all appointments in each grade of the Army is reserved for officers of the same rank serving in the Marines, who have fulfilled the following conditions. Should an officer be found unfit to serve abroad, owing to the state of his health, but able to serve at home, he is transferred to the Army. Six years' service in the Marines, including the regulation term of service abroad, also entitles an officer to be transferred to a Line battalion. The vacancies thus caused in the Marines are filled up by officers of the Line of the same rank who may volunteer for the service afloat, and by officers holding inferior rank in the Army who have been recommended for promotion, but for whom no vacancies exist in the Line. In default of the vacancies being filled up in this wise, they are to be filled by promotions made within the corps. Officers passing from the Marines to the Army, or vice versâ, retain their seniority in accordance with the dates of their commissions. Officers serving in the Marines, or who have been transferred to the Army, have the right to retire after twenty-five years' service, when six years thereof has been foreign service, with full allowances. To carry this reorganisation into effect, a law has been passed, and has received the approval of the President of the French Republic and the Minister of War. The military operations recently carried out by France abroad, and still being carried out, rendered such a reorganisation absolutely necessary. In this manner the French authorities hope that their Infanterie de Marine will cease to be a corps fermé, without in any way detracting from its existing esprit de corps, the French Marines retaining their own autonomy as much as do the Chasseurs-à-pied, the Zouaves, or the Tirailleurs Algérins, as also their own "glorious traditions." On the other hand, the reform is welcomed by the officers of the French Line, as it assures to them the opportunity of being able to serve abroad, and thereby earn a higher scale of retirement, while still leaving the power in their own hands of returning to the Army when they have seen enough foreign service. In France, it must be remembered, it is the Marines who supply garrisons for the Colonies, and not the Army, as in England. That the Marines cannot long remain in this country in their present anomalous position is certain. Public opinion and the feelings of the corps are in favour of reform. The reorganisation of the French Marines reopens the question,—Why not use the Royal Marines to garrison Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Hong Kong, and other Naval stations abroad, and thus release troops so badly wanted at present to do duty in India? Shall the Marine Artillery be done away with, or shall the Light Infantry be merged in the Artillery? Shall the Marine Forces remain under the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, or shall they be transferred to the War Office? These questions have been discussed at Whitehall, in Pall Mall, and throughout the services, and at present the answers, by common consent, remain in abeyance.

"IT would be impossible in any country but this!" said a vieux grognard at the Senior, on reading the appeal of General Codrington to the public to assist the Committee to put the graves of the British dead in the Crimea into a decent state of repair. "It would be utterly impossible!" Only £400 is needed to arrange the cemetery and provide water, &c., for its proper ordering, and this great nation, with its accumulated millions rolled up from all the corners of the world where her soldiers and sailors have protected her interests and honour, permits an appeal to be made to the pockets of her officers to preserve in a distant land the resting-places of those who fell in her cause in the field, or perished from neglect in the miserable winter of 1854! Shame! Surely the Duke of Cambridge should have influence enough, if no one else has, to press on the Government of the Queen the necessity of imitating the French and the Russians, and of treating the cemeteries in the Crimea as national monuments. If they do not, General Codrington's Committee will do their duty; but there are great and wealthy people whose grandeur and fortunes depend on the past sacrifices and present devotion of the services, who might be expected to undertake the charge.

WE have always said that officers of the Army have been, and are still, hardly dealt with, more especially those who entered the service under the old Purchase system. Not a day passes scarcely but some fresh hardship comes to light, and if we were to enumerate all those that have come to our personal knowledge, we should fill a good-sized volume of very painful reading. We will quote the most recent case that has come to our notice. An officer was promoted in July, 1881, to what is aptly called a "running Majority," on the understanding that by doing so he was in no way to suffer. The then Secretary of State for War, Mr. Childers, had said as much in the House of Commons, and there was a clause to the same effect in the Royal Warrant, as it was at first embodied. On the good faith of this, the officer took promotion; but the good faith was all on one side, for when this officer wanted to retire a few months ago, and claimed the rate of retired pay he would have been entitled to had he never taken promotion, namely, £298 a year, he was told that, having taken promotion, he came under fresh conditions, and that he would only receive £255, instead of £298. In the name of justice, he begged that his promotion might be cancelled, so that he might be allowed the higher rate of retired pay. Justice having no place at the War Office, his appeal was refused, as the Secretary of State for War, he was told, had decided that no promotion could be cancelled except within six months of the passing of the Royal Warrant, so this officer has lost £43 a year a life. We maintain that, when officers were promoted, the conditions upon which they took their promotion, and the penalties attached, should have been clearly pointed out to them, and our Secretary of State for War should not, upon his sole authority, give a ruling that materially affects the pay either of an officer or of a private soldier. If private firms were to conduct their business upon the same principles, they would very soon lose their credit.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh will not assume the command of the Channel Squadron until the latter end of December, hoisting his flag on board the Minotaur about December 17, and proceeding, with the Achilles in company, to join the squadron as soon as the repairs to the Minotaur and Achilles have been completed.

Rear-Admiral Wilson, second-in-command of the Channel Squadron, arrived at Portland, on Thursday, with the Agincourt, flagship, Northumberland, Sultan, and Neptune, the two latter ships having met the lee division in the Channel, The Squadron anchored in the Roads, and, according to present arrangements, will leave for Vigo on Tuesday next.

The change of flags in the Channel Squadron has already once necessitated its departure being postponed; and when everything is ready, even then but four ships will be able to take part in the cruise before Christmas, as the Achilles is having her stern tube relined, and the Minotaur has so much to be done to her to fit her for the reception of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, that neither of these two ships will be able to leave with the squadron. Why, then, hurry its departure? Surely those serving on board might be granted the boon of being allowed to spend their Christmas at home?

The Duke of Edinburgh has selected Commander L'Estrange to act as Commander of the Minotaur, and Captain Britten to act as Flag Captain when Captain Fellowes vacates that post next year, on the completion of the forthcoming cruise of the Channel Squadron.

Sir William Dowell has selected Captain Hugo L. Pearson to act as his Flag Captain on the China station.

Lord Northbrook has assured the country that the Admiralty are about "to move quickly." Certain it is, however, that events are moving more quickly than the Admiralty. The Channel Squadron is again required abroad to reinforce the Mediterranean Fleet, if necessary, and that at a time when officers and men have a right to expect to remain at home to spend their Christmas. Should untoward events happen, what have we left to defend our coasts and the English Channel? The Reserve Squadron, composed of obsolete ironclads! Under such circumstances, surely it is time the Admiralty did "move quickly," for the sooner every available modern ironclad at present afloat is completed, the better.

The Admiralty are, we understand, about to appoint Captain C. E. Domvile to command the Temeraire, Captain F. G. Bedford to the Monarch, Captain the Hon. R. Hare to the Valorous, and Captain W. Stewart to the Carysfort. Captain Bedford has only been employed once in his present rank, and that as Flag Captain. Captain R. H. Harris, to whose father the Navy is so deeply indebted, and who is personally one of the most able officers in the service, has this week been appointed to command the Malabar.

There is a rumour afloat at the Admiralty that H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh has selected Lieutenant Charles T. Gimlette, at present serving as supernumerary on board the Alexandra, to be his Flag Lieutenant on board the Minotaur.

The reorganisation of the Indian Marine is, we understand, nearly complete. A recent issue of the Gazette of India gives a gradation list of the officers, and a Circular notifying the rates of pay and allowances has been issued. The establishment will consist of eight Commanders, 32 first-grade officers, 19 second-grade officers, 13 third-grade officers, and 20 gunners. The maximum pay of Commanders will be 500 rupees per month, with command allowances up to 10 rupees. The Indian Marine vessels are to fly the blue ensign.

The scheme for the reorganisation of the Constructor's Department has received the final sanction of the Admiralty, but it will take no little time to get the scheme to work in the various Dockyards.

The promotion of Commander Johnstone, late Dryad, will be agreeable to the service and to the country generally, and will be regarded as a well-deserved mark of approbation for the manner in which he discharged very trying duties at a most critical time; and as the French were quite prepared to pay every honour to Admiral Pierre, had that gallant officer lived to receive tokens of official and popular approval from his countrymen, the French people must give us leave to testify our sense of the way in which Captain Johnstone discharged his trust at Madagascar.

That the rule of the road at sea can be improved no one denies. But the principal plans suggested by landsmen in the Daily Press are beyond a seaman's comprehension. True, the introduction of steam, the digging of the Suez Canal, and the construction of the fleet of "ditchers," have individually and collectively contributed in a great degree to that astounding falling-off in seamanship encountered in all grades of the Mercantile Marine. In the Navy, too, the substitution of steam for sail power has produced a class of seamen very different from those who fought at Trafalgar, or who handled the smart brigs on the African coast. Nevertheless, there are seamen of the present day competent enough to navigate ships upon the high seas and in narrow waters. The mistake often made is that of entrusting ships to incompetent men, so as to effect a saving of a few pounds in wages, and this mistake is not unfrequently the primary cause of collisions. No man would entrust his carriage and horses to be driven through the streets of London to any but an expert coachman, brought up, as it were, to the profession. Often is the remark heard from the inexperienced, "What on earth is he doing?" when the want of nerve and consequent indecision of the driver causes him to thus exclaim against the action of the perfect whip who knows what he is about, minds his own business, and drives straight. So it is at sea. The landsman or half-seaman who does not and cannot carry in his head the meaning of a ship's movements and their cause, "wonders what on earth she is doing," when he meets another ship at sea whose movements to a true seaman would be perfectly comprehensible, and would also be taken in at a glance, and it is during this moment of hesitation that all danger arises. This fact must be acknowledged. Nay, more, it must enter into all calculations when endeavouring to reform the rule of the road at sea. Recently a company has been formed to supply ships with electric ship-steering indicating lights for night and semaphores for day use, to work on the principle of railway signals. To us, the plan seems complicated. Why not simply flash the bow light as the helm is being moved to port or starboard? This could easily be done by electricity, and would obviate the multiplication of lights proposed in the new plan. Thus, for example, two ships meeting, and one observing the red light of the other to flash, would know at once that the helm of that ship was being put over to port. Or, say a green light is seen on the port bow. This would indicate that two vessels were steering to cross each other's bows, and so long as the green light of the one and the red light of the other remained steady, those on board both ships would know that neither was giving way; but as soon as the green or the red light begun to flash, that would be a signal to the other ship that the helm was being used on board the ship whose bow light was made to flash. That light flashed would indicate the nature of the helm given. With oil lamps this would be difficult. But as there is no reason why electric lighting should not be employed on board all steamers, the reform could be easily introduced.

The Russian Navy Estimates, which for the current year amount to 30,888,484 roubles (£5,000,000), are to be increased for the coming budget year to 39,151,799 roubles (£6,360,000), the addition being almost exclusively set aside for the construction of new ships.

We have been favoured with a copy of "The Military Journal of Colonel de St. Pierre (1st Royal Dragoons), and other manuscripts relating to the War of the Succession in Spain, from 1703 to 1713." These valuable papers were contributed to the Royal Engineers' Journal by Major-General E. R. James, R.E., by whom they have been reprinted. Colonel de St. Pierre's journal was discovered "among the mutilated and faded remains of a dusty collection of manuscripts," and was deciphered with much difficulty. The information thus unexpectedly obtained is incomplete, and even fragmentary in some parts, yet it has a special value, because our sources of knowledge of the events to which chiefly the journal refers are few and meagre. General James has added many critical and explanatory passages, but he has not lessened the authenticity of his documents by any alterations, for he gives them literatim. Colonel de St. Pierre's narrative agrees in all important points with the "Memoirs of Captain George Carleton," and goes far towards establishing the genuineness of the latter work, which was discredited by the opinion entertained by many that it was edited by Defoe, if it were not altogether written by him. Lockhart, in his "Life of Sir Walter Scott," attributes the work to Defoe. Lord Mahon, on the other hand, in his "War of the Succession in Spain," treats it as undoubtedly genuine and authentic. The book we are reviewing does not present many attractions to the casual reader; but, to the careful student of the strange and eventful course of the campaigns in Spain at the beginning of the last century, its value can hardly be over-estimated. The history of the 1st Royal Dragoons begins with its share in the defence of Tanjier, from 1661 to 1683. During that long period it was known as the "Tanjier Horse," or the "Tanjier Cuirassiers," and, first as a single troop, afterwards as four troops, it took a prominent part in many a desperate encounter with the Moors. Whenever a worthy record of the eminent services of this regiment shall be written, the journal of Colonel de St. Pierre will be of great use, for it fills up some gaps, just where other sources of information are almost or entirely wanting.

Memo. upon the present state of affairs in Egypt, consequent upon the defeat of Colonel Hicks' Army:—

November 25, 1883.

The line of communication between Khartoum and Suakim no longer exists.

The soldiers, if they can be so called, and the people of Khartoum would join the Mahdi, should he advance. With Khartoum would fall Senaar and all the provinces south-east and west, with their garrisons.

The revenue received from the Soudan would cease, and all expenses would fall upon Egypt Proper.

No remarks are necessary upon the ill-fated march to Obeid, more than that, in case of defeat, the position of Khartoum should have been secured.

Should Khartoum fall, there would be no object in defending any position south of Assouan, the more especially as the Nubian and the Bahluda deserts lie between Khartoum and Assouan.

Assouan being within the limits of Lower Egypt, the objection to employing Sir Evelyn Wood's forces in defensive operations would cease. That force, therefore, should be moved to Assouan for its defence. It could readily be transported to Siout by rail, and thence by steamers.

The British garrisons in Cairo and Alexandria would preserve order there.

With regard to offensive operations, the White Nile should be secured to where the Sinbat River enters it. This would be the western frontier. A line running north-west from this point to the Abyssinian territory, and then along that frontier until it reaches the Red Sea at Mansourah, would bound it on the south and south-east.

There are two ways of securing this object. First, for Turkey to take the initiative; second, for England to do so.

In the event of the latter, 6,000 native infantry, two regiments of native cavalry, and the Aden troops should be landed at Kossier, and move across to Keneh, on the Nile, in the same way as Sir David Baird's force did in 1802. The distance is 120 miles, which could be covered in eight marches. (See "Annual Register," 1802, p. 814.)

The force could be moved to Assouan, whence active offensive operations could commence.

There is a great deal being written about gunnery just now, both in France and Germany,—heavy pieces, field-pieces, &c. There are several reasons for this, as we find explained in an article in the Progrès Militaire to this effect:—"It is a question to-day of augmenting the number of field-pieces. Germany intends augmenting hers, and advises Italy to do the same. This is warning to those persons who, when the fortress artillery was created, wished to sacrifice one or two field batteries per regiment [by way of economy]. Those gentlemen can perceive to-day that their opinions are not shared by the Germans." After some further remarks, the Progrès makes the following quotation from the Cologne Gazette:—"Before the war, the French Artillery was organised in such a manner that at the breaking-out of hostilities it placed in line 600 pieces less than the German Artillery. Now it is precisely the contrary, and if France were to mobilise, she would have ready for service immediately 2,622 guns, while Germany would take the field with only 2,040. Germany, it is true, would at the same time prepare the formation of reserve batteries; but nothing would prevent France from doing the same, and it would even be easier for her to do this, since her batteries have a larger peace establishment than those of the Germans." Ergo the Cologne Gazette insists upon the immediate augmentation of the German Artillery. The paper in question appears to think, however, that inferiority in number may be compensated for by superiority in manœuvring. Now the Progrès Militaire doubts this, for the following reasons:—"Skill in manœuvring depends on the training of drivers and horses, and the feeble effective of the peace establishment of the German batteries renders it very difficult for them to arrive at this result. In time of peace, their batteries have only four guns and 44 horses, and when they pass to a war-footing it is impossible, with the best will in the world, to train requisition horses in a day and bring them up to the mark. In this matter the superiority of the French Artillery is clear, since each battery is provided with 60 horses in time of peace. The French Artillery should, therefore, on taking the field, exhibit superior manœuvring qualities, because all the guns could be provided, on the first day of mobilisation, with horses thoroughly broken in. Such being the case, the Germans, instead of increasing the number of their guns, are intent upon increasing the peace establishment of their horses. The commander of a battery, who would have to operate with three sections on the field of battle, has only two with which to manœuvre in time of peace. This is certainly a serious consideration, especially when applied to horse artillery destined to accompany cavalry divisions, and which ought to be ready to take the field at the first signal. France and Russia have long understood this, and all their cavalry divisions are provided with batteries of horse artillery ready to march, while in Germany this is the case with two batteries only. The Germans, too, remark with regard to Russia that that Power has 400 guns more than they have, without counting 36 batteries of reserve already existing in time of peace, and which represent 288 guns, the Russian field batteries being composed of eight pieces." The Progrès Militaire says that France must not be astonished to see Germany increase her artillery, and Italy follow in the wake of her peaceful neighbour, and expresses the hope that France will not lose her present superiority. In another column, the Progrès Militaire complains that a committee which has been sitting for three years, has not yet been able to come to a decision with regard to the gun-carriages to be used in the fortress artillery. The difficulty appears to lie in a selection between two carriages, one which is very heavy and which stands work, and the other which is light, but can ill resist prolonged firing. The Progrès suggests that the committee might either lighten the former or strengthen the latter, adding that unless it decides quickly, one way or the other, the War Minister will take the matter into his own hands. What would Hotspur's popinjay, who exclaimed,—

"And but for these vile guns
He would himself have been a soldier," say, could he revisit the glimpses of the moon, and see all our modern artillery?

IMPROVED TORPEDO TRAINING OF SEAMEN.

The Admiralty, "considering it desirable that instruction in the Torpedo School should form an essential portion of the course for all seamen gunners," have issued a Fleet Circular, dated Nov. 16, which directs that,—1. Every seaman gunner on requalifying, and every seaman in future desirous of qualifying in a gunnery school, will also be required to go through a course of torpedo instruction in a torpedo school before being available for draft for service afloat. 2. The gunnery course for qualifying and requalifying in the gunnery-ship is to remain as at present. 3. The time under torpedo instruction, including examination, will be 60 working days. 4. On completing the gunnery and torpedo course, men will be classified and rated as follows:—1st class in gunnery and 1st class in torpedo, S.G.T. 1st class, with pay of 6d. per diem; 1st class in gunnery and 2nd class in torpedo, or 2nd class in gunnery and 1st class in torpedo, S.G.T. 2nd class, 4d. per diem; 2nd class in gunnery and 2nd class in torpedo, S.G.T. 3rd class, 2d. per diem. 5. The present seamen gunners requalifying, and men qualifying for seaman gunner at the date of this Order, will be rated 1st or 2nd class S.G., according to their qualifications, when they have completed their gunnery course. They must then go through the torpedo course. If 1st-class seamen gunners are unable to qualify as S.G.T. 2nd class, or 2nd-class seamen gunners as S.G.T. 3rd class, they will revert to their previous pay and rating as S.G., but will lose the qualification of T.O., if obtained under the old system. The Circular sets forth in detail the qualification, rates of pay, rating, &c., of the seamen, &c. It provides that, on the completion of the course, men recommended will be allowed, subject to such limitations in respect of numbers as may be laid down, the option of selecting whether they will qualify for higher rating in gunnery or in torpedo.

THE BRITISH ARMY IN EGYPT.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

Cairo, November 16, 1883.

There have been no deaths during the current week. The entries into hospital were 98.

Leave of absence in extension has been granted to Lieutenant T. F. Kennedy, Royal Highlanders, from December 1 to 14; Lieutenant G. C. Baker, King's Royal Rifles, from December 1 to 31; Captain Campbell, Royal Sussex Regiment, from January 1 to February 7, 1884.

Colonel Elliot, commanding R.A., will leave for England by the first available passenger steamer, and Captain H. G. Newcome, Adjutant R.A., will accompany him,—the latter with a view to taking up his appointment as Brigade-Major R.A., South-Eastern District.

The 19th Hussars will leave speedily.

Generals Earle and Sir Gerald Graham will probably go home, and the command remain with General Stephenson, General Dormer being second in command.

Yesterday an exciting polo match, between the Army of Occupation and the Egyptian Army, resulted in a victory for the latter.

Brigadier Arbuthnot, at present in England, will not return to Egypt, but proceeds to take up his command in Malta shortly.

The weekly state of the Army in Egypt on November 16 was:—

Cairo:—

NOTES FROM ALDERSHOT.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

"Military training," musketry instruction, route-marching, and "mud-larking" in Scroggs's Bottom, under the Camp Quartermaster, are the only noteworthy military incidents of the week. The latter permanent "fatigue," which is in reality an attempt to reclaim a vast extent of bog-land—a work which should be carried out by the Royal Engineer Department—is exceedingly unpopular.

The 73rd Highlanders arrive from Portsmouth on Tuesday next. There has been no Highland regiment at Aldershot since the 42nd vacated the same lines in the South Camp that their 2nd Battalion takes over, in 1880. There are at present only two battalions in the 1st Brigade, which is so reduced in numbers as to be barely able to furnish the ordinary garrison fatigues, guards, &c.

Two dramatic performances were given by the Officers' Divisional Dramatic Society on Wednesday and Thursday. The great success of these performances is mainly due to the untiring energy of the stage manager, Captain Griffiths, R.A.

Lieutenants Buckley and Paget, Royal Artillery, have been examined in subjects (a) and (b) for promotion, and have been found qualified.

The sentences of two general courts-martial were made known during the week. Private Whittaker, 31st Regiment, for fraudulent enlistment, and Private Clews, 84th Regiment, for striking his superior officer, were each sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour, and to be discharged the service with ignominy.

In consequence of what has recently been brought to light, it has been found necessary to notify in Divisional Orders, that all officers not belonging to regiments or corps having Veterinary-Surgeons attached, having horses occupying Government stables, will at once apply to the Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeon for veterinary assistance in the event of their horses developing symptoms of a suspicious nature.

The confidential reports of General Officers commanding Brigades, and the confidential reports on General and Staff Officers, with the service completed to the 30th ult., have been ordered to be sent to the Assistant-Adjutant-General of the Division by the 20th inst.

Veterinary-Surgeon W. Gladstone, R.A., has been ordered to Norwich, to join the 4th Hussars.

Lieutenant Grant, R.H.A., has been ordered from Woolwich to Aldershot.

THE NIGER EXPEDITION.

On October 21, her Majesty's ships Alecto, Flirt, and Starling, with six officers and about 90 seamen and Marines from the Opal, steamed up the River Niger, to demand satisfaction from the natives of the towns of Idda and Abo for outrages committed by them against the employés of the National African Company. Captain Brooke, of the Opal, was in command, on board the Alecto. We were accompanied by the company's steamer, Boussa, a curious boat, built by Shuttleworth, on the Thames, especially for the River Niger. She is capable of carrying about 300 tons of cargo with an extreme draught of 3 ft., and a speed of over 10 knots. and is propelled by two stern wheels, driven by two locomotive engines on deck. We reached Idda just after dark on the evening of October 24. It is about 220 miles from the mouth of the river, a picturesque town, covering the slope of a hill, with perpendicular cliffs facing the river, about 150 ft. high, the houses built of clay and thatched, with palm trees here and there scattered amongst them The natives here had killed two Kroomen in the employ of the National African Company, and flogged a son of the Missionary Bishop Crowther, and kept him a prisoner for some days. The chiefs having consented to attend a palaver in the Factory, Captain Brooke and Commander Hammick, of H.M.S. Flirt, landed the following morning for that purpose, with a guard of men. The guard, however, did not land, but was kept well under cover on board the steamer Boussa, which lay alongside the bank opposite the factory. The attitude of the natives during the palaver was very menacing. They collected in hundreds near the factory, armed with muskets, bows, and knives, shouting war-cries, and dancing in a most grotesque and threatening way. The palaver having lasted about an hour, and there being no hopes of a satisfactory result, our party returned, and about two hours after we commenced to shell the town, which was soon fired in two or three places. Later in the day a party of small-arm men and Marines, under Commander Hammick, landed unopposed, and burnt the remaining houses on the river side of the hill, and the canoes at the landing-place. They did not, however, go far, and a large portion of the town on the far side of the hill was left untouched. We fired a shell every half-hour during the night, to prevent the natives coming to sack the factory, which was vacated before the firing commenced; and the next day the Boussa, protected by a party of Marines, ran alongside and cleared it out, removing one of the iron sheds. It was considered that sufficient punishment had been administered to the natives, so nothing more was done in that way. On the morning of the 27th, we left on our return down the river, and came to at Abo in the evening. Here the natives had been guilty of flogging one of the National African Company's servants and threatening to destroy their factory. On the day after our arrival, the King and all the chiefs, with the exception of one, came on board the Alecto, to a palaver, which ended satisfactorily. The refractory chief, who was a rival of the King's, and had been giving him some trouble, sent a message to say that not only would he not come on board, but that if we came on shore to see him he would fight us. He was informed that if he did not retract this before the following morning, his town would be burnt down. As he made no sign, the next day we prepared to attack. Abo is a very large town, consisting of a succession of villages, intersected by small creeks, with a frontage on the river of about two miles. A bank is thrown up by the river, with openings here and there, about 800 yards from the true bank, on which the town stands, and runs parallel with it from end to end. The ships could not, on account of this, get nearer than 1,100 yards, when they commenced shelling the warlike chief's part of the town, which consisted of about a quarter of a mile frontage on the extreme left. After a time, all boats were manned and armed, and, under the command of Commander Hammick, proceeded for the shore. Before landing, a very heavy fire was opened from our boats with a rocket, Gatlings, &c., as the bush was very thick along the bank, and not much could be seen of the houses. The natives fired on the boats with small guns (about 9-pounders) and muskets. Having silenced their fire, our men landed at different points, and soon the work of destruction began. The natives were lurking about in numbers, in spite of the heavy fire they had received, and it was regular bush-fighting, as one could not see many yards in any direction. The town was effectually destroyed, but, I regret to say, not without loss on our side. Our casualties were:—Killed: H. Lovell, A.B., and H. Birch, gunner, R.M.A., H.M.S. Opal. Wounded: Mr. E. Hay, midshipman, severely; G. Evans, gunner, R.M.A., since dead, H.M.S. Opal. R. Brown, private, R.M.L.I., slightly, H.M.S. Alecto. The Flirt left to go out of the river with the wounded immediately after the action, and the Alecto and Starling shortly after, all reaching the outer anchorage on October 30.

The list of applications for shares in the Mayfair Mansions Company, Limited, will close on Monday next, Dec. 3, for London, and on Tuesday, the 4th, for the country.

A History of the Knights of Malta. By General Whitworth Porter, R.E. (Longman and Co.) [Concluded.]

In the second chapter of this volume will be found a masterly description of one of the most important military operations of the period,—the battle of "Tiberius," which was followed by the loss of Jerusalem. This event occurred in October, 1187, after a resistance of fourteen days; and so we see that after having, at a great sacrifice, been rescued from the domination of the Turk, and having continued for a period of 88 years to be the seat of government of a Christian kingdom, it once more falls into the hands of the Moslem, from whom no succeeding efforts were able permanently to wrest it. The author of this work bears high testimony to the noble conduct of Saladin, the conqueror of Jerusalem. Instead of enacting scenes of carnage, he took every precaution that no license should be permitted. He allowed the military, the nobles, and all who had borne arms to proceed to Tyre, and he fixed the ransom of the civil population of the town at the rate of ten crowns per man, failing the payment of which they were to become slaves. He also permitted ten of the fraternity of the Hospital to remain for a limited period within the city, in order to complete the cure of the sick who were under their charge, and not in a state to undergo immediate removal. Some of the most interesting chapters in the book are those which relate to the siege of Malta and the general exultation which welcomed its gallant defenders. "Europe had looked on with breathless interest while the siege had been going forward. From time to time, as intelligence was brought of the continued maintenance of the fortress, a loud acclaim would arise, while prayers were offered in many a Christian congregation for the success of the Cross against the Crescent. When at last it became known that success had indeed been assured, the universal exultation knew no bounds." A special messenger from the King of Spain bore to La Valette presents of great value, and special marks of favour were lavished on him, at all sides. At this moment, however, the position of the Order was critical in the extreme, and La Valette at once turned his attention to endeavouring to improve the state of the island. The fortifications were more or less in ruins, the arsenals and store-houses empty, the treasury exhausted, and the ranks of the fraternity so fearfully diminished, that an adequate garrison could not be provided even though the fortress had been in a proper state of defence. At this supreme moment there were divided counsels as to what course should be adopted. By many the abandonment of the island and a departure to Sicily were pressed with great earnestness, but La Valette spurned such suggestions, and calmly said that as for him, he had resolved to bury himself beneath the ruins he had so successfully defended rather than permit them tamely to fall into the hands of the infidel. The same strong will and inflexible determination which La Valette possessed once more gained the day. A decree went forth that they should stand or fall in the defence of the island where they had already achieved such brilliant success. At this period of his narrative, the author refers to a circumstance which may be regarded as a matter of history. The crisis already mentioned was imminent. Solyman was hurrying on huge undertakings for the purpose of recapturing Malta. La Valette had no forces to oppose him, and was obliged to resort to stratagem. Large stores of gunpowder had been accumulated for the purposes of this expedition. By the good offices of a band of spies, who undertook to cause the grand arsenal of Constantinople to be destroyed by fire, an explosion took place, which utterly wrecked the dockyard and the fleet which was being equipped within it, thus putting a complete stop to the undertaking, and rendering for the present any renewal of the attempt impossible. It appears not only improbable, but absurd, to suppose that the blow thus struck by La Valette was one contrary to the usages of war. Every hour rendered his position worse. Solyman made no secret of his own intentions, and yet there are some writers who, when narrating this momentous event, consider themselves justified in offering excuses for the boldness, military skill, and dexterity with which La Valette's conceptions were realised. In the twenty-second chapter, some interesting details are ntroduced regarding the langue of England. About 1101 was the year in which was founded the House and Hospital of St. John, of Clerkenwell. Clerkenwell was at that time a short distance from London, and quite suburban. In the reign of Henry II., Fitz-Stephen writes of it "as having fields of pasture, and a delightful plain of meadow-land, interspersed with flowing streams, on which stand mills, whose clack is very pleasing to the ear." It appears that the Sisters of the Order were established at Bucklands, in Somersetshire. They numbered fifty, and were entitled to the services of a brother of the Order to act as seneschal, two chaplains, and a lay assistant for their churches. The establishment was suppressed by Henry VIII., and its lands granted to the Earl of Essex and James Rockby. The Order was first introduced in Ireland through the liberality of the Earl of Pembroke, who endowed them with a priory at Kilmainham, near Dublin. The priory of Clerkenwell went on bravely, and accumulated property till the insurrection of Wat Tyler, in 1381, who destroyed it, and the Hospital of Rhodes. The History of the Knights of Malta is a work of exceptional interest, and its author deserves the highest credit for the manner in which he has produced it. It must have required a lengthened research on his part to enable him to collect and arrange in proper order so vast a quantity of matter as is contained in this volume, now published by Longmans and Co. The heroic character of the incidents narrated, and of the people who are introduced so profusely, offer special attraction to such readers as like to hear of gallant deeds and to admire princely natures.

The Illustrated London News' Christmas number cannot be beaten by the best of its excellent rivals. When we think of the old-fashioned annuals published at a guinea and upwards, with their steely-steel plates of "beauty," copies of pictures, middling vignettes, and Haynes-Bayley poems, and turn to such a shilling'sworth as we have now before us, we are inclined to regret we cannot make the present generation go back to the time of their grandfathers and grandmothers that they may see how much they have to be thankful for that they were kept back for these times of electric lighting, express travelling, cheap and admirable literature, and endless means of amusement, within the reach of moderately filled pockets. From the outer cover, with the charming girl in the sleigh, who certainly ought to be "a muffin," to the end, the number teems with woodcuts in the finest style of art, each well worthy of a frame and glass to itself. "The Christmas Dinner Notes," &c., are admirable, and "The Interrupted Ghost Story" alone is worth ten times the price of the whole number. As to "Mliss," from a painting by Edwin Long, we can only say a more dangerous lady, to find a word, we have not seen for many a day.

Vanity Fair winter number is very original and very clever. The Cabinet Council picture reflects credit on the artist and on his imagination, and the likenesses are generally good all round.

The Christmas number of Life, an exceedingly good shillingsworth,—in fact, but for the advertisements, which detract, we must say, from the style of the annual, it would be impossible to produce such a work, no matter how great the sale, without loss. There is a "picture in 16 colours, the 'Junior Member of the Coaching Club,' by J. M. Topling," given with the number, which is well and expensively illustrated, and contains many articles in prose and verse, an illustrated calendar, original music, &c., "Such is Life!"

Mr. Wyld is always well abreast, if not ahead, of the public views in the matter of maps, and the eminent geographer and publisher has issued a clear and excellent map of Tonquin and Anam, and another of the Mahdi's territory, pro tem, just in the nick of time.

Mr. Arthur Bare has written a lively waltz, "Au Revoir," which he calls, with reason, "Valse Brillante," and which would, it strikes me, suit a military band very well. The bandmasters might try, at all events. It is published by Weekes and Co., Hanover Street, Regent Street.

BARRACK DAMAGES.

Sir,—It is to be hoped that the remarks in your article of the 10th ult., relative to "Barrack Damages," may have the effect of rousing the authorities to inquire into the matter, so as to rectify the present gross scandal, and, I may say, fraud. After nearly 30 years' experience, I am sorry to say, I can fully vouch for the truth and accuracy of all you stated, and it certainly is a grievance that should be forthwith rectified. But the unfortunate British soldier has no redress; he is simply charged in his pay-book so much barrack damages—he knows not what for, nor is he ever told. When barracks are given over, this duty is generally performed by some young, inexperienced officer, who is accompanied by the quartermaster and quartermaster-serjeant, who make notes of what they think damages, and who, in turn, give these notes to the taking-over party. Charges are made, repairs never, and there the matter ends. One regiment marches out, the other comes in the same day; so that there is no time for the damages and repairs to be made good. Where the money collected goes to, how and by whom expended, is a mystery. What should be done, is this,—the same party who take over the barracks should go round, say, a month afterwards, and certify to the commanding officer that the repairs have actually been made. As things now are, it is a most infamous imposition, both on officers and men. I fear, however, that our only General has so much to occupy him, that the trifle of the comfort of officers and men compelled to exist in the wretched huts (which have been paid for over and over again) is beneath his notice; yet he might do something, if so disposed. At any rate, I trust you have done good service in opening up the question of barrack damages, repairs, state of huts, and barracks generally.—I am, &c.,

Veritas.

"A Sufferer" writes:—"It is stated, on good authority, that an officer holding a civil appointment in Cyprus, but now returning to his regiment, is to be accommodated with a billet in the 2nd battalion, as there is not at present a vacancy for him in his own, the 1st battalion of the regiment. I should like to know why this officer cannot wait till he can find a place in his own regiment, instead of being shoved into another, and thereby stopping the promotion of all below him. It is scarcely encouraging, when subalterns who have been working hard, and doing their best to pass these absurd examinations to qualify for their companies, suddenly find a man, in no way entitled to do so, absorbing the step to which they have so long been looking forward. It was always understood that under the great 'Territorial scheme,' different battalions of regiments were not to be thus muddled up for seven years from the time of its commencement."

NAVAL NOTES.

It has been tolerably well known for years that the instruments supplied to the Admiralty for directing the fire of concentrated broadsides are not reliable, the application of a "personal adjustment" by the gunnery lieutenant being almost invariably necessary to insure anything approaching to uniformity in results. A testing table has recently been fitted in the college at Portsmouth, on which each director can be placed and laid for certain marks, which have been fixed by means of a theodolite. The discrepancies between the various instruments tested by this process are, we believe, remarkable, amounting in some instances to nearly a degree in elevation; while, by way of further complicating matters, there is in not a few directors, a perceptible difference caused in the vertical angle by the very simple process of clamping the radial arm, which is apparently pivotted on a slightly inclined axis, and so can only touch the arc, without the application of undue pressure at one point. It is evident that the people to whom the manufacture of these instruments is entrusted are not sufficiently impressed with the importance of absolute accuracy in the mechanism; they would, no doubt, be surprised to hear that an error of half a degree might not unfrequently cause a difference in range of 300 yards or more. It is to be hoped that immediate steps will be taken to remedy all this, as we certainly cannot as yet dispense with the director in action, when such errors as the above might obviously lead to disaster. It would be well also to look to the fittings for mounting the director on the broadside, which, for such a professedly delicate instrument, are of a somewhat "rough-and-ready" description.

The seamen belonging to the Channel Squadron landed on Friday, to take part in a review on Southsea Common. Two field-pieces from the Minotaur and the Sultan, as well as 250 men from each ship, were landed. The force was under the command of Vice-Admiral Sir W. M. Dowell, K.C.B., commanding the Squadron. Admiral Dowell's time is up in April, as he will then have commanded the Fleet for two years, and it is possible that this is also the last cruise of the present ships which have for so many years figured as the Channel Fleet, but which has become latterly, from the obsolete type of the majority of the ships composing it, merely what Lord Northbrook describes it—a training and evolutionary squadron. There is a general consensus of opinion in Naval circles that this is not what our Channel Fleet should be, and that it does not meet either of the requirements of such a fleet, viz., seamanship or gunnery. As regards seamanship, there is a diversity of rigs, and as the ships cannot be handled under sail, it merely amounts to the practice of setting and taking in sail, and certain set evolutions which form but a part of the art of seamanship, the principal thing to be learnt being how to handle the ship under sail. As steamships, they are unhandy and expensive as compared with more modern vessels. As regards gunnery, they give no practical insight into the management of the class of weapons that their crews would be called upon to use in the vessels they would be turned over to in case of war, and, although it is said that a crew could gain sufficient insight into the working of a turret-ship in six weeks to make them thoroughly efficient, it is very doubtful whether either officers or men could in that time learn to develop the full capabilities of the machine entrusted to their care. The vessels of which a new Channel fleet would be composed are more or less untried vessels—certainly in the matter of manœuvring together—and the steering powers of two of those that might belong to it give cause for anxiety, viz., the Ajax and Agamemnon, although it is evident that experience would in a great measure overcome this. It was not until after the former had got into dock, after being out on her trial trip from Chatham, that it was found that her rudder-head had been wrung, the powerful steam steering gear giving no indication of any difference of resistance.—Western Daily Mercury.

The advisability of building vessels for purposes of coast defence alone has received attention in certain quarters, and a service contemporary has taken upon itself to rigidly define the type of ship required for this special defence, though it has, in so doing, followed in the line of naval officers and naval architects of recognised authority. They are to be mastless, to have a draught of water not exceeding 24 ft., to be of great structural strength and unsinkable, and armed with the most powerful guns. They are, in short, to be floating citadels, in which evolutions aloft would be impossible, and everything would be subordinated to the science of naval gunnery. There is certainly one thing to be said about the annual cruise of the Coastguardsmen, that it is not turned to the fullest possible advantage, for these "old, well-drilled men-of-war's men" do not profit by exercises aloft.—Portsmouth Times.

The condemned boilers of the torpedo-ram Polyphemus are to be taken out by the displacement of her upper works, and not by cutting open her sides, as was originally contemplated by the authorities of Chatham Yard. This will necessitate such an extensive opening up of the ship, that it is probable her crew will either be paid off or hulked during the time she is in dock.—Portsmouth Times.

HOW TO AVOID THE INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF STIMULANTS. —The present system of living—partaking of too rich foods, as pastry saccharine and fatty substances, alcoholic drinks, and an insufficient amount of exercise—frequently deranges the liver. I would advise all bilious people, unless they are careful to keep the liver acting freely, to exercise great care in the use of alcoholic drinks, avoid sugar, and always dilute largely with water. Experience shows that porter, mild ales, port wine, dark sherries, sweet champagne, liqueurs, and brandies, are all very apt to disagree; while light white wines, and gin or old whisky largely diluted with soda water, will be found the least objectionable. Eno's Fruit Salt is peculiarly adapted for any constitutional weakness of the liver; it possesses the powers of reparation when digestion has been disturbed or lost, and places the invalid on the right track to health. A world of woes is avoided by those who keep and use Eno's Fruit Salt, therefore no family should ever be without it. CAUTION.—Legal Rights are protected in every Civilised Country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "Eno's Fruit Salt." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions, in Sixteen Languages, how to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at Eno's Fruit Salt Works, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C. Eno's Patent.

BRITISH GRAVES IN THE CRIMEA.

SIR,—The account of the proceedings of the Crimean Cemeteries' Committee may be of interest to your readers in England and abroad, if you will kindly publish the following summary in reference to the advertisement which appears in your columns. Authority was given to Capt. Harford, British Vice-Consul at Sevastopol, to enter into a contract with Mr. Drunert for the enclosure of additional ground at Cathcart's Hill, given by the Russian Government, for raising the former wall to the same height—viz., 6 ft.—as the new wall, for the collection and removal to Cathcart's Hill of the memorials and tombstones from the eleven scattered cemeteries, and their proper replacement in that one cemetery, and for restoring the surface of the disused cemeteries to its former natural state and level. The work was begun in June, and carried out under the direct control and supervision on the spot of Capt. Harford and Lieut.-Gen. James Conolly, C.B., to whom the subscribers owe a debt of gratitude for their active and kindly attention. A full report has been sent home by Capt. Harford, giving details of expenditure, and of the position of all the monuments on Cathcart's Hill. This report will hereafter be placed before the subscribers and the Government. The amount of subscriptions has been £1,543. The expenditure to this date leaves about £100 in hand. But there is the question of planting trees, making walks, and other arrangements. The Committee make an earnest appeal for an additional £300 or £400 for these services, before calling a general meeting to receive their written and final report. Contributions may be sent to Messrs. Cox and Co., Craig's Court; or to the Treasurer, Col. Haygarth, 24 Wilton Crescent.—I am, &c., W. J. CODRINGTON, General,
Chairman of Committee.

Mr. E. Preston remarks:—"I see that the chairman of the Crimean Cemeteries Committee is soliciting subscriptions for keeping up the graves of our soldiers who fell in the Russian War. I venture to think that this is an object which the Government might gracefully take out of private hands. It may not be generally known, but it is nevertheless the fact, that the State has appropriated (pursuant to Act of Parliament) nearly £700,000 of the unclaimed Army prize-money and accumulations towards keeping up Chelsea Hospital and grounds, &c., and that a sum of £75,000 is set apart to meet anticipated claims on the unclaimed balance. The 'anticipated claims' are very small, owing to the scant publicity afforded as to unclaimed Army prize-money. Surely the Government might grant the necessary funds for keeping up the Crimean Cemeteries from the unclaimed Army prize-money, and thus avoid the necessity of further appeals to the public."

THE WAR-GAME MODELS.

SIR,—I should be glad if you would afford me space for a few lines in reply to your article of Oct. 27, on the so-called "invention" of Lieut.-Col. Prior, for the short paragraph inserted in your issue of the 3rd inst. does only partial justice to Lieut.-Col. Shaw; and I see that in a later number of your paper (the 17th inst.) you speak of the model game as introduced by Lieut.-Col. Prior. Having received great assistance from Lieut.-Col. (then Major) Wilkinson Shaw in the years 1879 and 1880, whilst making a model at Chatham on his system, and in starting minor war-games on it, I am in a position to say that everything which you ascribe to Lieut.-Col. Prior belongs really to Major Shaw. Major Shaw delivered an opening lecture, at my request, on the completion of our model at Chatham, and described fully the mode of using it. He also very kindly gave me every assistance in his power in starting minor war-games on it, sending me a number of schemes for games; and I have in my possession the journals of games played on it long before Lieut.-Col. Prior relieved Major Shaw of the duties of garrison instructor at Aldershot. Credit is undoubtedly due to Lieut.-Col. Prior for his energy in carrying on the game at Aldershot, in succession to Major Shaw, with the support of Gen. Sir Daniel Lysons, who made it a divisional duty; but as there is nothing original in his method, I am sure that Col. Prior would be the last to wish that Major Shaw should be deprived of the credit due to him for originating both the model and the mode of using it.—I am, &c., H. HELSHAM JONES, Lieut.-Col., R.E.,
(Late Instructor in Tactics at Chatham).

EPAULETTES.

"Common-sense" (a distinguished officer who has a right to sign himself so) writes:—"In the Army and Navy Gazette of Nov. 24, it is stated that epaulettes are to be revived in the Army, to give the dress a smart appearance. Will you allow me to suggest that they can also be made useful as well as smart. Some time ago, being at Cherbourg, I inquired of an officer of the Army why epaulettes were continued in the French Army, and he gave me a very sensible reason, viz., that the straps of the pack were passed over them, thereby preventing the straps from cutting into the men's shoulders, and made the pack much more easy to carry. This plan would be well worth trying. The first thing our men do when ordered to 'stand at ease' is to put their thumbs under the straps and hitch them up, to relieve their shoulders. The system I suggest would render this unnecessary. It is to be hoped the Committee on Active Service Dress will improve the comfort and efficiency of our soldiers by giving them a cap for undress drills and field days with shades for the eyes, for it is in vain to expect men to shoot well when wearing the present ridiculous cap. Our infantry fights in future will be like deer-stalking, and what man in his senses would try that amusement without a shade to his eyes. The Germans and French in this respect show they possess more than we do of that useful but rare quality, common-sense."

NAVAL GYMNASTICS.

SIR,—Com. Campbell, in a recent and very interesting lecture at the United Service Institution, laid down the principle that, to keep our seamen contented and in good health on board ship, there must be some occupation, combining "innocent amusement with practical utility," and this, he says, is to be found in the frequent sail and spar drill carried out in every man-of-war. As far as the principle is concerned, few Naval officers, I suppose, will be found to differ with him, but as regards the drill aloft in our heavily-armoured ironclads, I expect there are many who only find "irritation of temper," instead of "innocent amusement," and "resultless work" in place of "practical utility." It may be innocent amusement to Capt. the Hon. Algernon Fitz-Palmerston, whose education was conducted in the gun-room of a sailing frigate, and who, not having many ideas beyond a royal yard, naturally finds pleasure in watching the monkey-like activity of his men. It may be innocent amusement to Com. Swayaway, who is fond of exercising his voice, and who has a bet with Com. Brassrags, of the Magnificent, on the result of shifting topsails. But is it "innocent amusement" to poor Jack, who, with bruised toes and jammed fingers, finds himself occasionally in the black-list for being "slack aloft," or to Joe, the Marine, who, after hauling taut the foretopsail sheet ten times, once more hears the pipe, "foreyard to starboard"; or even to Bill, the stoker, who, after his long watch in the stokehole, has his eyes consigned to everlasting perdition for being unaware which out of 500 ropes on the deck is the maintopsail-yard down haul? The "practical utility" in ironclad ships is also very questionable, for against the use of masts and yards as a gymnasium, and the decimal part of a knot they may add to the speed, must be balanced:—1. The resistance of masts and yards when steaming head to wind. 2. The great annual expense of boatswains' stores for a large full-rigged ironclad, some £2,000, which would pay for many more tons of coal than are saved by the use of sails. 3. The great weight of spars, sails, &c., nearly 200 tons, which might be better utilised in increased coal supply or greater thickness of armour; indeed, it is said that the Invincible class carry 300 tons of ballast to prevent their being capsized by their own gymnasium. 4. The amount of space taken up by sail and store-rooms, which is sadly wanted for torpedo nets and stores. 5. The waste of time, most ships taking at least two months a year in harbour to refit and to paint masts and yards, while the gunnery lieutenants are for ever complaining that the warlike drills and exercises are slurred over, and looked upon as a necessary evil, like measles. Still, though we may hope that masts and sails, ordinary seamen and boys may all in future be confined to the unarmoured, fast-sailing, fast-steaming corvettes, what are the seamen gunners, A.B.'s, and Marines, who ought exclusively to man our mastless ironclads, to do for the "innocent amusement, combined with practical utility," which Com. Campbell and all of us want to give them? Why, regular exercise in boats, sailing and pulling, and in compulsory competitive horizontal-bar exercises under qualified instructors, and in frequent landing parties! This would not suit Com. Brassrags, of the Magnificent, I know, because, though he is aware that very few of our sailors can manage a boat under sail, yet he will tell you that boat-sailing is detrimental to the white paint and gilt, and that he always likes to see the boats at the davits. It would not suit Com. Swayaway, who would find his favourite occupation gone; but how about Jack, Joe, and Bill? Instead of the 40 upper-yard men being the only men on the gymnasium, while the rest are wearily dragging their arms out of their sockets, both Joe, the Marine, and Bill, the stoker, would have a chance of beating Jack in athletics. And I venture to think that it would suit the British public, who would possess a Navy more efficient in warlike exercises and less employed in non-essentials and outward show, than is at present the case. At least, such is the opinion of yours truly, CHANNEL GROPER.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS.

"Garrison Instructor" writes:—"The answer to the question concerning fraudulent enlistment mentioned by Major Morgan in your issue of Oct. 20 appears quite clear. He has only to refer to Army Act, sec. 13, where it is stated that, 'Every person subject to military law who, when belonging to . . . . . . the Militia when embodied, &c., enlists in her Majesty's Regular Forces," shall be deemed to have been guilty of fraudulent enlistment.' The persons who are subject to military law are given in sec. 176, Army Act, and here it is stated in sub-section (6) that all non-commissioned officers and men in the Militia of the United Kingdom are subject to military law,—(a), during their preliminary training; (b), when they or the body of Militia to which they belong are being trained or exercised, either alone or with any portion of the Regular Forces; (d), when embodied. All men of the Militia are, therefore, subject to military law when out for their preliminary training, or when their regiment is embodied (the word 'permanently' is never mentioned), and it would appear clear that any man during such time absenting himself from his regiment, and enlisting in the Regular Forces, can be tried for fraudulent enlistment."

MESS GUESTS' ACCOUNTS.

SIR,—In your number of Nov. 3, which I accidentally took up to-day, I see, under the title, "A Perplexed P.M.C.," at foot of page 833, a request for assistance in solving a problem which frequently occurs after entertaining guests at mess dinners. If the mess president will adopt the following rule, he will have no difficulty in dividing the cost of the dinner among any number of officers, whatever their rates of pay may be. Add the daily pay of each officer together, divide the cost of the dinner by the sum so found, multiply each officer's daily pay by the above quotient. The result will give the amount each officer has to pay. An example will show the working of this rule. Suppose the cost of the dinner of the guest to be 6s., and assume that four officers of different rates of pay have to divide among themselves, in accordance with their daily rate of pay, the above 6s., viz.,—one officer at 20s., lieutenant-colonel; ditto at 15s., major; ditto at 12s., captain; ditto at 5s., subaltern; then 20 + 15 + 12 + 5 = 52. Six divided by 52 = ·115 the quotient; then 20×·115 = 2·300; 15×·115 = 1·725; 12×·115 = 1·380; 5×·115 = 0·575. Or, leaving out parts of farthings, the lieutenant-colonel would have to pay 2s. 3¾d.; the major, 1s. 8¾d.; the captain, 1s. 4½d., the lieutenant, 7d.; Q.E.D., 6s.—I am, &c., J. MANLEY DIXON, Major-Gen., late R.A.

DRESS.

SIR,—Economy is supposed to be the order of the day amongst the officers and men of the Army, but the constant change of dress is enough to break one's heart and pocket. In the Madras Presidency it was only a short time ago that we had to change our coats from white to dirt colour, and this alone cost the regiment to which I belong 600 rs. to start with. What the constant dyeing has since cost the men I know not, but this I do know, that everyone is discontented and ashamed to be seen about in such filthy-looking garments of every shade of "earth." A fresh order has just been issued directing the gold cord on the shoulder of our mess-jackets to be taken off, and a white strap, with the badge of rank, substituted; the collar to be looped, not hooked, and a black silk necktie worn. The red coat up to this has had five large buttons, now it is to have five small ones, and this alteration, simple as it may seem, necessitates a new tunic. The shoulder-strap of the great-coat has always been kept in its place with a regimental metal button, now it is to be a black-silk one; and lastly, that abomination, the red sash, has to be worn over the "khakee." I hear also that at the camp of exercise about to be held near Bangalore, we are to wear brown blucher boots and brown breeches, which will be another nice little addition to our motley "KIT."

Obituary.

Gen. J. C. Wheeler, one of the oldest officers in the Indian Army, died on Nov. 1, at Bangalore. The deceased, who was 93 years of age, entered the Army so far back as Sept. 29, 1808. He had, therefore, been a soldier for no less a time than 75 years, and, what is more remarkable, the greater portion of his service was spent in India. He is stated to have arrived in India when he was 16 years old, and he only revisited his native country once, and that visit was paid when he attained the rank of capt., just 60 years since. Although the deceased's connection with the Army had been such a long one, he never saw much active service, the only affairs in which he was engaged being the actions of Wattygaum and Naffadee in the first Burmese war, for which he received a medal. A military career, however, which extended from the famous Peninsular campaign to the Egyptian War, and from the early victories of Wellington to those of Roberts and Wolseley, could not fail to have been an eventful one, and doubtless the old warrior could have furnished many interesting reminiscences of men and times long since passed away. The deceased had lived in Bangalore for more than 30 years, and was greatly respected in that station for his kind and charitable disposition.

Commander W. C. Shuckburgh (Retired) died at the Cape of Good Hope on Oct. 11. He entered the Navy in 1857, became sub-lieut. in 1863, lieut. in 1865, and retired with the rank of com. in 1872.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

An exchange has been sanctioned between Major W. H. F. Sorell, No. 1 Baty. 1st Brig., South Irish Division, and Major F. A. Ollivant, No. 8 Baty. 1st Brig., London Division, R.A. Major Ollivant has been ordered to Devonport for duty.

Lieut.-Col. Bertie Hobart, formerly Military Secretary to the Governor of Madras, has been appointed to the command of the Royal Artillery at the Cape of Good Hope, and will leave by an early mail to take up the appointment.

The Government of India having sanctioned the formation of yearly standing camps, for the purpose of carrying on the combined instruction of Royal Artillery and Sappers and Miners, in siege operations and practice, No. 4 Baty. 1st Brig., Lancashire Division, and No. 5 Baty. 1st Brig., Southern Division, will this season proceed to Roorkee for this purpose.

The death of Mr. Robert Roskrow, late of the Royal Artillery Field Train Department, has occurred at Water Gate, Illogan, Cornwall. He was one of the few survivors who served through the Peninsular campaign under Wellington, and he died at the age of 87.

3rd Buffs, East Kent Regiment. The command of the 2nd Batn. is vacant, Col. Parnell, C.B., having yesterday completed his five years in the appointment.

21st Royal Scots Fusiliers. The 1st Batn. left the Shaft Barracks, Dover, on the 23rd ult., at 9 a.m., and proceeded by two special trains to Aldershot, where they arrived about 2 p.m. It deserves mention that leaving the station where they have been for two years, and where they were so much liked, not one man was absent, not one even irregular, and not one prisoner, though the commanding officer, trusting to the sense of his men, used no restriction, and granted passes up to one hour before the battalion paraded for marching away. Under the same commanding officer, the 2nd Batn. left Glasgow in 1874 without a prisoner or absentee. How fortunate it is to be able to frame the rules which meet the approval, without exception, of 600 men!

23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers. The Liverpool Courier has the following:—"It is no wonder that mistakes occur in the transportation of troops abroad in war-time, when such a blunder as that which took place last week at Pembroke is possible at home in peace-time. The 1st Batn. of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, at Pembroke, were ordered to proceed to Ireland, on being relieved by the 1st Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers (late 101st), from Halifax, Nova Scotia. The Himalaya arrived at Pembroke from Halifax, N.S., with the Munster Fusiliers, but could not land them because the Assistance had not arrived to take away the Welsh Fusiliers. This was mistake number one. When the Munster Fusiliers landed, it was found the quarters vacated by the Royal Welsh were insufficient for the larger battalion, and several detachments had to be sent to adjacent forts, and still those quartered in the barracks, or rather wooden huts, found themselves most uncomfortably overcrowded, on their return home after nine years' service abroad. This was mistake number two. Now, the merest tyro in military organisation is aware that a battalion on foreign service contains several hundred more men than one at home which is low down on the list for a turn of service abroad. Apart from this, the authorities ought to have known by telegram the exact number of Fusiliers on board the Himalaya, and arranged for the quartering of the surplus at Chester or elsewhere. Another very simple plan to avoid the other mistake would have been for the Himalaya, after landing the Munster Fusiliers at Pembroke, to have embarked the Welsh for Ireland, and thus the Assistance need not have been employed in this duty. It is strange to find the blunders at Balaclava in Nov., 1854, repeated at Pembroke in Nov., 1883."

47th Loyal North Lancashire Regiment. The head-quarters and service companies embark at Gibraltar about Jan. 15 in H.M.S. Serapis, for conveyance to Bombay, en route to Ahmednuggur.

ROYAL MARINES.

The Accountant-General of the Navy has notified to the non-executive of the divisions that from Jan. 1 next payments are to be made quarterly, on the same system as that which obtains in the Navy, viz., a proportion to be paid at the end of each month to those who desire it, and the balance at the end of the third month.

The Deputy-Adjutant-General has notified that no officer will be considered eligible for duty at the depôt until he has passed the examination for higher rank, that is to say, captain for major and lieutenant for captain, except when there may not be qualified officers available.

It is easily understood why the Admiralty have issued a notification that no commissions will be given in the Royal Marine Light Infantry to candidates competing at the next examination for admission to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst. The Order in Council of Nov. 29, 1881, fixed the establishment of lieutenants, R.M.L.I., at 127, whereas there are at this moment 133 on the list, with two supernumerary captains who have not yet been absorbed, making 135 in all, or a surplus of eight, besides which there are others studying at the Royal Naval College for the Royal Marine Artillery, some of whom will possibly revert to the Light Infantry; in fact, the Light Infantry lieutenants have been largely augmented of late by those who have failed to qualify for the Artillery branch of the corps.

52nd Oxfordshire Light Infantry. An exceptional career in the Army has been closed by the death of Lieut.-Col. S. Murphy, for upwards of 30 years connected with the old 52nd. The son of a non-commissioned officer, he was born in Sept. 1819, and educated at the Royal Hibernian Military School, which he left as a boy in Aug., 1883. He then enlisted in the 52nd, and rose through the non-commissioned grades to the position of serjt.-major, having previously served as a serjt. with the regiment in Canada. As serjt.-major he went with the head-quarters to India in 1853, and two years later, on the recommendation of his colonel, the late Gen. George Campbell, he was promoted from the ranks to an ensigncy, dated Nov. 2, 1855. In the following May he purchased his next step, and two years later served with the regiment in the Indian Mutiny, for which he had the medal. In June, 1861, he became capt. by purchase, commanding his company until April, 1867, when he retired by sale as one of the senior captains in a regiment in which he had commenced as a lad in the ranks. His retirement was due to his having accepted an appointment as paymaster. As such he was first gazetted to the 3rd West India Regt., and then transferred to the 35th, with which he served in India from 1867 to 1875. He was then transferred to the 4th Hussars, and from that regiment to the 13th Hussars in 1877, serving with both cavalry corps in India. His final retirement from active service took place in June, 1882, when he was gazetted to the honorary rank of lieut.-col.

56th Essex Regiment. The command has fallen vacant, by the death of Lieut.-Col. A. Greenland, which occurred at Gibraltar, suddenly, on Monday last. The deceased entered the Army Oct. 12, 1859; became lieut., Jan. 1, 1862; capt., June 13, 1869; major, Feb. 8, 1879; and lieut.-col., July 5, 1882.

60th King's Royal Rifle Corps. Major B. Frend, 4th Batn., died at Dalhousie, on Oct. 26. The deceased entered the Army, Feb. 9, 1864; became lieut., Feb. 27, 1867; capt., March 12, 1875; and major, July 1, 1881.

72nd Seaforth Highlanders. It is understood that Major Murray will obtain the command of the 78th Highlanders. Col. W. M'Donald, who commanded a company during the last service of the regiment at Mhow, died in London on Nov. 22, aged 76. He had served in the King's Own Borderers from his first entry into the service in 1827 until 1848, when he retired on half-pay as a capt., subsequently exchanging into the Cameronians, and joining the 72nd as a capt. with 33 years' service in 1860. He became brevet major in 1854, brevet lieut.-col. in 1859, and retired when the regiment was in India.

73rd Black Watch, Royal Highlanders. The move of the regiment from Portsmouth to Aldershot will be carried out next week. It will occupy quarters in the South Camp.

81st Loyal North Lancashire Regiment. The head-quarters and service companies will arrive at Portsmouth in the course of the ensuing week from India.

83rd Royal Irish Rifles. Gen. W. G. Brown, col. of the regt., died on Tuesday, suddenly, at Sydenham. He entered the Army as an ensign in 1825, and obtained a lieutenancy in 1830. In 1844, he was promoted to the rank of capt., and became major in Jan. 1849. He served throughout the Punjab Campaign, and was present with the 24th Regt. at the passage of the Chenab and the battles of Sadoolapore and Chillianwallah, where he was wounded. As major of the 29th Regt. he served at the battle of Goojerat, for which he received the medal with two clasps. He became lieut.-col. in Dec. 1849; col. in 1854; major-gen., 1864; lieut.-gen., 1872; and gen., 1877. He was appointed to the colonelcy of the 83rd Regt. in 1873.

84th York and Lancaster Regiment. We learn from Bermuda that instead of landing the baggage the day the regiment arrived, and the men the following morning, the military authorities decided to land them at once. They were, therefore, taken in a small gunboat to Hamilton about sunset, and landed as best they could in the dark, and then started on a two-mile march to camp. Here, again, empty tents were found. Blankets, &c., had to be drawn, and the men then had to turn in on empty stomachs, having had nothing since dinner on board the Himalaya at 11 am.

101st Royal Munster Fusiliers. See 23rd Fusiliers.

103rd Royal Dublin Fusiliers. It is expected that the regiment, stationed at Dover, will proceed to Portsmouth on Jan. 9, and embark in H.M.S. Serapis, sailing for Gibraltar the following day, and will replace the 47th Regt., which embarks in the same vessel for Bombay, where the ship is expected to arrive about Feb. 7. The battalion will proceed to Ahmednuggur.

Medical Department. Roster for Foreign Service. "One under Orders" writes:—"The executive officers of the Medical Department feel much indebted to you for your able advocacy of their rights and the exposure of some of the wrongs they labour under. Will you now help us to obtain some redress on the above subject? When unification was first forced on us, one of the promises made to make it popular was that our home service should be longer than in the old regimental days. What is the present state of affairs? Why, men who landed from India and the Cape 18 months ago are now under orders for India; whereas, in the pre-unification days, three years was the shortest any man might expect to remain at home. Here we now are—Surgeons-Major who served through the whole of the Afghan and Cape Wars, and landed in February and March, 1882—again ordered abroad; and, worst of all, we cannot even effect an exchange for any reasonable sum. On the other hand, medical officers who served for a few months in Egypt, and who got at the least two decorations, are being allowed to count this short time abroad, the same as men who served six years in India and the Cape. I know officers who, like myself, have served abroad four out of every five years they have been in the service, going abroad while others are comfortably fixed for the next two or three years, who have only been some six months out of England in the last three or four years. Again, the system of taking men off the roster, and giving them fixed appointments for three or five years, is very unfair, and even this system is abused by appointing officers to these billets who have been a year, or longer, at home. I can now point to a medical officer who, after two years at home, was given an appointment for five years, and at the end of that time had it renewed for another year, making eight years' consecutive home service, and this is but a solitary instance out of many of the abuse of power in this matter. There is only one fair method of keeping a roster. Every medical officer on landing from abroad should be put at the bottom of the list, and the day he comes to the top he should be first to go abroad, subject, of course, to the privilege of exchange. Moreover, a column should be introduced into the Army List, giving the date of landing or going abroad of every medical officer, and if this were done, all possible injustice and 'dodging' would be abolished. This matter is to be brought before Parliament when it meets, several Members having expressed themselves determined to expose the present system."

MILITIA.

3rd Brigade, Cinque Ports Division, Royal Artillery. The annual regimental dinner took place at the St. James's Restaurant, on Wednesday, the 28th ult. The following attended:—Lieut.-Col. W. R. Lewis (in the chair), Col. Hayes-Sadler, Lieut.-Col. R. T. N. Tubbs, and Major Scobell; Capts. W. A. Hankey, Margary, Rhodes, Pratt, and Spencer, R.A.; Messrs. A. C. Jeddere-Fisher, D. St. Clair, A. Broadwood, R. Hayes-Sadler, Cobbett, H. Jeddere-Fisher, and King.

The Buffs (East Kent Regiment). Capt. F. H. Forestier-Walker, reported to be killed, in command of the Nordenfelt battery of Hicks Pasha's army in the Soudan, was a lieutenant in the 4th Batn. (late East Kent Militia) from June 18, 1881, to the spring of the present year. Capt. Walker never served with the Line battalions, as stated by the daily papers.

Suffolk Regiment. Lieut. H. P. Phillips, 3rd Batn., writes:—"I see my name is mentioned in your number of Nov. 24 as being one of the unfortunate Soudan Field Force, an error that has occurred in several papers, mainly owing to their having copied a mistake of the Illustrated London News of March 10 last, and corrected by them March 31. I was present at Suakim on a visit, and was an eye-witness of the landing of the troops for the Soudan and of their departure, of which I sent an account to the Illustrated London News, and a photograph of the Staff given me by Warner—they had previously received one, and an account also; but, why, I do not know, they added my name to their list of officers, as 'Capt. W. Page Phillips, Intelligence Department.' On my return I wrote them, and they corrected in March 31 number their mistake. I do not know how else my name has been inserted. Will you kindly publish this letter, to correct the mistake?"

THE VOLUNTEERS.

12th Middlesex (Civil Service). The annual prize distribution and dinner of A Company was held at the Holborn Restaurant on Wednesday. Considerable interest attached to the meeting, it being understood that Capt. Jeston is about to resign the command of the company, which he has held since 1868. Major Mills, the senior major of the regiment, who was present, testified very heartily to the ability and tact with which Capt. Jeston had for nearly 16 years guided the destinies of the company; and from the manner in which his remarks were received, there could be no doubt of the affection the company feel towards their captain, and their regret at parting with him. It is supposed that he will be succeeded by Lieut. Eccles, who bears the character of a zealous, able, and unselfish officer, and under whose guidance the company may look for a bright future.

16th Middlesex (London Irish) Rifles. A Home District Order, signed by Col. the Hon. P. Methuen, A.A.G., notifies that Capt. Howland Roberts has passed through a course of Army signalling, and is reported by the District Signalling Officer to be qualified to act as regimental instructor.

1st Lancashire Rifles. The returns of this fine battalion, just forwarded to the War Office, show a large increase in the enrolled and effective strength during the past year, the former advancing from 1,004 to 1,163, and the latter from 1,004 to 1,151; 85 officers and serjeants have earned the proficiency grant, and it appears that at the inspection 1,028 of all ranks were on parade.

5th Lancashire (Liverpool Rifle Brigade). The returns exhibit a slight falling-off. Last year the enrolled were up to the full establishment of 1,004; they are now 991, of whom 947 are efficient.

15th Lancashire Rifles. The returns show 948 enrolled, a decrease of two; and 902 efficients, a loss of 18.

16th Lancashire Rifles. The efficients are 1,000; non-efficients, three.

18th Lancashire (Liverpool Irish) Rifles. This battalion is losing ground, the enrolled showing a falling-off from 501 to 443, and the efficients from 500 to 402.

19th Lancashire Rifles. The returns show an improvement over those of last year. There are now 562 on the rolls, and 488 efficients.

1st Notts (Robin Hood) Rifles. This smart and all-round good regiment, with an establishment of 1,004, has 1,003 efficients.

London Rifle Brigade. The prizes of this regiment were distributed by the Lady Mayoress, at the Crystal Palace, last Saturday, the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs attending in state, and the company also including Lieut.-Gen. Higginson, C.B., commanding the Home District. Lieut.-Col. Lord Edward Pelham Clinton, in his introductory remarks, referred in feeling terms to the loss the regiment had sustained during the past year in the death of Col. Ewens, a loss, he said, which was irreparable, and then went on to speak about the condition of the regiment. The enrolled strength, it appears, is ten less than last year, when it was 763, but the efficients are about the same, 681. A very satisfactory feature of the returns is the number of marksmen. No less than 166 officers and men are entitled to the badge, and this, we believe, is the largest return of the kind of any regiment in the Home District. The colonel congratulated Capt. Earl Waldegrave on his company being for the fifth year in succession the most efficient, and, in conclusion, detailed the events of the year in which the regiment had been engaged. The Lord Mayor congratulated the regiment on its condition, and subsequently Lieut.-Gen. Higginson referred to the subject of rifle-ranges for the troops (regular and auxiliary) of the district, which he said was engaging most serious attention at the Horse Guards and War Office.

INDIA OFFICE, November 30, 1883.

Her Majesty has approved of the removal from the service, under the terms of the Royal Warrant of Jan. 17, 1881, of the under-mentioned officers, who have failed to pass the necessary tests:—

Bombay Staff Corps.—Lieut. H. C. Powell (Oct. 16).

The directors of the East Riding Club and Racecourse Company have issued their prospectus, inviting subscriptions for 3,200 shares, at £25 each, to provide for the East Riding of York, and the township of Hull in particular, a first-class racecourse and club, the licence for which has been granted by the Jockey Club. The names of the directors—including those of Sir John Astley, the Duke of Hamilton, Mr. J. Maunsell Richardson, Mr. H. F. Beaumont, Col. G. Goodlake, &c.—ought to be sufficient guarantee that the company's intentions will be carried out successfully. The course proposed appears all that can be desired, the plan showing a straight mile, and flat and steeplechase courses each two miles, without going twice over the same ground. The success of Manchester, Sandown, and Kempton will doubtless attend this undertaking.

Medicated Soap.—Use that prescribed by the medical profession, and be spared an irritable skin and a face disfigured by pimples and blotches. Purchase only Wright's Coal Tar Soap (branded "Sapo Carbonis Detergens"), and refuse all worthless substitutes.

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—Imperfectly adapted Spectacles are the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Mr. H. Laurance, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 1a Old Bond Street (late 39), has made the adaptation of spectacles his especial and sole study for upwards of thirty years. Testimonials from Earl Lindsay, Sir Julius Benedict, F. D. Dixon Hartland, Esq., M.P., Thomas Cook, Esq., the well-known Tourist Agent, &c. Pamphlet, containing valuable suggestions, post free. OFFICE—40 CHARING CROSS, S.W.

This Asylum was opened in February, 1854, to provide a home for the widows of non-commissioned officers and privates of the Army of not less than 50 years of age.

There are 65 widows in the Asylum.

Each widow has a furnished room, and receives seven shillings weekly, besides a monthly allowance of two shillings and sixpence for coals.

The House is capable of containing 70 widows, and the Committee appeal to the public for funds to enable them to admit the additional number, the present subscriptions being insufficient.

The funded income of the charity yields only £930, with an additional £50 from the Princess Mary's Fund for Nurses, to meet an estimated expenditure of £3,000 per annum.

An annual subscription of half-a-guinea, or a donation of five guineas, entitles to one vote at each election, with the right of nominating a candidate.

CRIMEAN CEMETERIES.

The COMMITTEE have to ACKNOWLEDGE with thanks the following CONTRIBUTIONS received since July. But in doing so they are forced to solicit further contributions, as, though the walls of the new cemetery are completed, and all memorials have been removed to Cathcart's Hill, yet a further expenditure is still necessary for planting, making paths, and above all, to secure an efficient water supply. All donations should be sent to the Treasurers, Messrs. COX and CO., Craig's Court.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1883.

As time goes on, and the baneful effects of the abolition of the C. D. Acts are manifest, not only are the feelings of those who from the first anticipated the result becoming stronger, but many of the opponents of the Acts have had their eyes opened to incontrovertible facts. The Royal Albert Hospital at Devonport, a portion of which has for some years been set aside for cases under the C. D. Acts, is in a better position to show the working of the Acts than any other institution, and an influential expression of opinion was manifested at the annual meeting of the Governors and subscribers, held on the 7th inst., at which Mr. Carpenter-Garnier, M.P., presided. The Secretary stated that the Committee would never have been associated with the working of these Acts, had they not been most fully persuaded that they were most beneficent in their intention, and most beneficial in their action ; and they only deplore that one of the most important provisions of the Act of 1869 has become a dead-letter. Mr. Carpenter-Garnier said that by the system carried out in the hospital, while everything had been done in the way of skilful treatment of those particular diseases, a very successful effort had been made to rescue the inmates of those wards from their ways of life, and send them back to their homes, or to some honest employment. The Committee of the House of Commons which sat for one Session and part of a second to inquire into the working of the C. D. Acts examined witnesses at great length, and issued a Report which was an entire vindication of the policy of the Acts. With regard to the effect of the Acts upon the Military, he said that the average number of cases in the district during the five years preceding their suspension was 30·87 per thousand of the force of the severe kind, and 78·22 per thousand of the less severe kind ; while under the voluntary system they found, in the first quarter of its operation, the severe cases were 102·5, and the less severe type 138·4 per thousand, an increase rendered more serious by the higher ratio of the constitutional form of disease. To these statistics Admiral Sir W. Houston Stewart, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief at the Port, added those of the Royal Naval Hospital, which were, that on September 1, 1882, there were 261 cases, 45 of which were contagious ; whereas, twelve months later, after the suspension of the Acts, there were 426 cases, of which 169 were contagious. The Admiral said that nothing could be more disastrous in its effect upon the Navy than the abolition of those Acts ; and he was using no exaggerated term when he said " disastrous." He thought it his duty to represent the matter to the Admiralty in those plain terms, when they visited the port, and he placed in the hands of the First Lord some information on the subject which he had no doubt he would make use of. Archdeacon Earle quoted statistics which confirmed in a remarkable way what had been said. In Plymouth the cases brought under treatment during 1882 were 997, of which 277 were females and 720 males ; and during the corresponding quarter in 1883 the number was 1,282, of which 91 were females and 1,191 males. He also stated that from information he had received from one of the regiments in garrison, in one company alone no less than eleven cases of disease had been distinctly traced to one source, and one of the cases was that of a drummer-boy. Under the compulsory system 277 women were treated, as against 91 when compulsion ceased ; and the fearful increase of disease among men is testified to on all sides. Petitions such as those against the C. D. Acts are got up by a number of enthusiastic people, who go from house to house and get signatures, and audiences at public meetings are led away for the moment by clever and earnest lecturers. Mr. Carpenter-Garnier says that so little was it expected that the administration of the Acts would be condemned, that he and many other Members who would otherwise have voted against Mr. Stansfeld's motion were absent. There were hundreds who signed the petitions on the plea of religion and morality ; but this must have been in ignorance of the true working of the Acts, for if religious and moral grounds called for their abolition, the Clergy as a body would have stood their ground as opponents, as well as such men as the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe and Sir Houston Stewart ; whereas, out of the strong body of clergy in the neighbourhood of Plymouth and Devonport only two signed petitions, while sixteen influential clergymen were either present at the meeting held at the hospital, or wrote to support the views taken. The whole question has taken such a serious aspect, that the Government must deal with the consequences of their ill-advised surrender.

For the present, appointments to the Indian Staff Corps are suspended—that is, officers in the battalions in India desiring to enter the Staff Corps cannot be nominated for the time, and if the two years' rule be adhered to, it would seem as if there was an essence of injustice or hardship imported into the working of the system.

We are always more ready to give credit where credit is due, and it certainly is due to Lord Hartington, or the official who has acted for him, in issuing orders for an inquiry to be made into the present condition of the barracks at Dublin and other stations. We called attention a few weeks ago to the disgraceful condition of the buildings in which our troops are housed in the Irish capital. Within a few days of the publication of our remarks, the matter was taken up at the War Office, with results that must be considered highly satisfactory. If all those in office would take the sensible view which has been taken in this instance, instead of endeavouring to misrepresent facts, there might be some hope of our Army recovering the position it has undoubtedly forfeited. We expect that it is to Sir Andrew Clarke and Colonel Dawson-Scott that the Army is indebted for this thoughtful consideration. Would that there were more officials of this stamp in Pall Mall, for then there would be some hope for the British Army, which is simply being ruined by small-mindedness, and the petty jealousies which that small-mindedness engenders.

Sir Ralph Thompson, K.C.B., Permanent Under-Secretary of State for War, has left England this week for Cyprus, and will remain absent for seven weeks, on leave of absence.

He is a very bad Englishman who looks to such a catastrophe as the annihilation of Hicks' army as the basis of an attack on the Government ; but we think, nevertheless, a review of the course of Anglo-French policy in Egypt since 1881 may well inspire doubts as to the wisdom of the statesmen who deposed Ismail Pasha, and drove Arabi into open rebellion. There can be no question, among those who know the facts, that the Egyptian Debt having once become a burthen on the land, under international guarantees, Ismail Pasha, once constrained to abandon the completion of his magnificent projects, and to stop his still more magnificent expenditure, was the man above all others fitted for the supreme control. Had he been at Cairo, Arabi's pronunciamiento could not have occurred. But as our Government and the French Ministry of the day were persuaded to supersede Ismail Pasha through the agency of the Porte, and as Arabi was allowed to become the Rienzi of Cairo, it is very doubtful indeed whether it would not have been wise to have adopted the attitude towards him which was taken by the mass of the Consular body in their diplomatic capacity outside the agencies of England and France, and to have at once recognised him as the popular Egyptian by whose help the European States could have enforced their rights, and to have accepted him as the representative of the popular aspirations.

There is not a particle of truth in the ridiculous statement, afforded to Le Temps by a private letter from Alexandria, that " the rebel bands have been organised and commanded by a Frenchman named Soulier," we wonder at our serious but credulous contemporary printing such rubbish. How a Frenchman could, after the bombardment of Alexandria, get at the Mahdi by going to Khartoum does not seem to have staggered Le Temps in the least ! It now remains for an Irish paper to establish the fact that the False Prophet is really a native of Clonakilty, named Paddy Maddy.

The obstinate way in which the newspapers persist in calling Baker's force " Gendarmerie " is very irritating. Baker was rebuked for giving them the name and organisation of " Gendarmerie," and was forced to issue a General Order, stating that the name of " Gendarmerie " and officers' rank and title was changed ; that the force was purely civil, on the model of the Irish Constabulary, or rural police, and that there was no relative rank in the force, so that it might be quite distinct from Wood's Army, even to the extent of being amenable to civil, and not martial law. Now the Constabulary are called on to go to Souakim on the Red Sea, far outside the limits of the country in which they were to act as police, and to do military duty in defending the town, whilst Sir Evelyn Wood assumes the duties of Chief Inspector of Police, and with his two brigades of infantry, his cavalry, and guns, is called upon to keep the peace in the capital with his soldiery ! It is no wonder the constables deserted en route. It was a breach of faith to send them. Their weeping officers were probably not men the gallant " Gendarmes " (pardon the word) would care to follow ! It was a grim joke of the ex-Khedive when he heard of the tearful centurions,—that " they would have wept a good deal more had they refused to go had he been at Cairo." Heaven help the officers who have to deal with such materials in front of an enemy !

The separate examination, which is just concluded, for Cavalry subalterns, will, it is anticipated, fill the remaining vacancies that exist in that branch of the Army.

Should it be found necessary to reinforce the Army in Egypt, the Line battalions, on a paper establishment of 950 rank and file, first for service, are the 2nd Battalion, Highland Light Infantry (74th), 2nd Battalion, Royal Irish (18th), 1st Battalion, East Surrey (31st), 2nd Battalion, Oxford (52nd), 2nd Battalion, South Lancashire (82nd), 2nd Battalion, Dublin Fusiliers (103rd). The two last-named regiments will probably proceed to the Mediterranean, as originally intended, to replace the 1st Battalion, North Lancashire (47th), and 2nd Battalion, Munster Fusiliers (104th), ordered to India. The battalions next on the roster, with an establishment of 850 rank and file, are the 2nd, South Yorkshire (105th), 1st Hampshire (37th), and the 1st Dorset (39th).

The Government of India have sanctioned the dismantling of the outworks of Fort St. George, Madras provided funds are available.

We have good reason for believing the War Office was not to blame for promoting an officer to the command of a battalion as detailed in a letter last week to the Times. The battalion proceeded on foreign service before the vacancy occurred, and the qualifications of the officer in question being most satisfactorily reported upon by more than one General officer under whom the battalion served, no alternative remained but to promote the officer to the Lieutenant-Colonelcy.

Sir Robert Sandeman's expedition to South-Western Beloochistan was to start early last month. His escort consists of 200 men of the 2nd Bombay Grenadiers, 80 men of the Sind Horse, and two guns.

A tactical model is now in use at Aldershot, the invention of Captain Gall, late 96th Regiment, which affords a means of conducting all kinds of studies of strategy and tactics in a barrack-room. Gaptain Gall's system requires no previous knowledge of conventional signs. The model can be improvised in a few minutes on an ordinary barrack-room table. An instructor is enabled to put out a representation of any sort of ground, and to show upon it the position and movements not only of bodies of troops, but also of individual men. The model can also be used for teaching military surveying, especially " eye-sketching ;" and traversing and triangulation can be practised exactly as in the field.

The Home Office, we believe, has intimated to Colonel F. Bolton, late of the Gold Coast Artillery Corps, at present Inspector of Water Companies, that her Majesty intends to confer on him the honour of knighthood in recognition of his services in the use of flashing signals.

After months of exhaustive trial and experiment with " tunics," " frocks," and " coats " of divers shapes and colours, the Permanent Committee for Dress and Equipment at Aldershot has at last produced something which, it appears, has given satisfaction to the " powers that be." But little is yet known of this mysterious garment—even its name is doubtful. It seems certain, however, that it will be provided with epaulettes or " wings." The latter appendages may prove a very valuable addition to the equipment of the Tommy Atkins of the future reformed army. Has the Committee had this idea in its mind ?

And now King Coffee Calcalli is in trouble ! The irony of events is acute, the logic of accomplished facts inexorable ! Verily the wisdom of rulers is foolishness ! We left old King Coffee Calcalli and all his little Calcalusses at Coomassie, under a sort of pledge that if he let us and our friends alone we would protect him ; and now the descendant of the mighty Ashantee has fallen into the hands of some more adroit enemy even than Sir Garnet Wolseley, one Quack or Quacko Doém, grandnephew, it seems, of the deceased potentate who once occupied our minds and our troops, and made the Times and all the London " squirm " one memorable day when he was reported to have eaten up all our host. Then there is Cetewayo !—or rather where is he? He was martyred in a way, and then was lionised in London, and then sent back under the wing of the Foreign Office to Zululand, where he was rudely hustled out again into Natal. He, too, claims our protection ; and so would another of our friends, Sekukuni, probably, if Mampoer had not murdered him. It would be a good idea to protect the Mahdi. He would be certain to come to grief then.

An unforeseen consequence of the making of the Suez Canal is to be recognised in the readiness of France to undertake a war in Tonquin, with a chance of a war with China, all by herself, and her frolicsome gambols off the coast of Madagascar, &c.

A gentleman engaged in literary pursuits is in the habit of indulging, on the conclusion of his day's work, in the innocent but invigorating recreation of dancing a " break-down,"—of dancing off the cobwebs, as he tersely puts it. In this, he is only following the example of the authorities at the War Office. Their labours and proceedings, like his, end with break-downs. Theirs, however, are not a harmless dance, but a series of expensive and disastrous failures, for which the country may one of these days have to pay pretty heavily, not only in the loss of prestige, but in money also, as France did in 1871.

We cannot afford space at present to insert more letters about the grievances of the officers of the Army Pay Department ; but we must say that the voice of their complaint is very loud and very general from all quarters, and even now we are the unwilling recipients of communications from India. Just to save our readers from the infliction of the " toujours perdrix " of our injured friends, we must, for a reasonable period, close our columns to reiterations of the same stories, and meanwhile, we advise our friends of the Army Pay Department to shut their mouths, put up their pens, open their eyes, and see what the War Office will send them.

Comus, Capt. J. W. East. We are earnestly requested to make public the peculiarly sad state of feeling now existing on board this once happy and contented ship. Already the commission has run out to four years, and with little prospect of the crew rejoining their wives and families for many months yet to come. A tone of depression and despondency prevails along the lower deck, although, to the credit of true British sailors, it is borne in comparative silence, and is endured with praiseworthy patience. The Satellite, after making an unusually long passage of 122 days, arrived at Coquimbo, from England, in September; but then came a still more tedious delay, in waiting for the Mutine, which only started from Esquimault on Aug. 22, to make a 54 days' passage to Coquimbo, with invalids and passengers for home. And lastly, which is the actual feather on the camel's back, after being told to prepare for sea, and to start "homeward bound," the captain suddenly came on board with the horrible and overwhelming news that he was going to take the Comus at once back to Callao! there to wait, perhaps, an indefinite time. The reason for this extraordinary move is perfectly inexplicable to all on board. "Two ships" have been asked for to remain at Callao during the evacuation by the Chilians, but as the Constance, Satellite, Kingfisher, and Mutine are each and all immediately available, it has been quite impossible to see why the Comus should have been delayed one moment longer on the station. All on board are very sad, disappointed, and thoroughly disheartened, and feel that they are very hardly used and unfairly treated. It is sincerely hoped that the columns of the Army and Navy Gazette will once more come to the rescue, and will be open to the cry of complaint proceeding from the inmost hearts of the long-suffering Blue-jackets on board a ship which was last year cheered by the smiles of Royalty.

Constance, Capt. Doughty, was to leave Arica on Oct. 19, for Mollendo.

Euryalus, Capt. Hastings, C.B., flagship of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., was at Bombay on Nov. 28.

Monarch, Capt. Fairfax, C.B., when at Smyrna on Nov. 7, was loosing sails, when Thomas Ford, an able seaman, in coming down from aloft, missed his hold and fell headlong from the maintopmast rigging, pitching on the berthing of the ship's side. The force of the fall was so great, that the poor fellow was literally cut in two, and while the lower part of the body fell inboard, the remaining portion fell into the sea. A cutter from the ship was smartly manned, and the men succeeded in recovering the mangled remains before they had sunk out of sight. Deceased was buried ashore on the following day with naval honours.

Northampton, Capt. Digby, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell, V.C., was at Halifax on Nov. 16, and was to leave for Bermuda about Nov. 19. The Tenedos was at Halifax on Nov. 16. Stork, Lieut.-Com. Blennerhasset, was en route to Lagos with mails on Oct. 18, and after the Niger Expedition would leave for the Cape of Good Hope.

Sultan, Capt. Sir Walter Hunt Grubbe, K.C.B., anchored at Spithead on Nov. 26. On Tuesday, H.R.H. the Crown Prince of Portugal paid a visit to the ship, and was taken for a short cruise round the Isle of Wight.

Undine, Lieut. and Com. Cutfield, arrived at Zanzibar on Nov. 30, and would leave in about three weeks for the Australian station.

London Amusements.

At the Haymarket Theatre, Mr. Pinero's new play, entitled "Lords and Commons," has met with a favourable reception, largely to be ascribed to the excellence of the interpretation. The piece is cleverly written, but the cynical flavour pervading the dialogue is not altogether pleasant; and the plot, illustrating the supposed haughty bearing of the titled classes towards those having no claim to aristocratic descent, is wholly unsympathetic, as well as untrue to nature. Had the story been thrown back to a more remote period, its probability might have been less sternly questioned. There is, however, so much good acting to atone for the deficiencies of the dramatist, that the audiences assembling at the theatre may for several weeks yet to come find much pleasure in the representation. The Dowager Lady Caryl and her daughter, Lady Eleanor, are most effectively portrayed by Mrs. Stirling and Miss Calhoun, and Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft have congenial characters assigned them in the mining agent, Tom Jervoise, formerly of Pall Mall, and recently from California, and the flirting Miss Maplebeck, from Baltimore, coquetting with elderly patricians in the pleasantest manner imaginable. Mr. Forbes Robertson can do little to excite interest in such a worthless personage as the Earl of Caryl, but whenever the action flags the earnestness and great dramatic power exhibited by Mrs. Bernard Beere as Mrs. Devenish, purchaser of the Caryl estate, comes promptly to the rescue, and the one strong situation of the play is thus most impressively rendered. Smaller parts are very characteristically sustained by Mr. Elliot, Mr. C. Brookfield, Mr. Percy Vernon, M. Girardot, Mr. Alfred Bishop, and Mr. Stewart Dawson, while the stage decorations show singular completeness of detail. The "Hall and Terrace," painted by Mr. Telbin, and the "Morning Room," as depicted by Mr. Walter Johnstone, are striking examples of modern scenic art.

A slight farcical comedy, in two acts, written by Mr. Malcolm Charles Salaman, and entitled, "Deceivers Ever," was successfully brought out at the Strand Theatre on Monday night. Two elderly gentlemen hope to ingratiate themselves in the favour of a wealthy young widow by studying vocal and instrumental music. The discovery that their teachers are a nephew and niece bribed to mislead them in their instruction, affords much diversion and leads to some humorous situations. The little piece is unavoidably withdrawn from the programme after this week, to make way for Mr. Edward Compton's Comedy Company, but it will probably reappear on the London stage at no distant date. It was briskly acted by Miss T. Hastings, Miss Florence Trevelyan, Mr. W. F. Hawtrey, Mr. Robert Brough, Mr. E. Hamilton Bell, and Mr. H. B. Fenn.

"A Sailor and his Lass" will be withdrawn from Drury Lane at the end of next week, to allow the stage to be prepared for the Christmas annual of "Cinderella," in which a fox-hunt with real horses and real hounds will be a prominent feature.

At Covent Garden the holiday entertainment is understood to be the elaborate ballet of "Excelsior," transferred from the Eden Theatre of Paris, and played with much success in Italy and Germany during the last three years.

"The Lady of Lyons" will only be repeated at the Lyceum for a few nights longer, and at the close of next week Miss Mary Anderson will appear as the heroine of Mr. W. S. Gilbert's play of "Pygmalion and Galatea."

The production of the new play of "Claudian" at the Princess's is deferred for a week, to enable the elaborate machinery to be worked with greater smoothness. The drama will be brought out on Thursday next.

With Mrs. A. Conover as lessee and manager, the Olympic Theatre, partly reconstructed and entirely redecorated, will open this (Saturday) evening, with Mr. Henry Pettitt's four-act drama called "The Spider's Web." Miss Alma Murray, Miss Laura Linden, Mr. Philip Beck, and Mr. G. W. Anson are prominent members of the company.

The new Alhambra opens on Monday next.

With this week the revived run of the comedy of "Ours" will terminate at Toole's Theatre, Mr. J. L. Toole and his company reappearing on Saturday next in the popular travesty called "Stage-Dora."

William Henry Tutton, ward-room steward, of the Excellent; William G. Widgery, master-at-arms, St. Vincent; Nicholas Goodyear, gunner's mate, Cambridge; John Marcus, shoemaker, Britannia; Thomas Vincent, boatman, Coastguard; James Westmuckett, A.B., Hector; William Henry Clamp, boatman, Coastguard; Henry Sidd, boatman, Coastguard; and Charles Gurnett, serjeant-at-arms, Téméraire, have been awarded the medal for long service and good-conduct.

Epps's Cocoa.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Made simply with boiling water or milk. ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

It has been decided to establish a Race-course for flat racing, steeplechasing, and coursing in the East Riding of Yorkshire, the necessary licence for which has already been granted by the Jockey Club. Separate properties, forming together one estate, with buildings and stabling thereon, sufficient, with some few alterations, for about 100 horses, and comprising in all about 267 acres, have been selected for the purpose. This estate is situate about one mile and a half from the boundary of the borough of Kingston-upon-Hull, on the main road leading from Hull to Hedon, and about a quarter of a mile from the present station of Hedon, and admits the formation of a straight mile course, a flat course two miles long, and a two miles steeplechase course, without going twice over the same ground.

Holders of twenty shares and upwards will be entitled to free admission to the stands and enclosures at all times when open to the public, with the exception of such portions of the grounds as are specially set apart for Club members.

Subscriptions may be paid to the account of W. M. Wilkinson, Esq., and A. Howlett, Esq., as Trustees for the subscribers, to Messrs. Coutts and Co.; or such subscriptions may be sent to the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company.

The Rev. Robert Cass, Settle, Yorkshire, writes, February 19, 1880:—"The Lady's Gold Lever Watch received from you for 70s, in size, workmanship, and beautiful appearance, resembles a watch usually sold at £10. It gives entire satisfaction."

From Mr. J. J. Harris, Schoolmaster, 2-18 The Royal Irish Regiment, Aldershot, September 22, 1880:—"I am very much pleased with everything I have had from your Company. The watch (25s) has proved to be an excellent one, and is a marvel of cheapness. It is fully equal to, or indeed superior to, many I have seen purchased by Regimental Clubs for treble the money."

OROIDE GOLD JEWELLERY (REGD.)

OROIDE GOLD WATCHES,

The "SERVICE" KEYLESS WATCH,

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose." PROSPECTUS.

1. This Company is formed for the purpose of providing increased Tramway accommodation for the carriage of Passengers, Parcels, and Goods, in Birmingham and in the adjoining neighbourhood. With the present issue of capital it is proposed to acquire, construct, equip, and work a system of Street Tramways, traversing the heart of Birmingham, and connecting the densely populated and increasing suburbs of Handsworth and Ashton on the north, and Balsall Heath, Moseley, and King's Norton on the south, with the Railway-stations in the centre of the Town.

2. The system will also traverse, as shown by the accompanying map, the populous manufacturing towns and districts of Smethwick, Spon Lane, West Bromwich, Oldbury, Rowley Regis, Tividale, Dudley Port, Tipton, Coseley, and Dudley, and will afford direct communication between those places and Birmingham. The entire System comprises, with sidings and turnouts, about 35 miles of Street Tramways, 12 miles of which are in the Borough of Birmingham.

3. The construction of the Lines has already been commenced, and nearly a mile of line between Tividale and the Dudley Railway-station has been completed, and is ready for traffic.

4. The population of the Districts which these Tramways will accommodate is very large, as shown by the following statistics of the towns, places, and parishes, which will be actually traversed:—

Name of Town.	Population (Census 1881.)
Birmingham (Borough of)	400,757
King's Norton	34,071
Handsworth	24,258
Smethwick	25,076
Oldbury	18,821
West Bromwich	56,299
Rowley Regis	27,385
Tipton	30,013
Coseley	21,701
Dudley (Borough of)	87,407

Even excluding the town of Birmingham, the population of the other places passed through is more than sufficient to warrant the assumption that separate systems of Tramways, for each or either, would prove remunerative. Combined as one undertaking and under one management, with consequent economy in the working expenses, no system of Tramways in the Kingdom offers better guarantees for success.

5. Some idea of the enormous passenger and other traffic of the district may be gathered from the following facts, namely:—

1st.—More than 10,000,000 passengers are annually booked in and out of the railway-stations at Birmingham, and more than 6,000,000 at the other local stations along the line of route. Railway and Tramways are mutually benefitted by the cheap and speedy means of access which the latter, as feeders, provide; and reference to the accompanying map will show that this system is admirably planned to connect the respective centres of population with the railway-stations by which they are served.

2nd.—Not less than 3,000,000 "small parcels" (independently of the immense goods traffic) are yearly received at the various railway-stations within the District served by these Tramways, and this Company will not only collect and deliver parcels sent locally, but the Directors also propose to make arrangements with the Railway Companies and other carriers, to act as their agents for the collection and delivery of Goods and Parcels at through rates to and from all parts of the Kingdom.

6. The Orders authorising these Tramways as confirmed by Acts of Parliament have fixed special tariffs for the carriage of Goods, Minerals, and Parcels, and, as the local conditions of manufacture necessitate frequent, speedy, and regular deliveries, these lines will afford new facilities for complying economically with the requirements of the District. The development of this remunerative traffic, which has not yet been sufficiently cultivated on Tramways, should also ensure a considerable additional revenue to the Company.

7. It is a point of the highest importance that the Orders, subject to the conditions therein mentioned, specially authorise the use of steam or any mechanical power. The recently published report of the Birmingham and Aston Company shows that their engine expenses are less than 5d per mile run, the average cost of horse-power exceeding 8d per mile.

8. In anticipation of the very large traffic of all classes that will be worked almost continuously over the route, a large equipment will be provided, experience having proved that a frequent service yields proportionately a greater revenue. It is also intended to lay girder steel rails, to pave the Tramways throughout, and generally to construct them in a thoroughly substantial manner, so as to reduce the cost of "maintenance" to a minimum.

9. The Corporation of Birmingham, in exercise of the option given to them by the above-mentioned Orders, have duly elected to construct the whole of the lines within their borough. These lines will, under the provisions of the said Orders, be leased to the Birmingham and Western Districts Tramways Company, Limited, their successors and assigns, and the cost of construction defrayed by the Corporation. The terms of the lease have been already agreed upon, and are more favourable than those in operation in Manchester, Glasgow, and certain other large towns where handsome dividends accrue to their respective lessees.

10. The Company has entered into an agreement with the Birmingham and Western Districts Tramways Company, Limited, the promoters in whom the undertakings authorised by the said Orders are vested for the transfer of their rights under the said Orders and for the complete construction by October 31, 1884, to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade, of the whole of these Tramways outside the Borough of Birmingham, together with Land and Buildings necessary for Stables, Engine and Car Sheds, and including Rolling-Stock and Equipment for the whole system, in and out of the said Borough, for the sum of £262,920.

11. This sum is to include all the Parliamentary costs and charges, the purchase of all the Valuable Rights and Privileges under the Three Acts of Parliament authorising the construction of the Tramways, the transfer of the Lease of the Borough Lines, and all costs and expenses incidental to the formation of the Company up to and including the allotment of Shares, and the maintenance of the Line and Works for six months after the date of opening for public traffic.

12. The Birmingham and Western Districts Company have also agreed to pay interest to Shareholders, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum upon the capital paid up, until 12 miles of Tramways have been constructed and opened for traffic.

13. The proposed Capital expenditure on construction and equipment, including the Lines within the Borough, which the Corporation will construct, but not equip, is only £7,512 per mile, an amount which is not only considerably below the cost of the other Tramways already constructed in Birmingham and the neighbourhood, but compares most favourably with the average cost of Tramways in the United Kingdom.

14. The last published accounts of the Birmingham Tramways and Omnibus Company show a profit of over 20 per cent. per annum, upon the paid-up capital, and the Birmingham and Aston Tramways Company on its first half-year's working shows a profit at the rate of nearly 10 per cent. on the paid-up capital. The shares of both these Companies are quoted at a premium of 60 per cent.

15. The Directors confidently anticipate, from the relatively low cost "per mile," combined with the other numerous advantages referred to in this prospectus, that the present undertaking will return dividends at least equal, if not superior, to those of any other Tramway enterprise.

16. The following documents include all contracts entered into by or on behalf of the Company:—

I. Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company.
II. Provisional Orders, authorising the Birmingham and Western Districts Tramways of 1881, 1882, and 1883, and the Acts confirming the same.
III. Draft Lease from the Corporation of Birmingham of the Lines within the Borough.
IV. An Agreement, dated November 26, 1883, between the Birmingham and Western Districts Tramways Company, Limited, of the one part, and the Birmingham and Midland Tramways, Limited, of the other part. All the above may be seen at the Offices of the Solicitors.

17. Prospectuses, Maps, and Forms of Application for Shares may be obtained from the Bankers, Auditors, and Solicitors, or from the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company; and where no allotment is made the amount paid on application will be returned in full.

London, November, 1883.

THE Chancellor of the Exchequer is so much enamoured with the lovely ruin he has made, with the help of other hands, carrying out the great Cardwellian confusion, that he cannot refrain on all occasions from celebrating his achievements; and by degrees it is probable he will labour under the delusion, unless Lord Wolseley promptly undeceives him, that he won the battle of Tel-el-Kebir himself, just as his Gracious Majesty George IV., in moments of high excitement, was wont to assert that he had charged with the Cavalry at Waterloo. But it is really too bad for the Chancellor of the Exchequer of a Government responsible before the Empire for the Military efficiency on which its greatness depends, to throw over the eyes of his constituents a cloud of figures, in order to prove, what every soldier knows to be untrue, that the first line of the British Army is in a wholesome and efficient condition, fit for every duty, including fighting. Can any unbiassed person go down to Aldershot, or to any of our Military stations, and look at the rank and file of the battalions in training there, and conscientiously declare that they are fit for action? Lieutenant-Colonel Maurice, one of the officers whose selection for permanent service by Lord Wolseley has been justified by constant good work, in the field and out of it, has recently, in his evidence before the Committee, to fortify his Lordship's position respecting the danger of making a subterranean communication from France to England, or vice versâ, compiled a very interesting record of the occasions upon which war has broken out without any previous declaration, and when the striking of a blow was the first intimation of the picking of the quarrel. It would seem that England has had as much to do with such breaches of the peace as her neighbours; but whether she had or not, it is certainly desirable that she should be ready at any moment to send her first contingent to face the enemy, on any sudden outbreak, with some reliance on the discipline, steadiness, and physical capacity of the soldiers which compose it. We have no desire to disparage the deeds of the Army which, with a canal and railway in its rear, and its communications opened to the sea by the Navy, having illustrated, by a miserable break-down, the imperfect nature of the preparations for medical service and transport, made a short march from Ismailia, and routed Arabi's Egyptians, in a lusty spring out from the cover of the night; but we must protest, in the interests of our national reputation, against making that event a great feat of arms, calculated to inspire the utmost confidence in the country, and to justify the nation in believing that the troops which performed it would be capable of any of the deeds which made British soldiers under Marlborough and under Wellington famous for ever. It is true that Sir Archibald Alison, in the joy of his heart at the realisation of the bright dream of his life, when he found himself in the command of a Highland Brigade in the field, with generous impetuosity and all the perfervidum genus Scotorum, has magnified the "rapture of the fight," and, revelling in the long, rolling periods which describe the musketry and the smoke from the Egyptian trenches, covered with a glamour of words the gallantry of his kilted battalions. But the butcher's bill shows conclusively that whatever might have been the volume of sound and fury, the leaden tempest lost its force somewhere on the sand. There was nothing really in the sight of comrades falling thickly around them, and in the disarray of ranks caused by close and fatal fire, to test the stuff of the men. But it is principally on the rapidity with which this force was put on the banks of the Suez Canal, the War Office plumes itself. "Six weeks is all that was required." Lord Wolseley certainly kept his word as to the date with admirable accuracy. But surely Mr. Childers does not expect the country to accept as a positive fact that there were no previous preparations, and that an intervention in Egypt was never thought of—that no steps were taken towards its becoming a practical fact—till the day it was announced that Lord Wolseley would be placed at the head of the expeditionary force? Surely it was shadowed forth long ere July, that the Government were thinking of sending out an army for the purpose of restoring the Khedive to his proper place, rescuing the Suez Canal from possible interruption by the National Government at Cairo, and procuring the Bondholders payment of their coupons. Why, it is notorious that the whole situation in Egypt had been carefully examined months before, and that military experts had studied its conditions, and had laid down the lines of operation for an invading army; and many weeks ere the "six" of which Mr. Childers speaks, it was rumoured in every camp and barrack-room of the United Kingdom that the British Government was about to send a force to Egypt; and the very place in Egypt where the column was to land was pointed out, long ere a battalion received orders to hold itself in readiness. And in what state did the despatch of that force leave our home defences and Mediterranean garrisons? No, Mr. Childers, we are not happy,—charm you never so wisely, you men of Pontefract.

UNLIKE the Reports of other Departments of our Military System, which are produced annually, or thereabouts, that lately issued by the Director-General of Military Education relates to the last seven years. Notwithstanding the long period it embraces, and the variety and complexity of the subjects with which it deals, this work is so clear and so concise that it calls for little special notice, beyond that of commendation. The fullest information on all points connected with the professional education of officers is to be found in its pages. A preliminary paragraph states briefly the main divisions of the book. The successive changes in the constitution and staff of the Departments are then fully described. The regulations for the educational establishments, for the different modes of obtaining commissions, and for the qualifying for promotion, are given in detail. Yet the Report, exclusive of the numerous appendices, occupies only twenty-six pages. The first appendix is a list of the names of more than a hundred Examiners, without showing the periods during which they acted, or the subjects in which they examined. Then we have the general orders, circulars, and regulations for the management of the Military Colleges of Woolwich and Sandhurst, and for examinations for promotion. The next appendix relates to what, for want of a better name, is inappropriately called "Garrison Instruction." In the whole range of military knowledge, there are no subjects which have less to do with the work of garrisons than those which "Garrison Instructors" are specially employed to teach. The same appendix contains the "Instructions for a Course of Field Sketching for Non-commissioned Officers." A number of reports and returns relating to the Staff College and the "Advanced Class, Royal Artillery," follow; then come the regulations for the examination of Aides-de-Camp and of Militia and Volunteer Officers in Tactics; and lastly, the report of a Committee on Text-books of Topography. In the appendix relating to Sandhurst, we find "The Report of Conference on the Introduction of a Physical Competition for the Army." The best mode of instituting and conducting examinations for testing the strength, activity, and endurance of candidates for commissions is thoroughly considered, and all actual difficulties are removed or provided for. Yet the Secretary of State for War considered (in 1878) that "the practical difficulties were insuperable." The competitive examinations, now conducted by the Civil Service Commissioners, doubtless preclude some young men who have great political or other interest from obtaining commissions; and a physical competition would shut out others. Such results are probably the practical difficulties which were considered insuperable. In nothing is a change more needed than in the mode of testing visual power. A man to whose eyes all enemies at a distance of half a mile would be dressed in "invisible cloth," might be able to see the "normal" black dots across a room with the required distinctness. Even those who decidedly object to muscular energy being allowed to compensate for mental inferiority, would admit that a minimum standard of strength and activity might be fixed, even if competition be for the present rejected. Military history teems with instances of the use of superior strength and activity in battle. Napier tells us of the personal advantages of Marshal Beresford, of Waldron of the 27th, Lloyd of the 43rd, and many others. Turning to Indian history, the case of Lieutenant Patterson, of the Bombay Army, in the action at Corygaum, in 1818, stands boldly out. This officer was 6 ft. 7 in. in height, with strength and bravery in proportion to his towering stature. He was shot through the body, and fell, mortally wounded; but he rose to his feet again, and seizing a musket by the muzzle with both hands, he laid about him with deadly effect. Of the Arabs who surrounded him, many were struck down, and the rest shrank back appalled beyond the reach of his terrible blows. He recaptured a gun which had been taken, and materially contributed to gain a hardly-contested victory against enormous odds, and to place the well-earned name on the colours of his regiment. From the lists of the final examinations at the Staff College, we learn that, of eighty-seven officers who passed, twenty-eight were specially qualified in French, twenty-six in German, nine in Russian, five in Italian, three in Spanish, one in Portuguese, one in Dutch, three in Turkish, five in Hindustani, three in Persian, one in Arabic, one in Hindu, and one in Pushto. This shows a satisfactory amount of linguistic attainments, at an institution where so many other subjects compete for the time and attention of the students. The Director-General informs us that many decided improvements have been suggested, and are being introduced. Some of these changes deserve more lengthened notice than our space allows. The Report contains some of those eccentricities of diction which we find in most documents emanating from the War Office. The number of Cadets passed for commissions at the Royal Military Academy is called in one place the "normal output," and in another, "a greater outflow than the normal establishment permitted." The word "output" is generally used to signify the quantity of coal or other useful matter taken from mines; and "outflow" is more suggestive of some hydraulic operation than of supplying officers for the Army. It is straining the meaning of the word "normal" to apply it to establishments and numbers that are not determined on any fixed principles, but are liable to alteration according to the views of the exigencies of the service which may happen to be taken for the time by the Secretary of State for War. "Commissions from the ranks" are mentioned among the "institutions by which gentlemen are selected and trained" for commissions! Our misused friend "nil" appears once more, instead of "none," on page 14. Still, in accuracy of detail, clearness of arrangement, and literary merit, this Report is far superior to the others which we have been reviewing lately. One thing certainly can be said for it; it bears on every page the impress of truth, and has not been prepared, as it is to be feared some other official documents have been, with the view of misleading and presenting things in a rosy light, for objects which we must deem discreditable, though they are too palpable to do any actual injury.

WHEN the Duke of Edinburgh was Admiral-Superintendent of the Reserves, his Royal Highness was, we believe, wont to call Mr. Rickard his "Travelling Secretary." Now that he has been appointed to the command of the Channel Squadron, the Duke of Edinburgh has selected that officer as his Secretary. Were the list of the Accountant Officers of the Navy carefully gone through, it might be found that no better officer could be selected for the appointment. No doubt, there are many as good on the list, and many not so good. That, however, is not the question. Mr. Rickard is an Assistant-Paymaster, and, from time immemorial, it has been the custom of the service that the Secretary to a Flag-officer should be a Paymaster On numerous occasions, both Commodores and Admirals have applied to the Admiralty to be allowed to break this rule, and to retain an Assistant-Paymaster as Secretary; but on each occasion the application has been refused, on the ground that it was "against the custom of the service." Why, then, should Mr. Rickard be appointed to act as Secretary to the officer in command of the Channel Squadron? If the Admiralty desired to make the Duke of Edinburgh unpopular in the service, which is not very likely, they could not set about the work more effectually, for each time they employ his Royal Highness, officers who can ill afford to be passed over are made to suffer. The Admiralty cannot refuse to employ the son of the Queen, however much they would like to do so; but they make his employment a bone of contention. The appointment of the Duke of Edinburgh to command the Channel Squadron has deprived an officer on the Vice-Admirals' list of employment, long-looked forward to, and well merited. Not only will this officer, whose career is brought to a premature close, feel aggrieved at being kept out of the appointment he believed to be his by right; but others, will feel that they, too, have suffered. The Duke, having been advanced to the Vice-Admirals' List out of his turn, should be employed on special service, and not in appointments belonging by right to others. In the Paymasters' line, the same feeling will exist. And why? Because the Admiralty keep a Paymaster out of employment, and in the cold shade of half-pay, by the appointment of an Assistant-Paymaster to the Secretaryship in the Channel Squadron. It was not necessary to send Sir William Dowell to the China command. This, however, the Admiralty have done, and by so doing, and by appointing the Duke of Edinburgh to relieve him, their Lordships have taken away from two officers on the Vice-Admirals' List, officers who had every right to expect that they would reach the highest grade in the service, the chance of future employment, but who will now have to retire without doing so. Instead of promoting Mr. Rickards to be a Paymaster in her Majesty's Navy, their Lordships appoint him, while he is still an Assistant-Paymaster, to be Secretary to the Duke of Edinburgh. True, they make the appointment an "acting" one. A report is current that their Lordships offered the command of the China station to Vice-Admiral Hood, C.B., but that this officer was forced to decline the appointment, owing to the state of his health. There are, however, many other Vice-Admirals on the list, and amongst these there are six officers who, unless employed within the next year or two, can never hope to again hoist their flags. Two of these officers had the right to expect a command in 1884; but, the Admiralty having transferred Sir William Dowell and brought in the Duke of Edinburgh, their sole chance of future employment is gone. Thus, two Vice-Admirals and a Paymaster are deprived of the highest appointments they could reasonably have hoped to hold in the Service. But the Admiralty, of course, save money by not creating a special appointment, such as a flying squadron, for the Duke of Edinburgh, and by employing an Assistant-Paymaster, in lieu of a Paymaster; and this fact probably carried weight at Whitehall. But if the Admiralty can now depart from "the custom of the service" to please a Royal Duke, why could they not have done so in previous cases? In making these remarks, we desire it to be distinctly understood that we are not calling in question the qualifications or claims to employment of the officers concerned, but the Naval administration. Far better would it be to see a responsible Lord High Admiral, in the person of the Duke of Edinburgh, supersede an incompetent Board of Admiralty, than to have a political administration of the Navy presided over by a civilian, however able; and in so saying, we allude to Boards which, as justly remarked by Sydney Smith, "are only fit to make screens."

MR. FORSTER'S remarks on the Volunteer Force, at Bradford on Wednesday evening, strike us as in some degree likely to mislead with regard to the objections which were taken very long ago, by good military critics, to the composition of the Force. It is quite true that when the Volunteers first made their appearance there was a considerable amount of unjust criticism on the part of many who had really no desire to throw discredit on any institution which tended to develope the Military power of the country; but who are not at all impressed, as an element of defensive strength, with the aspect of a sporadic irruption of armed men, dressed in fantastic attire, who claim almost a complete autonomy. It was not without a struggle—sometimes strenuous, and certainly long-continued—that the War Office succeeded in getting in hand the corps, scattered all over the country, and forming them into one, if not harmonious, at any rate pretty homogeneous whole. But the Government only succeeded in that object by giving tit for tat. The purse-strings of the country were opened, in order to obtain the needful domination, and then by degrees the sums expended on the Volunteers, pure and simple, were augmented by contributions to the capitation, and by the pay of the Staff of officers of the Regular Army and of the non-commissioned officers, who had so much to do with licking, in a metaphorical sense, the martial cub into shape. Whatever estimate may be formed of the real fighting value of the Volunteers, should there be a very serious aggression on the country, no one can question the high opinion which foreign critics have formed and expressed of their value, under certain conditions. It is difficult to say whether Mr. Forster is justified in the statement that the country would have to pay a great deal more, if it were not for the Volunteers, because we do not see how, admirable as they are, the Imperial wants, now supplied by the Regular Army, are in any way lessened by the Volunteer Force. And, indeed, it may be that some abstraction from the recruiting power of the nation is to be laid to the door of the Volunteers, who have satisfied the love of Military display, inherent in this population, without driving men to take up arms to go abroad, to India and the Colonies. There were far more Volunteers in England at the time that Napoleon threatened to invade the country, but the fact did not prevent considerable alarm; and Mr. Forster's contention that the existence of the Volunteers now obviates panics, we hold to be untenable. If, to-morrow, the mighty Teuton—encouraged by the British occupation or annexation of Egypt, by the French protectorate of Tunis, or by general little plunderings of other people's lands south of the Danube and in the dominions of the Sultan—were to throw carelessly 300,000 or 400,000 men into Holland; while France, for purely defensive purposes, occupied Belgium, we do not think that the presence of the Volunteers alone, or even an array of the Volunteers behind, or before, the Regular Army and the Reserves, would prevent some little agitation on the western shore of the German Ocean. We fear, indeed, that Mr. Forster was right on one point,—that the Volunteers have contributed to develop a spirit which will render England less likely to attack others than she was in the old days, when William Pitt was ready to go to war about Nootk Sound, though few people had the least idea where that interesting geographical expression is situated.

The Duke of Edinburgh hoisted his flag on board the Minotaur on December 3, and will, it is expected, return to his command about the 17th inst., to take the Squadron to sea.

Vice-Admiral Sir William Dowell leaves Portsmouth in the hired transport Hankow on December 15 for China, to relieve Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes in the command of the China station. During the three years that Admiral Willes has held this important command, he has succeeded in giving offence not only to the officers of all foreign Navies serving on the station, but also to the principal European inhabitants and merchants with whom he has been brought into contact, and the advent of his successor is hailed with delight by all.

Fleet-Surgeon Gerald Molloy, R.N., embarked with his family on the 6th inst. on board H.M.'s troopship Himalaya, at Devonport, for passage to Malta, to take up his appointment as Senior Medical Officer of the dockyard.

The Admiralty have found it advisable to supersede the obsolete sailing schooners, employed on the Australian station for the suppression of the labour traffic in the South Sea Islands, by steam gun-vessels. But the Admiralty have also found the sailing schooners Harrier and Undine so utterly unfitted for the Mozambique Channel, that they have ordered these obsolete sailing schooners to the Australian station, to be employed in connection with the labour traffic of the South Sea Islands! When these two yachts were purchased, we warned the Admiralty that they would prove useless, and, as in the case of the Polyphemus, they, too, have now to be classed as failures.

Captain Hopkins, Director of Naval Ordnance, accompanied by Lieutenant Martin, R.N., visited Devonport and Keyham Dockyards, on December 4, and inspected the ships there being completed and brought forward for sea.

Vice-Admiral Sir William Dowell struck his flag on board the Minotaur, as senior officer in command of the Channel Squadron, at sunset on Saturday last.

The people of Plymouth, some time since, desired to have the old Eddystone lighthouse re-erected upon the Hoe. The site was chosen, and the foundation-stone was laid by the Duke of Edinburgh on October 20, 1882, since which little has been done, and that little only by fits and starts. For some time after the ceremony performed by the Duke, the few stones on the spot lay as they had been deposited by the carts, and up to this date only nine courses have been put together.

The Imperieuse, barbette ship, building at Portsmouth, will be launched on December 19.

The Admiralty have decided to make the Australian station a Rear-Admiral's command, instead of a Commodore's as at present. The Squadron will be considerably increased in numbers in consequence of this decision.

Admiral Porter, of the United States Navy, has drawn up a report on the defences of the United States, in which he asserts that even Spain could sweep American commerce from off the seas. He also states that the American coast is so unprotected that any ordinary ironclad could pass the batteries of every harbour in the country. We are glad to find Admiral Porter deprecating all thoughts of the possibility of war between England and America. As the gallant Admiral most justly remarks, the interests of the two countries are identical.

We wonder why, when arrangements are being made for the relief of the crews of the Carysfort and Superb, commissioned in September and October, 1880, none seem in progress for the Condor serving on the same station, and commissioned in August, 1880. It is this total want of system in relieving ships' companies, which causes so much dissatisfaction in the service.

In the Pall Mall Gazette of December 5, Sir E. J. Reed has given Admiral Fishbourne what may be called "a dressing" of a very severe type, for his attack on the theories of the late Mr. W. Froude, and we are bound to say that the castigation appears to have been not undeserved. But Admiral Fishbourne will, no doubt, stand to his old-fashioned guns, and the fight will be renewed, though there can be little doubt of the result.

Do keep the peace, dear friends of the Dominion, and do not trail your coat in the snow to provoke Brother Jonathan to dance upon it! Perhaps you will say it is that "old cuss" who is to blame for the performance of your war-dance, inasmuch as it is his provocation which forced you to raise the war-cry of your nation, and to take off your paletôt; but you should really make allowances, and consider that the raison d'être of the head of the United States' Navy is that the United States' Navy should be about to do something, and that he is bound to propose schemes for Congress to reject, in order that he may seem to "go ahead." It certainly is indiscreet to print such articles as the one we annex from the Hamilton Daily Tribune:—

> "Admiral Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B., of H.M.S. Pinafore, was an ass, and Admiral Porter, of the U.S. Navy, seems to be the same. The former had impossible schemes for assuring the superiority of the British seamen, and the latter has impossible plans for making the American Navy a terror to Great Britain. One or two ironclads are to be built on Lake Erie, and some morning they are quietly to drop down to the Welland Canal entrance and destroy its gates. Naturally enough the plan, coming from an American Admiral, is based upon the supposition that there will be no resistance from Canada. The past history of this country does not warrant our neighbours in acting upon such conclusions, for Canadian histories teach us that the American troops hurried across the Niagara River a little faster than they originally came over. Canada desires to have perpetual friendship with her southern neighbour, but she is human. The cool proposal of an American Admiral to build gunboats on the lakes, whereby costly public works constructed at our national expense for the common use of the commercial interests of the continent shall be destroyed, is somewhat irritating, and will cause every Government shipbuilding movement on the lakes to be watched with unusual interest. The building of ironclads on one side compels the building of them on the other. This is why we object to standing armies. If one country adopts the principle, another country is sure, if not bound, to follow. Instead of wasting our money in preparing war-vessels and war materials, let both countries apply the same amount of money to the construction of public works likely to promote the development of our international commercial interests."

The project of forming a School of Instruction for Mounted Infantry at Aldershot has been abandoned for the present, owing mainly to the expense the maintenance of such an establishment would involve.

News from Tonquin is anxiously awaited in France. It was expected some days ago, but for some reason or another there has been a delay in commencing operations. This has been attributed in some quarters to diplomatic intervention staying the sword of France when it was raised to strike. From France we learn that the delay is owing to the fact of the Minister of Marine having telegraphed to Admiral Courbet to employ the greatest possible number of sailors to aid him in his forward movement. Naturally, the operation of getting the Blue-jackets into line required some little time. This fact is a pretty sharp criticism on the Government for not sending out a sufficient number of troops, especially as it appears by the Yellow Book just published in Paris that they were aware of the presence of Chinese Regulars. As far back as April 16, M. Bourée, the ex-French Minister in China, telegraphed to his Government that 10,000 Chinese troops had already entered Tonquin, and that this was merely the advanced guard of considerable masses, with a good leaven of well-drilled, well-armed troops and foreign officers. On May 5, M. Bourée again telegraphed that 2,000 picked men had just embarked for an unknown destination, and that he had warned the Governor of Cochin China of this fact. On May 8, in a third telegram from M. Bourée said, "The despatch of troops to Tonquin continues." And yet, only the other day, the French Government pretended that it was not aware of the presence of any Chinese troops in Tonquin. This is on a par with the Ministerial declaration that the credits voted were not exhausted, and that there was money in hand, the fact being that if the money had not all been paid, all, and a good many million francs over, was owing.

Among the results of the Russian aggression in Central Asia, the accession to their military strength of the magnificent horses of the Turcoman tribe, and of the material for irregular cavalry of the tribes themselves, is not unimportant. It is stated, we see, that in the 58 provinces of European Russia, there are no less than 14,800,000 horses reported by the military authorities as fit for service in case of war.

An article in the Journal des Sciences Militaires on repeating rifles has attracted a good deal of attention in France. From this article it appears that a Committee was appointed some time ago by the French War Minister to select a type, and that some of the members of this Committee, instead of making a selection, have declared that it is perfectly useless to adopt a repeating rifle at all. In fact, they have behaved like the little fish who, on being asked with what sauce he would like to be eaten, protested that he did not want to be eaten at all, and thus drew down upon him the rejoinder, "Vous sortez de la question." The Committee has been at work for nine months, but has brought forth nothing; its deliberations have been kept secret, and it is complained that it has not taken the trouble to serve out 50 repeating rifles to some corps for trial. The Progrès Militaire gives us to understand that the author of the article in the Journal des Sciences Militaires is a member of the Committee opposed to any change, reminds its readers that when it was a question of introducing breech-loaders, the Artillery Committee and a goodly number of Infantry Generals gave their opinion that the adoption would constitute a serious tactical error, and this was after the Schleswig-Holstein and Sadowa experiences. The Progrès says that this obstinacy or obtuseness was one of the causes of the French disasters of 1870, because it was not until the end of 1868 that the Chassepôt was in the hands of the whole army. The result was that a great many soldiers of the second portion of the contingent were perfectly ignorant of the weapon with which they had to do battle in 1870, and used it in the most deplorable manner. In a good many regiments, men who rejoined the active battalions before Metz had to be initiated into the mysteries of the Chassepôt between the marches. Experience proved that the Artillery Committee and the Infantry Generals were wrong. "What officer," asks the Progrès, "would propose to go back to the old musket of 1842, and the ramrod?" Ergo, the repeating rifle should not be thrown aside, or France may once more find herself behindhand, and be taken at a disadvantage. It is pointed out that the Prussians, who, by the way, owe so much military renown to inventing or adopting improved methods of warfare, such as horse artillery, the iron ramrod, and the needle-gun, have become much enamoured of the repeating-rifle, with which several battalions have been armed. It may not have been finally adopted in the German Army, but it was experimented with during the recent manœuvres, and it has numerous and powerful friends. We are assured that the following words, pronounced by the present German War Minister, General Bronsort de Schellendorf, are repeated in all the Military clubs:—"It will be the same with the repeating-rifle as with the needle-gun. After the next war, it will enlist the suffrages of everyone." "And," says the Progrès, "all our letters from the other side of the Rhine declare that these rifles are being manufactured by thousands, and that it is highly probable that the definitive type will be adopted by the Empire before January 1." According to the Progrès, the repeating Mauser will be the rifle with which the German Army will shortly be supplied.

At a banquet given last week by the Drapers' Company, Capt. Fitzgerald, R.N., in returning thanks for "The Navy," observed that "as far as the personnel of the Navy is concerned, it has never been in a better state than it is at present; but in the strength and number of our ships, some people whose opinions are worthy of respect think we are deficient. An army of 100,000 men may be said to be a strong army, but in the presence of an enemy 200,000 strong, it would be a weak army; and in like manner, a squadron of 10 ironclads might be considered a powerful fleet, but if they were opposed by 20 they would not be so. Never before, in the history of this country, has she had so much wealth staked in commerce and in colonies, as she has at the present moment, and never before has the fighting Navy of England been so nearly approached in strength by that one single European Power as it is at the present moment. There are some people who, judging by past events, look upon our weakness with alarm; now they may be right, or they may be wrong, but if they are justified in feeling anxious on the subject, the question arises, 'Who is responsible for this state of affairs?' Certainly not the Admiralty, for they spend every shilling that they get to the best possible advantage, to keep up the efficiency of the Navy, such as it is. Certainly not the present Government; they are pledged to the country for economy, and are bound to keep down the Estimates at all hazards. Not the Conservatives either, for when they were in power they did nothing to increase materially the strength of the Navy; their hands were tied also by this craze for economy, regardless of consequences. Who, then, is responsible for this state of affairs? It is the merchants and the people of England at large, who return members to Parliament who are pledged to economy, and to keeping down the estimates, without due regard to the efficiency of the Navy, and to the vast wealth which it would have to protect in case of war." Capt. Fitzgerald continued, "Gentlemen, you will have gathered from my remarks that I am of no politics, I do not think that a naval officer ought to have any politics, or if he has he ought to keep them to himself, and not express them publicly. He should be as ready to do his duty to his Queen and country whether the Liberals or the Conservatives are in power, and it is because we are ready to do our duty under all political circumstances that we view with pain and regret the practice of making the Navy and the Army the battle grounds of party politics, and the arena wherein the two political parties in the State engage in party warfare, and exchange recriminations and taunts. I believe it is the duty and the interest of all Englishmen to do all in their power to raise the services above the platform of party politics, and insist that they should be kept at a strength commensurate with the requirements of the empire, whichever party may happen to be in power, and I would urge all here present to use their influence in that direction. I thank you, gentlemen, for having listened to me with so much patience, but I thought that you might be interested to hear a naval officer's views about the Navy." And very sensible and well put they were, we think.

At the meeting of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution on Thursday last, the 6th inst., Mr. Edward Birkbeck, M.P., in the chair, the sum of £266 was granted to lifeboats for services during the past month, resulting in the saving of 41 lives. Payments amounting to £1,723 were made on some of the 274 lifeboat establishments of the Institution. A further contribution of £480 had been received by the Institution from the Civil Service Lifeboat Fund, to be appropriated in providing a new lifeboat for the coast, and to be named the "Civil Service No. 4." Upwards of 6,500 Civil servants subscribed annually to this fund, which has contributed £1,480 to the Institution during the current year, and £6,344 7s. in all since 1866. The Independent Order of Oddfellows (Manchester Unity) had forwarded to the Institution their usual annual subscription of £50 in aid of the support of their lifeboat at Grimsby. New lifeboats have recently been sent by the Institution to Caistor, Norfolk, and Aranmore Island, on the north-west coast of Ireland.

Two of the shells fired by the Inflexible, at the bombardment of Alexandria, have been placed outside the official residence of Capt. Fisher, of the Excellent, at Portsmouth. The shells, which weigh over 1,200 lb. each, after travelling more than four miles from the mouth of an 81-ton gun, were found unexploded.

NOTES FROM ALDERSHOT.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

LONG-RANGE musketry practice, from 1,000 to 2,000 yards, has been going on in the Long Valley during the week, with the new experimental rifle recently issued to the 3rd Battalion, Rifle Brigade, for trial and report. The results of these experiments are, as far as they have gone, most satisfactory.

Four officers and 200 men of the Brigade of Guards left the Camp on Wednesday for London and Windsor, on completion of musketry and military training.

The band and casuals of the Royal Horse Guards arrived on Wednesday from London, for carbine practice.

It is proposed by the Commissariat and Transport Corps to place a memorial brass in the Iron Church, South Camp, in memory of the officers and men of the corps who died in Egypt.

The Divisional Drag Hounds had two excellent runs during the week. On Monday the meet was at Guildford Park Farm, and on Thursday at Crondall.

A Promenade Concert, which was well attended, took place at the Officers' Club on Thursday. There will be a dance at the Club on the 17th inst., commencing at 9.30 p.m.

The Rev. Stewart Patterson, Church of England Chaplain to the Forces, has been taken on the strength of the Division.

Brigade-Surgeon W. H. Muschamp has been ordered to the Curragh for duty.

Lieutenant A. M. Stuart, R.E., has been ordered from Chatham to Aldershot.

THE NEW ARTILLERY UKASE.

"A Lieutenant-Colonel, R.A.," writes:—"In a communication, surely the most curious ever issued from a great public office, the new Deputy-Adjutant-General, Royal Artillery, seemingly on his own responsibility (as it is written neither 'by desire' nor 'by direction' of his Royal Highness or any Secretary of State, nor is any Royal Warrant, General Order, or Army Circular quoted as authority), has decreed that the lieutenant-colonels, R.A. (Indian Lists), are subject to removal from their commands to what he terms 'non-employment;' and further, that whilst unemployed they are to receive full regimental pay, but without allowances. These allowances constitute about one-half the income of a lieutenant-colonel, so that whatever doubt there may be as to the interpretation of the Henley Clause of the Amalgamation Act as regards tenure of command, there can be none as regards allowances, for these are particularly specified, 'pay,' 'pensions,' 'allowances,' 'privileges,' 'promotions and otherwise,' are the words. Again, no officer's emoluments can be reduced without a Royal Warrant or sufficient authority. It must be borne in mind that no promotions are to be made in their places, therefore a direct saving will be effected to the State by their misfortunes, and this action on the part of the Deputy-Adjutant-General will further cause one or other of these awkward predicaments,—either there will be no officers to fill the appointments of those, 19 in number, now being removed, or the Royal Artillery has too many lieutenant-colonels on its lists. This is no new matter; it has been discussed for years, and voluminous evidence taken thereon (see Blue-book of Lord Morley's Committee), yet the officers concerned, and deeply concerned, too, are given about five weeks' notice to quit, those in India, indeed, only a few days. It required a Royal Warrant to remove the officers of the old Royal List, but in the case of the Indian List, the Deputy-Adjutant-General, after two months in office, decreed, by a stroke of his pen, what his two predecessors and Lord Morley's Committee refrained from even recommending, believing, as they must have done, that these officers were protected by Parliamentary guarantee. It is not convenient to call the present arbitrary step 'Removal from the regiment,' that would be a decided breach of the guarantee, but I would ask, what else is it? The officers are removed from employment, are deprived of half their income, and are told that they will be considered for further employment in common with the half-pay colonels of the old Royal List. It is, no doubt, inconvenient to have officers of the same corps serving under different rules, but if it is necessary, for Imperial reasons, that the Indian List lieutenant-colonels should be removed from their commands, it is neither necessary nor just that they should be deprived of half their income, especially, as in the present case, when the State will be a direct gainer by their loss. No doubt, it is desired that these officers should retire on their pensions, and pressure is put upon them with that view, seeing that they cannot be compulsorily retired; but such a course is not honest, and very much to be deprecated in the interests of the service. It will not even be successful, for no one will retire until every means of obtaining redress has been exhausted, including an appeal to Parliament."

The Auxiliary Forces Uniform and Equipment Company Limited, has been formed with a capital of £250,000, for the supply of uniforms and every kind of equipment to the Military, Naval, and Auxiliary Forces at home and abroad. The object is to form an auxiliary factory to that of the Government at Pimlico, capable of carrying out the largest orders, and combining economy with excellence of workmanship. In order to form a nucleus for the Company's business, and to enable them to commence at once, the Directors have obtained an offer for sale to them of one of the largest Army clothing factories in the United Kingdom, on terms which they consider highly advantageous, together with the whole of the mills, machinery, plant, stock-in-trade, and running War-Office contracts.

OUR CRUISERS.

Sir,—Will you permit me, as a practical man, to state some of the causes which, as far as my experience goes, lead to such scandalous waste of public money in the Royal Dockyards—a subject which many will be glad to see that you have taken up? I fear, however, it is useless to expect reforms at present, judging from the fate of a certain gallant Admiral-Superintendent, who recently took to looking rather closely into certain matters generally ignored. My conclusions are drawn from what I have observed during many more or less lengthened sojourns at some of the principal dockyards, while in the service of one of the leading firms of shipbuilders in the country, who have not only built many ships by contract for our Government, but also a great number of ironclad and other vessels-of-war, some of large size, for different foreign countries. To some people, the subjoined causes of expenditure may seem trifling, but, taken in the aggregate, I believe they will account for a great deal of hard cash in the course of the year, and any private firm that ignored them would soon go to the wall. The first thing which strikes one is the amount of time-work, instead of piece-work, that prevails among the workmen—an arrangement which renders it to every one's advantage to spend as much time, and, therefore, money, over a job as possible. I was particularly struck with this when paying a visit to the Inflexible, about a year after she was launched. In every compartment men were to be found idling and gossiping, instead of working. Some would, on seeing a stranger, take up a hammer or other tool, and make believe to be hard at work; but as soon as the coast was believed to be clear the energy evaporated, and the yarn was resumed. From the number of small compartments into which this ship is divided, unusual facilities were afforded for this kind of thing; and as there seemed to be no proper supervision exercised over the men, they were made the most of. Many of the constructors, &c., seem to be quite aware that this goes on, but they cannot be expected to run the risk of getting into a scrape, by coming out as red-hot reformers. Once, when round at Devonport, with a vessel built by my employers' firm, I was amused by one of the overseers from the dockyard, who had charge of her while building, asking me to lend him one of my men to chip a piece off a racer, for, as he said, "It must be done at once, and it won't take him an hour; but if I put one of our dockyard chaps on it, he will take a day over it." There is a great damper on energetic work, in the feeling which many of the men have that it is everybody's, and therefore no one's money in particular, that is being spent, for as I once heard a dockyard carpenter say to one of our men who was pushing on a job, "What the —— are yer slaving at? It's nobody's money yer earning!" A great deal of money is wasted by the ignorance which frequently prevails in one department as to what is being done by another, a game of cross-purposes that often leads to work having to be pulled to pieces and redone two or three times over. Much the same thing frequently occurs from the over-centralisation of the chief direction of everything in Whitehall, and the apparent inability of the authorities there to make up their minds, for months sometimes, about the most trifling matters. As a rule, too, the plans which emanate from that quarter are, to judge by those sent to contractors, hopelessly inaccurate, which is scarcely surprising, if the draughtsmen never see the ship while building. Every draughtsman knows that no plan will stand perpetual drawings-in and rubbings-out for alterations, and therefore apparently but little faith is put in plans at the dockyards, and the chief reliance placed on "setting up a mould at the ship" of anything that is wanted. The consequence is that, suppose the mould is that of a gun, it is tried, and found to traverse, &c., very well, and clear of everything; the work proceeds and is nearly finished, when some one suddenly finds out that there is a skylight or something in the way, which was forgotten when the mould was tried, and the whole arrangement has to be altered, and half the ship cut to pieces to do it. I could give many instances in which this has occurred, but I have already taken up too much of your space. If some First Lord, or other person in authority, being a practical man, could manage to spend a few days unknown at one of the dockyards, he would see much to enlighten him. In conclusion, let me pay a tribute to the desire of the constructors to get the work done in the best possible way. They are, however, the victims of the system, and are, as a rule, miserably under-paid for the work they have to do, and the responsibility it entails. If they were properly paid and given greater facilities for seeing the practice of private yards, much improvement might be hoped for. It is unreasonable to ask a man to do work worth £600 or £700 a year for £300, or to expect him to be other than narrow-minded, when he is screwed down by the prejudices and traditions of his superiors, and has not the spur of competition.—I am, &c., A Naval Architect.

MILITIA MUDDLES.

"A Captain of Militia Artillery" writes:—"In your issue of Dec. 1 'Garrison Instructor' has given a definition of fraudulent enlistment which, if allowed to stand, might lead to very serious misconstruction being put on the meaning of Army Act, sec. 13. He falls into the very common error of misunderstanding the meaning of the word 'embodiment,' and confusing it with 'assembly' for training, preliminary drill, &c. I do not know where any legal definition of the term 'embodiment' is to be found, but that it means placing the Militia 'in' the 'body' of the Regular Army in time of war or imminent national peril may be inferred from the word itself, and from the fact that the Militia cannot be 'embodied' except by Act of Parliament. There ought to be no doubt as to the meaning of the term, as its misconstruction might lead to very serious injustice to men enlisting into the Regular service from the Militia when out for training. No officer pretending to teach military law ought to have a doubt on the meaning of the term 'fraudulent enlistment,' and if 'Garrison Instructor' teaches his pupils such heterodox doctrines as that enunciated in his letter to you, some future day those pupils may be trying, and, on conviction, punishing, for fraudulent enlistment, some unfortunate Militiaman who, in the eyes of military law, has only committed the lesser offence of making a 'false answer on attestation.'"

SOME MAGAZINES.

A writer in the current number of Blackwood draws an amusing picture of the Corrupt Practices Bill which the Legislature has now in hand and points out how it proves one or other of two things,—either that the electoral body is almost hopelessly corrupt, or that our ideas of public morality have suddenly become very sensitive. At one time it was hoped, and even anticipated, that the Ballot would effectually put a stop to all corrupt practices, whereas it has only had the effect of diverting them into another channel. It did away with the chance of electors selling their cabbages at £10 a-piece, or a plate of gooseberries for £25, or, on the other hand, where an elector was able to buy a sow and nine young pigs for twopence. The Ballot also put an end to the elector borrowing sums of money from the candidate, for which he gave a promissory note, or going up to the poll with a warm supporter of either party standing on each side of him, and after giving his vote, receiving a most affectionate and prolonged squeeze of the hand from the representative of the party for whom he had given his vote. However, at the last election all this was at an end, and it became quite possible for an unscrupulous candidate or his agent to earn two years' imprisonment and hard labour. There is no doubt that the Corrupt Practices Bill is a new dispensation for those who have passed through the storms and tempests of past elections, when the joint expenses of three candidates in Yorkshire in 1807 amounted to little under half a million. But times are altered. By the present Bill it is enacted that the legal expenditure for each candidate is for the future to be strictly limited to £950 for 5,000, and £60 for every additional 1,000 electors, this to include agencies and every possible item of expenditure, with the exception of the candidate's hotel bill, which under no circumstances must exceed £100. As to "treating," the Bill provides that any person, either before, during, or after the election, provides or pays in whole or part the expense of giving entertainment, shall be guilty of treating and its consequences. As a specimen of the pitch to which treating had reached, we are told that in a small borough not many years ago, on the election morning, there was consumed at a breakfast, beside veal, mutton, poultry, and pastry, 980 stone of beef, 315 dozens of wine, 72 pipes of ale, and 865 gallons of spirits. So far, the Corrupt Practices Bill deals a heavy blow to agents, attorneys, and others, but a friend comes to their aid in the form of the 21st clause of the new Act, which exonerates candidates and agents from all penalties if the candidate has proved in court that no corrupt or illegal practice was committed with the knowledge and consent of the candidate and his election agent; and further, that such candidate and election agent took all reasonable means for preventing the commission of corrupt and illegal practices at such election. The writer in Blackwood may well call this "a remarkable Act."

In the National Review for this month, there are several papers of considerable merit, including one on "Questions of Army Reform," "Long Service versus Short Service," and "The Auxiliary Forces," of each of which we daily hear so much. Among the miscellaneous articles, there is a very peculiar and, to many, an interesting one. The title is quaint, "The Literature of Seven Dials," contributed by B. G. Johns. It represents the results, in a literary point of view, of a ramble among the bookstalls in the classic region of Seven Dials, including confessions and dying speeches of criminals, and paying tribute to heroic deeds, &c. The following is the only specimen we can notice. The subject is the battle of Tel-el-Kebir and the great Sir Garnet. Of course, the song is a song of triumph. Here it is:—

> "Such glorious news the other day
>   Was spread throughout the nation,
> How the Egyptians ran away
>   From where they'd took their station.
> Sir Garnet, with his artful ways,
>   Has took them out of winding;
> He dropped on them at break of day,
>   And a Tartar they did find him.
> This gallant man had formed a plan,
>   And the battle he has won it;
> The enemy's hide he meant to tan,
>   And by Jingo he has done it!"

The reader of this fugitive poetry, strange to say, will find more than one example of lines that have the ring of true poetry.

Admiral Peter Parley produces an excellent Annual this year, and Mr. George, of Hatton Garden, has put it in charming form and colour of life. It is exceptionally good, in our old-fogey eyes at least, in that Mr. Peter, who after several peripheries returned to his old system of giving instruction and amusement with the immense "pull" last year, as we thought, in the assistance he secured of his doggy friend, has enlarged his area of enjoyment and teaching, and has discovered "new fields and pastures new" for his little flock to disport in.

Surely in the great flight of Christmas Cards which is about to pass over the face of the earth, the hand-painted works of Mr. Luks, of Bedford Street, Covent Garden, are entitled to honourable mention? If it did not look too like a pun, we would say these "Royal cards," as they are styled, are indeed "de luxe," for they are exceedingly pretty and elegant, and if hand-painted, as we are assured they are, the prices are so reasonable that we should be inclined to engage the artists all the year round.

THE CRIMEAN GRAVEYARDS.

Sir,—Reading Gen. Sir William Codrington's letter of the 24th ult. relative to the British graves in the Crimea, has reminded me that on July 12, 1869, I put a question to her Majesty's Government in the House of Commons relative to a sum of prize-money, amounting, I think, to about £28,000, the produce of stores, &c., taken at Sebastopol. The answer I received was that the amount was so small that, if divided, officers would only receive 2s. 6d. and the men 6d. each. This money was, in consequence of the Queen's proclamation as to prize-money, the undoubted property of the Army and Navy, and I had already suggested that, as the sum was too small for distribution to the Army and Navy, professional institutions like the Soldiers' Daughters' Home, the Sailors' Daughters' Home, the Cambridge Asylum for Soldiers' Widows, and similar institutions should receive grants from it, but nothing came of that proposal. It is sufficiently painful to the feelings of the Army and Navy that, if I may so say, the hat has been sent round to collect the paltry sum of £300 or £400 for work which is required to be done to the cemetery. Surely the Army and Navy have a right to expect that their feelings shall be respected, and that their own money shall be employed not only in completing what is now required to be done, but that with it some permanent arrangement shall be made that, for the future, the cemetery shall be kept up in a state which would reflect honour, in place of disgrace, upon our country. Our gallant enemy of that day has given us the land, and it is too disgraceful that, at the end of a quarter of a century, it should be in its present condition. As soon as Parliament meets, I shall make enquiry about the money to which I have alluded, and the subject being free from all political feeling, I trust I shall be supported by all parties in assuring for the future that every care shall be taken of the last resting-place of as brave and devoted a body of men as ever died in upholding the honour of their Sovereign and the glory of their country.—I am, &c.,

J. Sidney North, M.P. for Oxfordshire.

The two gunboats which were used—or rather, were not used—upon the Seine during the siege of Paris, and which have since been lying up at Cherbourg, are about to be sent out to Tonquin. The Farcy gunboats, as they are called, after their designer, are about 50 feet long, by 14 broad, and they draw rather more than three feet of water when carrying the 10-inch. gun, weighing 15 tons, without its carriage, with which they were armed. These gunboats have two screws, and have a speed of seven knots an hour. It is intended, however, to arm them with rather lighter guns, so as to diminish their draught of water and increase their speed. Eight other gunboats, six for Tonquin and two for Madagascar, are being completed in some private dockyards at Nantes. These vessels (named the Arquebuse, the Avalanche, the Mutine, the Redoute, the Tirailleuse, the Rafale, the Bourrasque, and the Alerte), are easily taken to pieces, and they are built on a better plan than those now on service in Cochin China and Tonquin. Built of steel, they are 105 feet long, and are armed with four guns, placed upon protected platforms some distance above the deck. They have double screws, and engines of 120 horse-power, with a speed of from eight to nine knots an hour. The first of them will be ready in the beginning of January, and the rest at short intervals. Besides these gunboats, the Minister of Marine is having built at Lyons two quick river-boats, which are to be classed as despatch-boats, and have been built upon the plans of M. Farcy, the designer of the above-mentioned gunboats. They will be of about the same dimensions as the latter, but so constructed as to have a less draught of water, and to be adapted for river warfare.

A general court-martial assembled at Shorncliffe last month for the trial of Driver Lamden, charged with destroying a quantity of harness belonging to T Baty. 1st Brig., by cutting it into pieces, on Oct. 4. The court acquitted the prisoner.

Everybody who saw the Woolwich garrison pantomime last Christmas will be pained to hear of the death of Serjt.-Major Darby, who played the part of the old sea captain with the wooden leg. Rogers, R.M.L.I., two serjeants, two corporals, and one bugler, R.M.L.I., six gunners, R.M.A., and 54 privates, R.M.L.I., will embark in the Himalaya on the 8th inst., for passage to H.M.S. Superb, ordered to be paid off at Malta.

The following non-commissioned officers and men, R.M.L.I., have been awarded medals for long service and good conduct:—Qrmr.-Serjt. C. W. Slaney, 5th Company; Serjt. A. Harmer, 21st Company; Ptes. A. Watson, 37th Company, G. Gore, 24th Company, and Webster Glover, 38th Company; and Corpl. William Chester, 14th Company.

Lieut. E. G. Wilkinson has been ordered from Chatham to the Recruit Depôt, Walmer, for duty.

The Royal Marine Barracks at Stonehouse were first occupied on Dec. 8, 1783. Prior to this date, officers and men were quartered in barrack in Devonport and in billets in Plymouth. The centenary is to be celebrated this day by an afternoon entertainment and dance in the mess-room, and a dinner at head-quarters.

To avoid stagnation in the non-commissioned ranks, and to accelerate the flow of promotion, the Deputy-Adjutant-General has called attention to the orders of the Admiralty respecting the discharge of those who have completed 21 years' service and earned their pension. Those whom it may be difficult to replace, who have been recommended, and have a prospect of promotion to Warrant or commissioned rank, or who by serving another year may obtain the maximum pension of their rank, may be retained, with special application, and with sanction of the authorities.

52nd Oxfordshire Light Infantry. A farewell dinner was given last week by the Oxford University R.V.C. to their adjt., Major Johnstone, whose time is up. Major Johnstone's energy and ability, as well as his kindness, have endeared him to the whole corps, and his departure is much regretted.

56th Essex Regiment. Major Delavoye has been selected to succeed Major Orr, as Deputy-Assistant-Director of Military Education.

60th Rifles. The Gazette of the 27th ult. contained the following announcement:—"6th Battalion, Rifle Brigade—Capt. Thackeray, South Stafford Regiment, to be Adjt., vice White, Inniskilling Fusiliers." A correspondent asks, "How long is this farce to continue with regard to our rifle regiments,—I mean, of course, our rifle regiments proper? The Rifle Brigade recognise the Tower Hamlets Militia, and the 60th Rifles the 2nd Middlesex, but as for any sympathy existing between these regiments and their excrescent battalions in different parts of the empire, it is ridiculous to expect it. In your issue of April 8, 1882, you gave a scheme for the reorganisation of the linking of these battalions, to which the earnest attention of the authorities should be directed." Capt. Herbert, 3rd Batn., has embarked in the transport Poonah at Queenstown for conveyance to Egypt, to join head-quarters.

The Auxiliary Forces.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

Honourable Artillery Company. The H.A.C. Dramatic Club gave their annual performance at St. George's Hall, on Saturday, the 24th ult., in aid of their Lifeboat Fund. The pieces chosen for the occasion were Byron's "War to the Knife," and a comedietta by F. W. Broughton, entitled "Withered Leaves." The principal characters in the former were sustained by Staff Serjt. H. P. Matthews, Lieut. McKenzie, and Lieut. Woolmer Williams, ably assisted by Miss Rosie Dixon, and Misses Illington, Hodson, and Delphine. Serjt. Matthews is evidently a finished actor, and was intensely amusing as Mr. Nubbly. Lieut. McKenzie did his part fairly well, but did not speak up enough. The ladies, as usual, acquitted themselves exceedingly well. In the second piece the leading spirit was Pte. Hawkins, who played Tom Conyers to perfection. Lieut. Woolmer Williams was very good as Cecil Vane, and the character appeared more suited to him than that of John Blount, in "War to the Knife." Qrmr.-Serjt. Godwin made an imposing figure as Sir Charles Conyers. Private Read was decidedly weak in both pieces, and did not put enough life into his characters; he was altogether too stiff. Miss Illington and Miss Hodson were deservedly applauded as May Rivers and Lady Conyers. On the whole, it was a decided success, and a good deal above the average of amateur performances. No time was lost, as is so often the case with amateurs; the performance commenced punctually to the minute, and good time was kept throughout. The house was crowded in every part, and the band of the regiment played an excellent selection of music during the evening.

EXAMINATION QUESTIONS.

"N." writes:—"I see in your last issue that your correspondent 'M.' ridicules the type of questions now set at military examinations. Although puzzling, to have them set correctly is not expecting too much. I refer to the fortification paper for Militia subalterns set in September last, in which the scale of one of the problems was so great as to make the solution impracticable. This, I have little doubt, proved a trap to all; it certainly was, although successful, to me."

The Boadicea is to be supplied with Whitehead torpedoes of an improved pattern, and two new breech-loading guns are to be exchanged for two of her muzzle-loaders.—Hampshire Telegraph.

"Claudian," the new romantic play by Mr. Henry Herman and Mr. W. G. Wills, produced at the PRINCESS'S THEATRE on Thursday evening, is in a prologue and three acts, and is superbly decorated. The period of the play is assigned to the fourth and fifth century of the Christian era, and the architecture and costumes have been specially designed by Mr. E. W. Godwin, F.S.A., who has been most industrious in his researches. The action commences in the Greek city of Byzantium, in great part rebuilt by Constantine, who doubled it in size, made it the capital of the Empire after his own name (Constantinople), and at the date of the prologue, A.D. 330, solemnly dedicated the city to the Virgin Mary. The scenic embellishments are on a very elaborate scale, and there is a very comprehensive cast, the principal personages being represented by Miss Eastlake and Mr. Wilson Barrett.

With this week Miss Mary Anderson terminates at the LYCEUM her performance of Pauline in "The Lady of Lyons," and appears as Galatea in Mr. W. S. Gilbert's classical comedy of "Pygmalion and Galatea." Entirely new scenery has been provided for the occasion by Mr. Hawes Craven, and the piece is produced not only with the author's sanction, but under his personal supervision.

The OLYMPIC, redecorated, and partly reconstructed, has been opened, under the management of Mrs. Conover, with Mr. Henry Pettitt's four-act drama of "The Spider's Web," originally produced at Glasgow last May. A London audience, however, laughed at the serious situations, and grew solemn during the humorous scenes. Under these circumstances, not even the excellent acting of Miss Alma Murray, Miss Laura Linden, and Mr. Anson could avert a disagreeable result. Morning performances of "She Stoops to Conquer" are announced, and the old comedy will probably soon take the place for a time of the new drama in the evening programme.

The STRAND THEATRE has been brightened during the week by the presence of Mr. Edward Compton and his excellent comedy company, whose appearance in O'Keefe's lively comedy of "Wild Oats" has been warmly welcomed. Mr. Compton gives an admirable portraiture of Jack Rover, the gentleman strolling-player, who quotes fragments of theatrical texts on every occasion, and while Miss Virginia Bateman (Mrs. Edward Compton), Miss Sylvia Hodson, and Mr. T. S. Blythe conspicuously shine as the Quakeress Lady Amaranth, the rustic maiden Jane, and that hearty old boatswain, John Dory, the other parts are most efficiently filled, and the whole entertainment is thoroughly enjoyable. The revival, compressed into three acts without the loss of a single effective situation, has been very carefully placed on the stage, with strict adherence to the costumes of the close of the last century, when the piece was originally produced at the Covent Garden Theatre.

Within a year from the destruction of the old building, the new ALHAMBRA THEATRE in Leicester Square has been opened, and so much greater security to audiences has been attained by the employment of incombustible material and the improvement of the general arrangements, that the disaster of last December seems to have been only a blessing in disguise. The stage has been considerably enlarged, and the proscenium is now 40 ft. wide. The original fairy spectacular opera, written by Mr. G. R. Sims, composed by Mr. Frederic Clay, and entitled "The Golden Ring," has achieved a well-deserved success. Mortals and supernaturals engaged in the inevitable conflict between vice and virtue are employed in the illustration of a pleasantly-contrived fable, and the introduction of "The Fishery Exhibition" into a region of fairy-land has been managed with ingenuity. The hen-pecked monarch and his Queen Arethusa are humorously represented by Mr. J. G. Taylor and Miss Sallie Turner, and substantial service is rendered by the other members of a very numerous company, including Miss Constance Loseby, Miss Marion Hood, Miss Kate Hamilton, Miss Irene Verona, Miss A. Newton, and Messrs. Gaillard, Mervin, Honey, and Aynsley Cook. The ballets are brilliant, with Mdlle. Pertoldi as principal dancer; the elaborate scenery, painted by Albert Callcott, Bruce Smith, and Brooke, most effective; and the highly efficient orchestra, led by M. Rivière, executes with adequate skill and precision the tuneful compositions of Mr. Frederic Clay. The chorus of fisher-folk, sung without accompaniment in the second act, is an excellent example of real English melody.

To the great gratification of all mirth-loving playgoers, Mr. J. L. Toole, returning from his highly successful provincial tour, reappears at his own theatre this (Saturday) evening. His earliest novelty, reserved for the New Year, will be a new three-act comedy by Mr. Arthur Law, called "A Mint of Money."

The last weeks of "Iolanthe" are announced at the SAVOY. Mr. Edward Terry returns to the GAIETY on Monday night, when he will appear in Mr. Pinero's comedy of "The Rocket" and Mr. Byron's burlesque of "Fra Diavolo."

"Gillette," at the ROYALTY, is an acknowledged failure, and will be withdrawn at the end of the present week. DRURY LANE is now closed till Boxing night, to allow the requisite preparations to be made for the pantomime of "Cinderella."

Instead of the French ballet of "Excelsior," it is understood that a short season of Mr. T. H. Friend's English Opera Company will be commenced at COVENT GARDEN THEATRE in January.

THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the Glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d, tins, 1s 1½d, labelled "JAMES EPPS and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, M.D., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

THE CHANNEL SQUADRON.

Portland, December 4th, 1883.

THE Squadron, at present consisting of only four ships, assembled here on Thursday last, Nov. 29. The Agincourt and Northumberland left Plymouth Sound the previous evening, and arrived and moored here in the forenoon. The Sultan and Neptune left Spithead at daylight, and arrived in the afternoon. They had been detained for the night, to enable the captains and officers to attend a reception given by Lady Hornby, to meet the Crown Prince of Portugal. The customary salutes were exchanged between the Agincourt and Hercules, the First Reserve ship stationed here, and afterwards between the Agincourt and Sultan. On Monday the small-arm companies from the different ships were landed for instruction and drill, each ship working independently. We leave this afternoon at three o'clock for Vigo, where we are timed to arrive on Monday next, the 10th, and as it is fine, clear weather, with a northerly wind, we ought to make a good start. The other ships of the squadron, the Minotaur and Achilles, will join us there. The Minotaur is detained at Portsmouth, owing to the change of Admirals, and the Achilles has not yet completed some necessary repairs at Plymouth. During the stay of the Neptune at Portsmouth, her rig has been permanently altered. The yards on the mainmast have been done away with, and a pole main topmast fitted. She is much improved in appearance by the change.

The Prince of Wales has presented his portrait, with his autograph, to the Sailors' Home, Portsea. The portrait has been placed in the seamen's reading-room.

Major Vallack Tom, who was relieved on the 1st inst. from the command of the detachment of Royal Marines on board H.M.S. Royal Adelaide, at Devonport, was entertained at a farewell dinner by the wardroom officers of the ship, prior to his disembarkation; and a similar dinner was given on the 4th inst. by the officers of the Plymouth Division of Royal Marines to Fleet Surg. Molloy, R.N., on his quitting the corps for service in the Mediterranean.

NAVAL NOTES.

The work on the Raleigh, cased, now lying in dock at Keyham, is likely to be prolonged for some time, as it is said that the Admiralty have determined that she is to be the new flagship on the Australian station, in succession to the Nelson. It has been decided that the command in Australia is in future to be that of a Rear-Admiral instead of a Commodore, and the Raleigh, which is fitted with a poop, is to have the necessary cabins and offices built under it. The time for relieving Comdre. Erskine in the Nelson is up at the end of next June, when an Admiral will most probably take over the command, his flagship following when ready.

The Valorous is now lying at her old moorings off Devonport Dockyard. The Admiralty have found the experiment of placing this useful old vessel in the position of tender to the Channel Squadron not to answer at all, and hence they have ordered the Forward, gunboat, to do that duty. The Valorous will revert to her old operation of carrying supernumeraries and stores from port to port.

We have it on the best authority, says the Western Morning News, that there is no foundation for the rumour that Com. W. McC. F. Castle is about to leave the Cambridge. The period of the gallant officer's service does not expire until August next. The rumour, which we mentioned on Saturday, arose from the generally circulated story that Com. Castle was likely to be appointed in command of the Pelican. We are informed that this is not correct, Com. Castle having served the whole of the sea time necessary to ensure his promotion.

Mr. Edward John Rutter, assistant-engineer, of H.M.S. Valiant, was tried by court-martial at Devonport on Dec. 3, for being absent without leave. Prisoner on Nov. 1 went ashore at Rathmullen and afterwards sent a telegram on board to Mr. Rose, the engineer, requesting him to apply for leave for him, as there was a Land League meeting at Londonderry and he wished to see it, and he would return by the first steamer next day. He did not return, however, until four days afterwards. Prisoner now admitted that he had acted in a moment of thoughtlessness, and pointed to his past services in mitigation of sentence. The court-martial records, however, showed that he had been previously convicted of drunkenness and ordered to forfeit 18 months' seniority, and that he had also been reprimanded for an offence similar to the present. He was sentenced to forfeit all seniority as assistant-engineer, and to be dismissed his ship.

In reply to an application from the dockyard hands at Portsmouth, the following letter was received from the Secretary to the Admiralty:—"I am to acquaint you with reference to your letter of the 7th ult., that the proposal to close the Dockyard on Bank Holidays throughout the year, as also on the Saturday after Good Friday, and to make certain arrangements for working up the time, have been carefully considered, but that My Lords are unable to concur in the proposed arrangements."

The Admiralty have decided to strengthen the armaments of the Fantôme and Tenedos by supplying them each with four Nordenfelt and two Gardner guns. These ships are now on the North American station, and the guns will be sent out from Devonport Dockyard as soon as the fittings are completed.

The refit of the Turquoise and of the Ready is being pressed forward with all possible despatch at Sheerness Dockyard, in consequence of an order from the Controller of the Navy directing these vessels to be ready for the pendant by April 1 next. The men employed in repairing these vessels have been placed on overtime to expedite their completion. The Admiralty have made a supplementary grant of a considerable sum of money to enable them to be completed with greater rapidity.

Admiral Gough, C.B., in acknowledging the toast of "The Navy," on St. Andrew's Day, at the annual banquet of the Liverpool Caledonian Association, said that on the part of the Navy, which he represented that evening, he begged to return them his most sincere and cordial thanks for the way in which the toast had been proposed and received. There were many present who, no doubt, were aware that for some time there had been a considerable controversy going on between the Admiralty authorities and some of our very ablest and most distinguished Naval officers relative to the state and condition of the Navy at the present time. Its state and condition constituted a subject of very great anxiety. That agitation and that controversy had done some good, inasmuch as it had awakened the nation to the paramount importance of maintaining the efficiency of the Navy, both with regard to the construction of its ships, its guns, the number of war-vessels, and the crews. For a long time they had been taking those things very easy, never realising the possibility of a Naval Reserve; and they certainly had lost sight of the enormous increase in the navies of nearly all the great European Powers. It must not be lost sight of that a navy could not be improvised like an army. It required a very considerable time. Let any Englishmen, or any Scotchmen, who were far-seeing and far-thinking gentlemen, realise what a reverse to their Channel and Mediterranean squadrons would be; and he was perfectly sure, whatever their political opinions might be, they would look upon the efficiency of the Navy in the light of not only a national, but a personal insurance, and never grudge that money so absolutely necessary to maintain it in a state fit to meet any emergency.

A correspondent on the West Coast of Africa informs us that the Portuguese have obtained a protectorate over Landana, where there are several English, Dutch, French, and Portuguese factories. A main depôt of the Brazza Expedition has been established at Lopez Bay, where a rumour was current that M. Brazza has been killed somewhere in the interior of the country. The Flirt will be sent to England after her return from the Niger, owing to defects in the frames under her boilers.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS, Etc.

L. C. (Indian Generals).—We think you will find our previous answer correct. The Warrant says, "The fixed establishment of general officers, including the names of officers of the Staff Corps, shall be 55." These names are kept on the list to regulate promotion, otherwise, officers on the general list would supersede the Staff Corps.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1883.

WE shall not attempt at the present moment to offer any opinion upon the Franco-Chinese quarrel, but it seems to us very probable that there will be eventually a compromise, without recourse to arms. There are quite dangers enough for France nearer home, to make her statesmen consider, not once nor twice, but very often indeed, before they enter upon a career in the Far East which may bring them into collision with the greatest multitude of people who own one Sovereign in the world. It is scarcely possible to undertake serious operations of an aggressive kind in Tonquin, with the means placed at the disposal of the French Admiral, who seems to be Commander-in-Chief. But although the Chinese authorities can command enormous masses of men, it is questionable whether, with all their improvements in armament and in discipline, and in the advantages of foreign leading, the Chinese could make head against the flower of the French soldiery, which we have reason to believe the Infantry of the Marine now out in Tonquin really are. At present there is an appreciable distance between the French advanced posts and the actual frontier of China Proper, but it would appear that the Chinese authorities are sending forward large bodies of troops, and if they should be pushed across the frontiers of Tonquin for the defence of Bacninh and Santoy, war between the two countries would appear to be only a question of days. The ships in the Chinese waters at present are, we understand, to receive several important additions; but Sir William Hewett's squadron is busy in looking after the Egyptian littoral of the Red Sea. From Cairo the latest news tends to confirm the intelligence that Hicks Pasha's Army was completely destroyed; but whether by massacre or desertion, or by wholesale surrender and conversion into slavery, or not, we have not means to determine. The safety of Mr. Vizetelly, the artist, seems to be established, and probably he may grow into a personage of the Mahdi's Court, for he is a many-sided man, and one that hath had losses, and has seen as many men and cities as Ulysses himself. It is to be hoped that the gallant and gigantic Seckendorff is also saved, and no doubt the Germans will do their best to press upon the Khedive the necessity of ascertaining the fate of an officer connected with an ancient family, a member of which occupies a high post near the person of the Crown Prince. The abstraction of peasants from the soil to recruit the Army, and the enormous expense, will tell most heavily on the Egyptian Exchequer, especially as it is not to be relieved of the cost of the English troops of the Army of Occupation. It is all very well for Cherif Pasha to send orders to guard the telegraphic communication with Berber; but what we are most interested in is to know what is passing far south of Berber, in the neighbourhood of Khartoum. Although it is very improbable that the Mahommedans of Afghanistan care much about the Mahdi, or even know as yet of his victorious progress, it is somewhat singular that we should read of the uprising of a Sayid near the Afghan frontier with a large following, who declares that he is a Mahdi, and professes the establisment of a government of the divine Moslem type two years hence. This revolt concerns Persia, but it is significant that this leader of the Turcoman hordes should have come from Cabul; and if he is not speedily attacked, it is most likely he will create trouble in Afghanistan.

We understand that General Sir Robert Biddulph will be allowed to retain the High Commissionership of Cyprus until June, 1885, to complete six years in the appointment.

If it were not that England is infested, like other countries, with associations of hopeless doctrinaires, half-crazed by foolish theories, it would not be thought possible that, in this year of grace 1883, an association such as the Peace Society could exist for the purpose of issuing little fly-sheets about the horrors of war and the cost of armies and navies; but there are to be found in all civilised communities, in a certain state of development, people with crazes who band themselves together for the evolution of the maggots in their brains, which develop either into Salvation Armies, or Mormon communities, or Social Anarchists, and the like. One Richard is the prophet of the Peace Society. This is the particular body whose special business it is to abuse the Army and Navy of their own country, and at times make us ridiculous by going abroad to air their fancies, and giving themselves airs in the presence of foreign potentates whenever a war is inevitable. Says Richard:—"The Military and Naval services are permanent ne'er-do-wells; improvident and hopeless spendthrifts and unfortunate beggars at the nation's door; horse-leeches always crying, 'Give, give!' and always sucking their victims." Richard, however, is in high spirits in his little paper about Army waste. He is quite affectionate to Sir Walter Barttelot, gloats over the Duke of Cambridge, and hangs fondly on Lord Cranbrook's lips; for has not the first inelegantly declared that matters have come to such a pass that it is necessary to look them in the face! We should be very glad if Sir Walter Barttelot will tell us where the face of the Army is. We sincerely hope no enemy will ever see its back. The Duke of Cambridge has delighted the Peace Society by complaining that desertions have become a profession, and that there is an enormous number of them; and Lord Cranbrook crowns the edifice of the Peace Society's happiness by declaring the British Army to be in a state of disintegration?

A valued friend and a severe critic has written to say, in reference to a paragraph in the Army and Navy Gazette, that the recruiting of the Staff Corps has not been "stopped," but that it has been suspended for a time as regards regiments at home, and in the Colonies. We admit that "Suspension" is not "Stoppage"—it is mechanically, and perhaps morally, though financiers would be much concerned when a bank breaks, whether the business of payment was stopped or suspended, a different operation. We learn, however, that the recruiting for the Staff Corps from regiments in India is neither stopped nor suspended, and that the suspension as regards battalions at home and in the Colonies is only temporary.

Most Medical Officers are sent abroad after eighteen months, or, at the outside, two years in England; but Surgeons-Major C. H. Y. Godwin and W. F. Stevenson still retain their appointments in the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich. The former took up duty in the Arsenal in November, 1878, the latter in August, 1879. The roster for foreign service in Whitehall Yard should be strictly abided by, as otherwise discontent will naturally be created, and discontented public servants are never willing workers.

A vacancy will speedily be created among the Aides-de-Camp to the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, by the promotion of Colonel R. Bateson.

A vacancy occurs among the Aides-de-Camp to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, by the appointment of Colonel H. Stewart, C.B., A.D.C., to the Staff at Dover, as Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General. Colonel Stewart takes up his new duties in the middle of January.

Complaints reach us as to the difficulty of obtaining eligible candidates to fill vacancies in the commissioned ranks of the Militia from several districts. In some regiments, five and six companies are going begging, and commanding officers appeal in vain to the War Office to assist them.

Brigadier-General Dunham Massy will vacate his command in India, and return to England, in the spring.

Clause 207 of the Army Circulars issued on the 1st inst. alters Article 117 of the Royal Warrant of March 11, 1882, which will now run as follows:—"All officers doing duty with their regiments shall take rank according to the dates of their appointments to such regiments, whether promoted on full pay or appointed from half-pay, provided that an officer appointed to command a regiment or battalion under Article 38 (a) shall exercise such command over any other officer serving therein, irrespective of date of appointment; but when serving together with officers of other corps, each officer shall take rank according to the date of his commission in our Army. Should two officers present hold commissions of the same date, their precedence shall, except in the case of an officer appointed to command a regiment or battalion, be determined by the respective dates of their previous commissions of like rank." The alterations in this Article refer to officers appointed to command a regiment or battalion, and are, without doubt, designed to meet the case of the junior Lieutenant-Colonel of a regiment or battalion being appointed to the command, the senior being, presumably, unequal to the duties of the highest position in the regiment. In such cases, the officer gazetted to the command takes precedence of the officer who was previously his senior, so long as their regiment remains un-brigaded with other regiments, but so soon as one or more other regiments are brigaded with theirs, the officer senior by Army rank once more regains his position as senior to his own commanding officer.

Major C. J. Ryan, 63rd Regiment, has been appointed Assistant Military Secretary to Major-General H. R. Browne, appointed to the command of the troops in the West Indies.

The question of the closing of Chelsea and Kilmainham Hospitals has, we understand, been indefinitely shelved.

There have lately been reports as to the steps which will be taken for the filling of the Governorship of Malta on the return to England of General Sir Arthur Borton, but his period of service does not expire until June 8, 1884.

Major-General C. Adams will vacate his brigade command at Gibraltar in April next, and return to England, on promotion.

Sir Henry Norman left England on Monday, to assume his duties as Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of Jamaica.

We are at a loss to know if anything is to be done to improve the miserably bad shooting of the Militia. The Inspector-General of Musketry, in his report for last year, called attention in the strongest terms to its shortcomings, and we have reason to believe that the practice for the current year was equally unsatisfactory, showing no signs of substantial improvement. Yet nothing, so far as we know, has been done to remedy a state of affairs which is dangerous, as well as discreditable. A large number of corps, from want of range accommodation, are still unable to carry on any target practice whatever, the shooting of most of the remainder is deplorably bad, and although Lord Hartington stated in the House that the Musketry Instructors of the Militia were not to be disestablished, like those of the Line, there are at present upwards of seventy battalions unprovided with Instructors. The whole condition of the Militia urgently calls for inquiry and reform, and we can only hope that both may come before it is too late.

As one of the results of recent committee work on equipment, it has been decided that a pair of light canvas waterproof slippers will be carried by the soldier in his valise on active service, instead of a second pair of boots, which will be carried in the first line of transport. A small supply of spare boots will accompany each battalion, to replace the few that may be prematurely worn out. It has been found that troops can keep the field, in a rough country, on one pair of boots, for two months, and it is believed that the addition of light canvas shoes, to put on when the boots have been removed, to ease the feet, will answer all requirements.

The forage-cap for mounted corps having been found most unsuitable on active service, it has been finally determined to substitute for it a cap that will fold flat, and which can be packed more coveniently than the present pattern. This cap, which will shortly be issued, is said to be quite as smart in appearance, and much more serviceable than the cap now worn by the mounted branches.

It is certain that the publication of the "Syllabus on Military Training," which is being prepared, will cause much change in the present mode of carrying out this annual course. Much of the "training" is a sheer waste of time, and worse. The instruction of trained soldiers in the rudiments of drill, for five or six hours a day, during two weeks of the six, cannot be a necessity. The other portions of the course, viz., advance and rear-guards, attack and defence of positions, outposts, reconnaissance, night-pickets, &c., could also be modified so as to make this annual six weeks' training a much more valuable means of improving the fighting-power of the British soldier than it is at present.

Several sets of a new valise equipment, made of material which is used for a similar purpose in several Continental armies, are now on trial at Aldershot. These valises will be thoroughly tested during the winter months, under all possible conditions, before being finally reported on.

The command of one of our Cavalry regiments, which has been rather going begging for the last fortnight, has now been accepted by a former officer of the corps, who has the advantage of some three years in age and one in service over the present second Lieutenant-Colonel. For this latter officer and the senior Major the greatest sympathy is felt by their numerous friends, in and out of the service, for their misfortune in having had to serve under one who has systematically prevented his juniors from acquiring that practice which is absolutely essential to working a cavalry corps with smartness in the field. They are both, however, well known as thoroughly good and reliable officers, and will doubtless loyally help their old comrade in his work of regeneration.

Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel B. A. Combe, and Majors St. Quintin, R. C. D'E. Spottiswoode, and Lord A. Compton are, we understand, to remain in India, and retain their Staff appointments, on the return of the 10th Hussars to England.

Mr. Childers stated at Pontefract on Wednesday that all apprehension on the score of Recruiting will soon be over, and he believed that by the end of March the force borne upon the Votes will be again at its full strength. We can only express our astonishment how Ministers can reconcile these statements with the deplorable condition of Artillery recruiting, and the under-strength of the Army in Egypt, as stated in a Ministerial paper, the Daily News, of last week.

We are somewhat surprised to hear that no action has, as yet, been taken with regard to the case of Brigade-Surgeon Elkington, of the Brigade of Guards. It cannot surely be for the good of the service to allow matters to remain as at present. Dr. Elkington has a right to claim a court of inquiry.

Messrs. Clowes and Sons have published a very convenient little book of forms for recording the drills and target practice of Volunteers, devised by Serjeant-Instructor Groom, 22nd Middlesex R.V. It is so arranged that any number of drills, up to 175, attended by any number of men not exceeding 150, can be entered so simply and easily that mistakes can only occur through inexcusable carelessness or ingenious stupidity. Serjeant Groom's little book is more convenient than the cumbrous War Office attendance books, and less liable to wrong entries than the cards or pieces of paper so often used.

Lieutenant-Colonel A. A. Stewart, R.A., has been appointed to command the Auxiliary Artillery in the Southern District, vice Colonel H. Cardew.

Lord Hertford has written an admirable article in the National Review of this month, on "Long and Short Service," totally devoid of political partisanship. His lordship clearly and dispassionately points out the errors of our ways. The Marquis protests most strongly—though with many compliments to all these high qualities—against civilian War-Office officials mixing themselves up with, and muddling, matters which must be better understood by the Military officers. All the more credit is due to Lord Hertford for his outspoken denunciations of the new systems, since he owes to Mr. Childers' last the enjoyment of an income of £550 per annum more than he could have ever anticipated. For, having arrived at the rank of General, by Brevet, without ever having held any substantive Field Officer's appointment, except Equerry to the Queen, his lordship was not entitled to a regiment, and would have remained unemployed on his unattached £450 per annum to the end of his days had he not luckily been active full General when the late Liberal War Minister took to reducing the list, and became bound by his new scheme to give Lord Hertford £1,000 per annum for submitting to be called a Retired General!

STOPPING OFFICERS' LEAVE.

"Nemo" says:—I shall be much obliged if you will favour me by giving a little space to the inquiry which I wish to make through the medium of your well-known paper. It is in regard to a point about which nothing is clearly stated in the Admiralty Instructions, which will, indeed, surprise no one well acquainted with that book. "Has the captain of a ship the power to stop the leave of any commissioned officer under his command as a punishment for what he considers a neglect of duty or disobedience of orders?" Having made this inquiry of all my shipmates and friends, I have not been able to get any decided opinion. Certain it is that it has been done in days not long gone by often enough, but what we want to ascertain, is not if it can be done, but if it is strictly allowable. Allow me to offer an example of this difficulty. A young officer, who may be either a sub, A. P., or Marine, has the misfortune to incur his captain's displeasure, say, for the first time, for a really minor offence or deficiency. The captain, not wishing to proceed to extremities with him, informs the officer that his leave is stopped for, say, a short period; thus reducing him to the level of a middy at once. The young officer, although feeling aggrieved, does not see his way to resenting the decision, even if really innocent of the said offence, because by asking for a court of inquiry, he will make himself unpleasantly conspicuous, and perhaps, by making a mountain of a molehill, ruin his chance of future promotion. At the same time, can that be the right course for any captain to take? for it seems to me that either the officer should be merely cautioned, or else, if the offence be considered grave enough, to subject him to the indignity of leave-stopping, as in the case of a refractory mid.; then surely the captain is bound to either make a first charge for a court-martial against him, or else by logging him, to show his displeasure. I shall be glad, in the name of many junior commissioned officers, to have this question settled.

EXAMINATION FOR PROMOTION.

Sir,—Under the above heading, in a letter from "A Disqualified F.O.," published in your paper on Nov. 17, 1883, he says that he is unable to furnish the questions set in the tactical and topographical papers. I can furnish the tactical papers, and beg to enclose them. I should feel greatly obliged, if you would publish them, together with this letter. Queen's Regulations give the names of certain text-books to be studied on this subject. If you had known these text-books from cover to cover, it would have availed you little or nothing, as the questions, if they can be called as such, are not from these books. I beg to call your attention to Question 3 (a) and (b) as an instance. Capt. Jocelyn, in his short notes on tactics and reconnaissance, says, "Larger bodies of cavalry, known as Cavalry Divisions, are found on the Continent, but are absent from our organisation." What ridiculous questions to ask captains of Infantry, or even Cavalry, in our service! The whole thing is a farce and an absurdity as a qualifying examination.—I am, &c.,

One who Passed in every Subject, but failed to qualify in the Aggregate.

MILITARY LAW.

Sir,—A "Garrison-Instructor" who wrote to you last week, is in error as to his law. "The Militia when embodied" means embodied for permanent service, and not merely assembled for training. Consequently, a Militiaman who, while his regiment is out for training, enlists in the Regular Forces, cannot be tried for fraudulent enlistment, but only for making a false answer in attestation. This is the authentative ruling, and I beg you will kindly make it public, so as to obviate any difficulty that might arise from the erroneous interpretation of the "Garrison-Instructor."—I am, &c.,

THE AUXILIARY FORCES UNIFORM AND EQUIPMENT COMPANY, Limited.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the supply of Uniforms and every kind of Equipment to the Military, Naval, and Auxiliary Forces at home and abroad.

The demand is increasing so rapidly that the Government Factory is unable to meet it, and a large part of the work is consequently done by private establishments, many of which are unable to execute any large orders.

The object of this Company is to form an Auxiliary Factory to that of the Government at Pimlico, capable of carrying out the largest orders, and combining economy with excellence of workmanship.

A large sum is annually provided in the Estimates for the clothing and equipment of her Majesty's Forces, to be supplied by private manufacture.

The field is immense:—

- (a.) There are in the Army, Navy, and Auxiliary Forces alone 260,000 men, whose uniforms and equipments are periodically provided by private contractors.
- (b.) In addition to these, some 600,000 men—composed of Metropolitan, Borough, and County Police, Irish Constabulary, Post Office, railway, marine and mail packet service employés—are supplied with uniforms by private makers.
- (c.) From Canada, Australia, India, and the Colonies generally, a large and increasing demand has also lately sprung up for uniforms and equipments for the Militia, Volunteers, Government, and other officials.
- (d.) Many foreign Governments also place similarly large orders in this country, so that the field of operations of this Company is almost without limit.

As the demand considerably exceeds the capabilities of the sources of supply, and as the manufacture of uniforms is one of the few lucrative British industries, highly remunerative profits are being made by private firms, and are expected for this Company.

In order to form a nucleus for the Company's business, and to enable them to commence at once, the Directors have obtained an offer for the sale to them of one of the largest Army clothing factories in the United Kingdom, on terms which they consider highly advantageous, together with the whole of the mills, machinery, plant, stock-in-trade, and running War Office contracts.

This factory stands on four acres of ground (the total area of the premises being seven acres), and is of a most substantial description, capable of employing 1,500 hands, and of turning out 3,000 garments a day. There are at present between 500 and 600 hands employed on War Office contracts for the Army only; it has been almost exclusively employed on War Office contracts for the English and Foreign Governments for more than 25 years.

From the large and influential list of patrons, who are themselves in command of strong battalions of Volunteers, great support is expected from the Auxiliary Forces alone, and it is anticipated the full capacity of the factory will be required when the Auxiliary Forces and other contracts have been received.

During the Crimean War large contracts were executed for the War Department at this factory. In the Franco-Prussian War more than 2,000 uniforms per day were turned out for the French Government, and on this contract alone, seventy-five thousand pounds profit was realised. During the late Egyptian War at least 1,000 garments per day were supplied to the War Department. The Spanish, Italian, Brazilian, and Argentine Governments have also been largely supplied.

In consequence of the extremely low rate of wages paid to their most skilled operatives, more than three-fourths of the whole of the contracts given out by the War Department to private manufacturers have been obtained by this factory on competition.

The services of the present Manager and staff will be retained.

THE AUXILIARY FORCES UNIFORM AND EQUIPMENT COMPANY, Limited.

To INVESTORS this undertaking should particularly commend itself for the following reasons:—

- (1.) No promotion money has been or will be paid, and there are no Founders' or Deferred Shares. The Directors have paid and made themselves liable for the costs and charges of and in connection with the formation of the Company and for various expenses subsequently incurred in reference to the Company, receiving on allotment the net amount so paid or incurred.
- (2.) On the basis of prices now paid by Government and other bodies, large profits may be expected.
- (3.) The Company thus acquiring Works in active operation, the business is of an assured character, and entirely devoid of speculation.
- (4.) The Company will at once commence business.
- (5.) The Directors receive a minimum fixed remuneration, which is increased only after 10 per cent. has been paid to Shareholders.

The Company have entered into the following contracts, viz., an agreement dated the 27th day of November, 1883, between Garth Ernest-Milner, of the one part, and George Graham Howe Fulton, the Secretary of the Company (for and on behalf of the Company), of the other part; and an agreement dated the 28th day of November, 1883, and made between James Willing, of the one part, and the said George Graham Howe Fulton (for and on behalf of the Company), of the other part.

It is intended to make application to the Committee of the London Stock Exchange for an official quotation and settlement.

In the event of no allotment being made, the application money will be returned in full.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares may be obtained from the Bankers Brokers, and Solicitors, and at the Offices of the Company, where the Articles of Association and the above contracts may be inspected.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

From SYMES and Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Medical Hall, Simla, January 5, 1881. To J. T. DAVENPORT, Esq., 33 Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London.

Dear Sir,—We embrace this opportunity of congratulating you upon the wide-spread reputation this justly esteemed medicine, Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself, not only in Hindostan, but all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES and Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a Liquid Medicine which assuages Pain of every kind, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without Headache, and invigorates the Nervous System when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff), discovered a remedy to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE.

The General Board of Health, London, report that it acts as a charm, one dose generally sufficient.

Dr. Gibbon, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states:—"Two doses completely cured me of Diarrhœa."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

COUGHS, ASTHMA, COLDS,

BRONCHITIS,

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,

PALPITATION, HYSTERIA, and is the true Palliative in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,

TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

GREAT SPECIFIC for

DIARRHŒA,

CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.
The immense sale of this remedy has given rise to many unscrupulous imitations.

N.B.—Every bottle of genuine Chlorodyne bears on the Government stamp the name of the inventor,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE.

LORD WOLSELEY is not remarkable, as a rule, for the moderation of his utterances. As a soldier, he stands pre-eminently in the front rank of his profession; as a public speaker, he has been proverbially unfortunate in always saying the wrong thing at the wrong time, and in the wrong way. It must be admitted that in addressing the 23rd Middlesex Rifle Volunteers on Wednesday evening, his Lordship at least stuck to his text. The subject upon which he had to speak was a well-worn one; but the Adjutant-General kept fairly within bounds. Lord Wolseley is, of course, enamoured of Territorialism, and looks for great things from an organisation which welds the Regular Army and the Auxiliary Forces together—on paper—as one "harmonious whole." Those who have experience of the system in practice—Regimental officers and Militia Commanding Officers and Adjutants—to be sure, do not regard this latest innovation with the same favour that the Adjutant-General does. But then, it is to a great extent Lord Wolseley's child, and he must be excused a certain amount of partiality in securing any evidence of the growth and development of his pet idea. It is very pleasing in principle to be told that the several battalions of the 7th Fusiliers, Royal Fusiliers, City of London Regiment — or whatever name a distinguished regiment is known by, in these days of military harmony, peace, and good-will, have been welded together, and will in future serve as members of the same happy family, all striving to promote one great end,—the nation's welfare. But as we have often pointed out, theory and practice are such different things! In theory, the 1st Battalion, Royal Fusiliers, ought to be pleased beyond measure to have it in its power to send off to India year by year its best men—all its drilled soldiers, in fact—to fill up gaps in its sister-battalion, and start again on the agreeable duty of "licking the young cubs into shape," for the benefit of what, under the circumstances, may fairly be considered its "better-half." In theory, the unselfishness of the 1st Battalion, Royal Fusiliers, is very charming, for it represents a state of affairs which is so essentially charitable as to lead one almost to suppose that we are approaching the halcyon days when the lamb is playfully to cajole the lion, with no fear of disastrous consequences. But unfortunately, there is still to be found among us a certain amount of "envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness;" and so long as these remain, we doubt whether it will be possible to create such a feeling of military brotherly love as to cause either officers or men of any of the battalions of a Territorial Regiment to regard with satisfaction the incongruities of an arrangement which is started on a false premiss, and would collapse entirely on the outbreak of any European war. Lord Wolseley sees all manner of troubles looming in the distance. It is earnestly to be hoped that these difficulties may not come upon us suddenly, for in our present condition we should cut but a sorry figure, if required to organise and equip a couple of Army Corps for field service. No doubt, by a good deal of official manœuvring, the thing might be done; and War-Office officials are now-a-days almost as experienced in the art of manœuvring as regimental officers are, if we may judge by the perfection they have attained in the manipulation of paper men and invisible battalions. But it is fearful to reflect on the expense which would have to be borne by our already overburdened tax-payers, in order to get together transport and stores for even so insignificant a force. We confess that Lord Wolseley has again disappointed us. He is now, or ought to be, independent of all political parties; he is occupying one of the highest positions on the Staff of the Army; he is a man who is believed in by the people; he has had great experience. Surely he recognises the utter rottenness of our Military system. Then, why does he not speak freely? We cannot bring ourselves to believe that a man so far-seeing as he is, who has risen to his present rank in an exceptionallly short space of time, can in his heart of hearts believe that it is for the good of the nation that dust should be thrown in its eyes; that it should be taught to place reliance on forces such as the Militia and Volunteers, when those services are lacking the first essentials of campaigning. What Lord Wolseley told the 23rd Middlesex Rifle Volunteers, on Wednesday evening, was simply clap-trap, and clap-trap of a most dangerous kind, rendered even more dangerous than it would otherwise have been by the fact of his Lordship's filling the important position of Adjutant-General of the Forces. Speaking of the Volunteers, Lord Wolseley, who, as an old Inspector-General, ought to know something of the Force, said:—"It is a fortunate thing that this great Volunteer Force has cropped up, and I am glad to see that in the past year it contained 2,000 efficients more than ever were in it before." This statement was received with rapturous applause. It was a hit; it was intended as a hit; and the speaker may be said to have "scored one." But what say the Volunteers themselves? In Thursday's Globe appears a letter signed "Herbert P. Miller." The writer is a recognised authority on the Volunteers. He is an old member of the Force, a crack shot, Serjeant-Instructor of Musketry of one of the smartest, best drilled, and best organised regiments in the Metropolis—we might almost say in the country—the Bloomsbury Rifles. And what says Mr. Miller? We will let him speak for himself:—"To the question, 'Can the Volunteers fight?' although long and intimately connected with the force, I must reluctantly answer, as a body, 'No.' As a proof of the decline in the real efficiency of the Volunteers, I have only to point to the returns sent in at the end of the Volunteer year just closed. These returns show, first, that two-thirds of the men have not fired a shot beyond 300 yards; secondly, that thousands have been returned as efficient who have not been able to hit a target once in sixty rounds at distances within 300 yards; and, thirdly, there are a large number of men who have been in the force for years, and have as yet never fired a shot beyond the short ranges. Imagine the position of these men, if ordered to open fire at a European enemy 600 yards distant! The non-effectiveness of their fire would, as a matter of course, produce panic, then disaster would follow, as sure as night the day." And in this matter the Militia is even worse! To sum up the case, Lord Wolseley's speech is, perhaps, the best possible evidence of the barrenness of the land, and the utter hopelessness of the battle those have set themselves who are fighting to obtain for us an effective Army.

LEAVE of Absence in the Navy is, according to the Queen's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions, "an indulgence," which, like nearly everything else laid down by those Instructions, is left to the discretion of the Captain or Commanding Officer for the time being to grant or withhold. Whether the Captain of the ship has a right to stop the leave of commissioned officers or not, is a question which has never been decided. The powers that be at this moment are of opinion that he has. The custom of the service is in direct opposition to this opinion of their Lordships. There have, as a matter of course, been exceptions to the rule. Their Lordships themselves refuse to be bound by "the custom of the service" or the Queen's Regulations, and, as in the case of Lieutenant Conway-Gordon, Mr. Rickard, Assistant-Paymaster and Acting Secretary to the senior officer in command of the Channel Squadron, Captain C. C. Rising, Lieutenant Noel, R.N., and numerous other instances, decline to allow "custom" or "law" to interfere with what they are pleased to consider "decisions arrived at for the good of the service." We have known the Commander of a sloop refuse a commissioned officer leave to land on an island off the coast of New Guinea, to explore a Papuan burial-place, on the ground that "leave was an indulgence, and that he did not intend to grant that officer any indulgences." And yet the request for permission to land was made by an officer serving on board at the time as "additional for surveying service," whose duty it was, in the interest of science, and in accordance with the Admiralty Manual of Scientific Inquiry, to visit and explore such places, and procure specimens of the aboriginal remains. Numerous other instances of Captains having exercised the power vested in them most arbitrarily are on record. It is, therefore, evident that, so long as the power to grant or refuse leave of absence to commissioned officers, not exceeding twenty-four hours, or more properly speaking, when an officer has performed his duties for the day, and desires to go on shore until his next turn of duty comes on, is left to the will and caprice of the Captain of the ship, an enormous power for evil is placed in that officer's hands. He can, merely from dislike to an officer, make that officer's life a burden to him too grievous to bear. He can tyrannise over every officer serving under his command. His power, in fact, is more autocratic than that of the Emperor of All the Russias. And over whom is he authorised to exercise this power? Over officers ranking with Captains and Majors in the Army. Now, the question is, is it lawful for a Colonel in command of a regiment to confine an officer to barracks, without either placing that officer under arrest, or reporting him for neglect of duty to the superior authority? It is not what Naval officers ask, therefore, and what they are justly entitled to ask, is, that they should, in the matter of leave, be placed on the same footing as their comrades in the Army. They desire that, should their request to go on shore, after their duties for the day are over, be refused, the cause of that refusal shall be logged; and that it shall be incumbent on the officer who takes upon himself the responsibility of thus "stopping their leave" to report to the senior officer present, for the information of the Admiralty, his reasons for having done so. This would act as a check on a species of tyranny too often, far too often, practised in the Navy; and is a request that the Admiralty, considering their great concern for the welfare of the service, should at once concede. For it in no manner affects the question as to whether "leave" is an indulgence or not. We admit that leave empowering an officer to absent himself from his duties while on full pay is an indulgence. But when such a request is not made, when an officer has performed all his duties for the day, leave to spend the spare hours intervening between the time when the next call for duty comes round is no indulgence whatever; it is a right, conceded by the Master and Servant and Employers' Liability Acts to every labourer. How much more, therefore, should it not be granted to officers and gentlemen holding her Majesty's commission in the Royal Navy.

THE Report of General Gourko on the recent manœuvres round Warsaw, in which about 75,000 men, comprising the greater portion of the troops garrisoned in Poland, took part, is highly interesting, The General is very severe. He says:—"I have not observed that the various detachments, as well as the different arms, displayed the desired cohesion. I have often seen separate detachments fighting independently, without the least knowledge of the course of the action on the part of the nearest or adjacent detachments." The General reproves the superior officers for not being always in their places in the action, and for taking up their positions frequently in the front line of the skirmishers, instead of remaining with the reserves, with a view of keeping them well in hand. He does not find fault with a superior officer if he is found now and then in the front line; but this should happen only in exceptional instances, at the moment of the last rush, or when the officer desires to take a rapid glance at the state of the action. The General's Report continues:—"The covering of the flanks during the development of the action was only provided for in the dispositions; it did not exist in reality. This is against all rules of warfare, for the non-observance of a distinct order, or its neglect, may lead to the most deplorable catastrophes." Twice during the manœuvres complete surprises of separate detachments were effected from this cause, which the General holds up as a warning for more serious occasions. General Gourko further states:—"I frequently met in the rear of detachments with a state of affairs which I must call, if not chaos, at least absence of the strict order prescribed. Trains proceeded only according to the individual opinion of drivers of waggons; they frequently blocked up each other's march on the road, and displayed a most undesirable picture of disorder and disorganisation in the rear of detachments; I also found trains in the line of action." The General then points to the importance of the employment of engineers, which had not been sufficiently recognised. He enjoins upon engineers to display in some manner their proper sphere of action, such as destruction of railways and roads, blowing up of bridges, &c., which could only be indicated during manœuvres in time of peace, so as to give commanders of troops some distinct idea of what they are able to perform in actual war. Regarding cavalry, General Gourko states that "the two principal objects of cavalry, reconnoitring and protection, were not carried out in a satisfactory manner, which was chiefly owing to the fact that commanders are not used to distribute and employ cavalry as it would be done in an action." The cavalry showed itself little on the field of action proper; and he had observed only one instance during the whole course of the manœuvres in which it had been employed in an attack on infantry. The infantry, the General says, were concentrated, by exceedingly fatiguing marches, mostly before the commencement of the action. He considers such fatigues good preliminary training; at the same time, care should be taken, he thinks, to make proper dispositions beforehand, and to have the victualling carefully attended to before the march is commenced. Frequently, the defensive positions of the front lines were not correctly chosen, and placed, without due cause, within the most effective artillery fire of the enemy. The reserves were often formed of too great depth, and instead of placing the several companies in checker form, they were frequently drawn up behind each other, which in actual war would have entailed great losses. Speaking generally, the reserves were not led correctly, that is to say, without regard to the enemy's fire. Attacks were mostly made before the foe was sufficiently shaken by artillery and infantry fire. The General cannot approve of the action of the artillery. He misses the required leading on the part of commanders of the artillery at the several Army corps. He says that "the batteries did not always choose the most suitable positions in the action, and this was chiefly caused by commanders neglecting to ride on in advance, with a view of selecting them." The General also finds fault with the frequent changes of position, which interrupts the effectiveness of the fire.

The Admiralty request that applications for Naval cadetships and assistant-clerkships in the Royal Navy, for the ensuing year, be made as soon as possible.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh will proceed to Portsmouth on Sunday, and be the guest of General H.S.H. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar until Monday, when he will rehoist his flag on board the Minotaur, and start to take over the command of the Channel Squadron at Vigo. The Minotaur will be joined in the Channel by the Achilles and Forward.

The case of the seaman Endersley, sentenced to a term of penal servitude for striking a superior officer, is still attracting attention in certain quarters. Misguided humanitarians, well-meaning, no doubt, are far more likely to do harm than good to the Navy by interfering in questions of discipline. Alderman Baker, at Portsmouth, has made himself the champion of the convict Endersley, and has set on foot an agitation having for its object the curtailing of the powers vested in Naval Courts-martial. The offence committed by Endersley is asserted by the agitators to have been "trivial," because he "only struck a ship's corporal, when in a state of intoxication." We have already pointed out that "drunkenness," according to English law, aggravates instead of extenuating an offence; and we repeat, that striking a superior offier, whatever his rank may be, is an offence so grave, that no punishment can be regarded as too severe or harsh a deterrent. We consider the present agitation most mischievous.

Commander W. H. G. Nowell, of the Repulse, has been selected to relieve Mr. C. J. Martin, Chief Engineer, in the command of the Marlborough, training-ship for Engineer students at Portsmouth, who retires from the Active List on December 19. The training-school at Devonport has already been placed under an executive officer, and this appointment will place both schools in charge of officers of the same line. It is to be hoped that Commander Nowell will be able to avoid a repetition of the scandals which have disgraced the Devonport School command.

The following is a portion of the Orders issued by Lieutenant-General Bell, who commanded the Plymouth Division of Royal Marines at the date they marched into their present barracks in Stonehouse, on December 8, 1783, viz.:—"Sunday, December 7, 1783.—The Division to parade to-morrow as clean and well-powdered, and in soldierlike manner, as possible, the whole to be in short gaiters." "The Commanding Officers of companies are to give in at the Adjutant's Office, the names of the women they can recommend to be barrack-women. N.B.—Only one woman, and no children, will be admitted to each barrack, on any account whatever." Another quaint order said the men were to arrange their coats "according to the pride of men," by which it would appear they had a choice in the mode of arrangement.

We have been inundated with letters during the past week for and against the appointment of Mr. Rickard, as Acting Secretary to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh. Two of these we publish. From the remainder, many of them emanating from officers holding high appointments, it appears that the Admiralty are about to procure an Order in Council empowering them in future to appoint Assistant-Paymasters to act as Secretaries to Flag Officers. But would it not have been wiser to have issued the said Order in Council altering the Regulations before breaking them? We think it would, especially as, in 1877, when Admiral Sir Geoffrey Hornby desired to secure the services of Mr. Gifford, now serving in the Boadicea, as Secretary, he was informed by their Lordships, whose Board he had only just quitted, that it was against the law to appoint an Assistant-Paymaster to act as Secretary to an Admiral, and this in the face of the fact that Admiral Hornby was selecting one of the most able officers in the service, an officer possessed of all the requirements for the position he was selected to fill. Luckily for Admiral Hornby, he was able to fall back upon Mr. Kirkness, who, to the regret of all, died while Secretary to Lord Alcester. Surely such inconsistency on the part of the Admiralty is deserving of condemnation, as there is absolutely no reason why the Duke of Edinburgh should now be allowed the favour previously refused to Admiral Hornby, unless it be that his Royal Highness does not desire to add to his entourage. Article 242, Chapter VI., of the Admiralty Instructions, states that "to qualify an officer to receive a commission as Secretary to a Flag Officer or Commodore of the 1st class, he must be on the List of Secretaries or Paymasters." There do not appear to be any rules laid down for the appointments of Acting Secretaries, hence there is no reason why an Admiral, on hoisting his flag, should not nominate a Captain, Commander, Lieutenant, or even a Boatswain—to say nothing of a civilian—to serve as his "Acting" Secretary. But the "nomination" of such person is not sufficient; it has to be ratified by their Lordships, hence it now-a-days never happens that any one but a Paymaster is appointed. Their Lordships have, in the case of the Secretary to the Vice-Admiral commanding the Channel Squadron, broken through not only the Queen's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions, but the custom of the service; and as Mr. Rickard cannot, at the present rapid rate of promotion, become a Paymaster prior to the hauling-down of the Duke of Edinburgh's flag, his case would form an awkward precedent, were it not for the fact that the Admiralty are about to alter the Regulations, now that they have broken them.

From a Reuter's telegram which reached London yesterday afternoon, we get a faint gleam of hope that Hicks Pasha and his army have not been totally destroyed. According to the telegram, that commander was quite safe at Birket about November 15, but his communications had been cut off by the Gawama tribe.

We are glad to find, on very high authority, that the boys now entered to be trained for the Navy are superior in size and physique to the men enlisted under the short-service system for our Line battalions.

The Admiralty have decided to give the St. Vincent a new upper deck during the time that her boys are away on leave for the Christmas vacation. This will, probably, necessitate the St. Vincent leaving her moorings; and it is to be hoped that their Lordships will then take into their consideration the advisability of no longer keeping the Asia so far up the harbour, while the Indus and Pembroke are moored snugly alongside the yard. The trouble of transporting men is great, and the wear-and-tear to humanity so great, that the work has already killed two Paymasters in thirteen months. It is true that the men are registered in the Dockyard and not on board the ship, but they have to go backwards and forwards, thus losing much time in the transaction of the Government service. Portsmouth Steam Reserve has always been behind the fair in the matter of social convenience, and only had steam launches given to it after they had long been supplied to Plymouth.

In future, all Sub-Lieutenants, on being confirmed in that rank, will have the option of volunteering for the Surveying service, their names being recorded at the Admiralty for employment as occasion requires.

Sir E. J. Reed has, we are informed, purchased the two "blockade-runners" which have for so long a time been under the surveillance of the Hector at Southampton. These two armoured gun-vessels were built in Germany last year for, it was supposed, the Peruvian Government. The German Government prevented their leaving the Baltic, however, until substantial bail was given by their builder that they would be sent to an English port, and on their arrival at Southampton it was reported that they would be added to the British Navy. No doubt, Sir E. J. Reed has some means of utilising his newest acquisitions.

We regret to hear that Mr. Gilpin, paymaster of the Euphrates, has succumbed to the hard work of his appointment, and that it was found necessary to send him to Haslar Hospital. Mr. Winterbottom, his successor, only joined a few hours before the Euphrates sailed, but nevertheless succeeded in proving that their Lordships could not have selected a better officer to act as Paymaster of an Indian trooper.

We believe that the Militia Battalions amalgamated with the 13th (Somersetshire) Light Infantry wear the "Mural Crown" granted to Sale's veterans for their heroic defence of Jellalabad in 1841-2; and more startling still, that the Gloucestershire Militia, jumbled up with the glorious old 28th and 61st Regiments, actually wear the "Sphinx" on the back of their helmets. The distinction of wearing the number behind as well as in front was granted to the 28th, in commemoration of their having fought back to back, near Alexandria in 1801; and when the historic numbers were removed in 1881, the Sphinx was substituted for "28," and granted so indiscriminately that it has lost all value. As the Gloucestershire Militia are permitted to wear the Sphinx, they ought to have "Egypt," and, for the same reason, or rather by the same rule, Ramillies, Quebec, and Waterloo, besides a host of names of Peninsular and Indian victories. Can the absurdities of territorialism go much farther?

A very hopeful view is expressed in France that the Celestials, however they may show their teeth, will not fight about Tonquin. A French writer, who has been following this affair, delivers judgment in these words:—"The possession of Bacninh and of Sontay are not worth a war, China will admit this; we may say that China has admitted it, and nothing would astonish us less than to see the Chinese, after a show of resistance, retire, some behind the Song Cau and the others behind the Black River. The Chinese are cunning politicians, and are not likely to risk losing by a battle the advantages which their diplomacy may derive from a treaty handing over to them the three provinces of the north, the possession of which will cover their frontier much better than Bacninh and Sontay." And the writer goes on to assert that the real object of the Celestials is to keep the Red River closed, and not to allow their southern provinces to be thrown open to commerce, especially the province of Yunnan. Another writer observes that although Admiral Courbet has not asked for reinforcements, it would be well to despatch 4,000 men at once. There would be little difficulty in this, as the transports are lying at Toulon, ready to sail. In the meantime, two ironclads, La Galissonnière and La Victorieuse, are being rapidly prepared for service in Chinese waters.

Lieutenant-Colonel A. de V. Tupper, R.A., commanding 2nd Division of the Garrison Artillery at Portsmouth, succeeds, we hear, on January 1, to the command of the Field Artillery at Hilsea, vice Lieutenant-Colonel J. Ritchie, Royal (late Bombay) Artillery, whose five years' tenure expires on that date.

Quartermasters serving in India are agitating, we notice—and not without reasonable cause—to obtain the equivalent in Indian currency of the increased pay granted to them by the Royal Warrant of June 25, 1881. A printed statement of their claims has been published, which shows their case to be an exceptionally hard one. The grievance, briefly stated, is as follows:—

	Cavalry.				Infantry.
On appointment	0	8	6	...	0	6	6
After 5 years' service as Qrmr.	0	10	6	...	0	8	6

That allowed by Clause 198 Royal Warrant of June 25, 1881, is:—

On appointment	0	10	6	...	0	9	0
After 5 years' service as Qrmr.	0	12	0	...	0	10	6

Comparing the above, each quartermaster is entitled (in addition to what he is now actually in receipt of) to:—

On appointment	0	2	0	...	0	2	6

English pay in India is converted at 2s. 6d. the rupee, therefore the amount due to each quartermaster is:—

	Rs.	a.	p.		Rs.	a.	p.
On appointment, or from July 1, 1881, monthly	24	5	7	...	30	6	11
After 5 years' service as Qrmr., monthly.........................	18	4	2	...	24	5	7

2. There is no 20 years' rate of pay in India, as provided for in Clause 198 of the above-quoted Royal Warrant.

3. Indian Army Circular dated Nov. 10, 1882, only authorises captains' allowances from Oct. 1, 1882, whereas lieutenant-colonels, majors, warrant, and non-commissioned officers all received the extra pay of their ranks from July 1, 1881.

4. A quartermaster of Cavalry (hon. captain) is entitled to allowances for three horses; at present, he is only paid for two. A paymaster attached to a cavalry regiment draws for three, if hon. captain, and for four, if hon. major.

It is, of course, bad enough for a poor man to have to serve in India for the rate of pay in force thirty years ago, but it is still worse for him to find that this rate, when converted into English coin, is less by twenty per cent. than it was ten years ago. At that time the market rate of exchange of the rupee was two shillings, while to-day it is only one shilling and sevenpence halfpenny. The Quartermasters are a small body, and it is difficult to understand why the increased pay granted by the Imperial Parliament should be lost to them when ordered to India, although the increase granted to all other officers by the Royal Warrant has been given ungrudgingly by the Indian Government. The distinction is invidious and ungenerous, and not calculated to serve the best interests of the Army.

The Lieutenant-General commanding in Egypt has received the commands of H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, with reference to the recent epidemic, to convey the expression of his Royal Highness's high appreciation and thanks to the Medical officers and others concerned, who, by their unremitting zeal and ability, have, through a period of exceptional trial and danger, rendered such unquestionably meritorious services.

As the Purchase officers of the Army are being retired wholesale, and driven into idleness under the clauses of post-Purchase rules, we think it desirable to print a copy of the petition to Parliament, which was signed by hundreds of officers of all ranks, in 1873, and placed in the hands of the lamented Colonel Anson, M.P., for presentation to the House. At the intercession of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, Colonel Anson, after consulting representative officers, agreed to withdraw the petition, which would have been signed by nearly every officer of the Purchase regiments. The petition shows clearly enough how correct the officers were in their views of the injuries they had sustained by the abolition of Purchase, without the return of their purchase money. The publication of the suppressed petition may do good, even at the eleventh hour:—

"PETITION.

"To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled.

The humble petition of ——— in the —— Regiment of —— Sheweth,—That the future position of your petitioner has been materially altered by the abolition of Purchase,—first, as regards his professional prospects; and secondly, as regards certain sums of money which your petitioner has been forced to pay by the Secretary of State for War for the time being, in order to save himself from being superseded by officers junior to him in the Service. That your petitioner has been placed in a worse position than he was in than before such alteration in the terms of his service. Your petitioner will ever pray.—Signed, ———."

Shooting galleries are about to be erected at all the chief military stations, where the men may practise at the figure, vanishing, and head-and-shoulders targets, as on the ranges. Three of these galleries are about to be erected at Aldershot, in the North and South Camps and Permanent Barracks. The rifle to be used will probably be Morris's patent. Under what conditions these practices will be carried out—whether they will be optional, or form part of the regulation musketry course—does not yet appear.

Interesting experiments were recently made by Sir Joseph Whitworth at his works with some new ordnance, which has since then answered the designer's expectations. Sir William Armstrong has also concluded some exhaustive experiments to test the power of various kinds of powder. The cocoa powder, a new invention, in the manufacture of which fibre takes the place of charcoal, has given the best results, both as to velocity and pressure. E.C. powder, or granulated gun-cotton, is nearly smokeless, and very effective for small arms.

It has been notified that bringing-money at 5s. for every recruit finally approved and passed in the Army, and 2s. 6d. for every man approved and passed into the Militia, will be given to any soldier (other than a paid recruiter), or civilian, who is instrumental in bringing or sending a recruit for enlistment, provided that he is certified by the recruiting officer to be the bonâ fide bringer. When a Militiaman joins the Regular Army during the Militia training or drill, the 5s. Army bringing-money is liable to a deduction of 2s. 6d.

The French conscripts of the class 1882 are only now joining their regiments, and the consequence is that, unless in the event of war, few of them will serve more than three years. A military writer in the Figaro expresses the hope that the commanding officers will see that these lads are not bullied, according to time-honoured custom, on joining the various corps; and M. Richard advances several good reasons for abandoning this practice. One of these is that the old soldiers who indulge in these trimades are generally the worst men in the regiment,—turbulent and insubordinate scamps. These are the sort of fellows, he says, who, when Marshal MacMahon was marching to Sedan, lagged behind and indulged in pillage, thus reducing the Army with which it was intended to relieve Metz from 120,000 to 80,000. It will be remembered that one of the first things plundered was the Imperial baggage, and the army was still at Châlons when his Majesty's shirts were put up to auction; and Carlyle, in referring to the burning of the shirt of St. Louis by the scamps of the First Revolution, ejaculated, "Might not some patriot have had it?" It would be interesting to know what patriots came in for the linen of Napoleon III., and what price it fetched. A propos to French Military affairs, we see that the War Estimates for next year provide for 518,642 men and 130,146 horses. This is an augmentation of 2,015 men and 215 horses, as compared with the present year.

It would be interesting to know if any arrangements have yet been made to obviate a portion of the men of the 101st Fusiliers, lately arrived from Halifax, from living under canvas in South Wales during this inclement weather. The War Office was apparently astonished at the strength of the regiment, for which there was not barrack accommodation sufficient.

Dr. Nicolaeff, of the Russian Medical Service, has been publishing some articles in one of the St. Petersburg papers on the proportion of suicides in the various European Armies. According to him, to every 1,000 troops the number of suicides are at the following ratio:—Austria, 1·0; Prussia, 0·88; the English Army in Europe, 0·36; the English Army in India, 0·14; the French Army in Europe, 0·35; the French Army in Africa, 0·56; Italy, 0·37; and Russia, 0·25. He thus makes out the Russian Army to be the least affected by suicidal mania, although, as a matter of fact, a day never passes in Russia without the suicide of an officer being reported. Unfortunately, Dr. Nicolaeff does not furnish the statistics from which he has evolved his results, hence we cannot share the complacency of the official Russian Press in accepting them as reliable.

A curious report, addressed by a Military Inspector to the Emperor of China upon the peculations of the officers in the Army, has been published in the Peking Gazette. The report is divided into interrogatories, which run as follows:—1. Why are as many domestic servants as combatants allowed in a camp? 2. The officers receive the same pay (about £120) per month in time of peace as during war, and yet when at peace they spend their time in gambling and opium-smoking. They also send in false returns as to the number of men under their command. Is not a proper subject for inquiry? 3. The general cost of the Army is as high in time of peace as of war, yet is it not a well-known fact that a soldier does not require tents when in barracks, and that his uniform does not get spoilt so quickly? 4. The officers, when war breaks out, choose the best men in the regiment for their personal escort, and give them double pay. Would it not be better to let them remain in the ranks of the combatants? 5. Why do the officers charge the Government double the price they actually pay for the food and equipment of each soldier? 6. Do not the officers assert that they do not receive their pay regularly, and make this an excuse for giving each soldier only half of what is due? 7. Is not a soldier who complains that he is defrauded beheaded for insubordination? 8. The Ministerial orders are to the effect that a regiment shall change garrisons every year. Is this order strictly adhered to? No. 9. The Governors of each province are enjoined to publish a report upon the military forces within it. Who really writes these reports, the Colonel or the General? 10. The sums required for the maintenance of the Army are nearly everywhere misappropriated. Is it not most important that the Treasury should itself pay the troops? 11. The soldiers who desert, die, or retire are still retained upon the roll, as if they were present. Who pockets the difference, the officers?

We learn from Warsaw that Captain Tsimbaluk, of the 13th Kargopol Dragoons, has effected some improvements in the Berdan breech-loader, enabling it to fire 15 to 20 shots a minute without involving any extensive alterations in the mechanism. General Gourko supervised some experiments with the improved weapon last week, and was so satisfied with it that he gave orders for a number to be manufactured, to be distributed among the troops of the garrison, to ascertain by practical use the merits and defects of the invention. Gourko has also purchased a number of telegraph-telephone apparatus, to test their qualities in the Warsaw district during the coming winter.

The kingdom of Portugal has been divided into four military divisions and one territorial subdivision. The head-quarters of the military divisions are Lisbon, Coimbra, Oporto, and Evora, while Angra is the centre of the territorial subdivision. The continental army comprises 18 regiments of Infantry, 12 battalions of dismounted Chasseurs, two regiments of Lancers, one of Chasseurs, and three of Artillery, with one battalion of Engineers. The total effective of the army is 32,000 men upon a peace footing, and 75,000 in time of war.

The Toulon papers say that orders have just been received in that port and at Cherbourg to send a number of gunboats and gun-launches to Tonquin, which might have been sent long ago. Cherbourg will be able to dispatch five and Toulon six gunboats to the scene of action. In the meantime, eight gunboats, which can be taken to pieces, and which are being built in the Loire, will be ready in the course of a few days. The hull is of steel, they will draw very little water, and will be armed with two guns. From what one hears, however, it seems that these craft will arrive a day after the fair, or, at all events, at a moment when the rivers in Tonquin will be almost dry. Already the navigation is exceedingly difficult, and Admiral Courbet runs the risk of being deprived of the services of his flotilla to a great extent; and hitherto that flotilla has been of the greatest use, and, in fact, may be said to have held the enemy in check, and to have turned the tide of victory in favour of the French.

An Italian doctor, Professor at the Pavia University, has published some comparative figures with regard to the mortality in the various Armies of Europe, and according to his figures it is at the rate of 57 per 10,000 men in Germany, 84 in England, 92 in France, 112 in Austria, and 116 in Italy. Accepting these figures as correct, it will be seen that the rate of mortality is much lower in the German than it is in any of the other armies, especially when we take into account that out of every 57 deaths in the first-named, 20 are suicides. Moreover, as the general mortality of the population is at the rate of 217 per 10,000 in England, 244 in France, and 269 in Germany, it would appear that the hygienic régime of the Army is better in the last-named country than it is in the others; but some allowance must be made for the fact that English and French soldiers are much more exposed to disease than the German soldiers, who are not sent to do duty in tropical climates. It is true that the same reason cannot be used to account for the higher rate of mortality among the Austrian and Italian troops, but then the general rate of mortality among the populations of those two countries is much higher than in England or France. The general outcome of the returns is that the English and French Armies lose more men than they ought to do, owing to defective hygienic arrangements.

MILITIA MUDDLES.

"4th Worcester" observes:—"Your correspondent, 'Garrison Instructor,' must, I think, be labouring under a misapprehension with regard to the meaning of the word 'embodied,' as applied to the Militia, as he appears to think that the Militia are 'embodied' when called for annual training; whereas the Militia can only be embodied by Act of Parliament, or by an Order in Council, and that only in times of great national danger. The last time the Militia were so embodied was during the Mutiny. When embodied, the Militia become for the time a part of the Regular Army, and are liable for permanent service within the United Kingdom. If not embodied by Act of Parliament, they cannot be made to serve more than 56 days each year. The true interpretation of Section 13, Army Act, therefore, is that no Militiaman, unless his regiment is embodied by Act of Parliament, can commit the offence of 'fraudulent enlistment.' If, therefore, he 'enlists into the Regular Forces without first obtaining a regular discharge from the Militia,' he can only be proceeded against under Section 33 for 'making a wilful false answer on attestation.'"

THE UNITED STATES NAVY.

ACCORDING to the July Register of the United States Navy for 1883, the line or combatant officers of the Navy consist of naval cadets at the Naval Academy; naval cadets who have passed the required academic course, and are performing two years' service at sea prior to final graduation; ensigns (junior grade), formerly known as midshipmen; ensigns; lieutenants (junior grade), formerly known as masters; lieutenants, lieutenant-commanders, commanders, captains, commodores, rear-admirals, vice-admiral, and admiral. All are commissioned grades now, excepting the naval cadets. The law of March, 1883, which altered the titles of midshipmen and masters, stipulated that commissions in the new title should be issued, but no alterations made in the pay or uniforms, which should remain the same. The Staff or non-combatant branch of the Navy consists of the Medical Corps, Pay Corps, Engineer Corps, and chaplains, who are sea-going officers; professors of mathematics, who do duty at the Naval Observatory and Nautical Almanac Office, in Washington, and the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland; naval constructors, and civil engineers who are employed at the navy yards. The grades in the Medical Corps are assistant-surgeons, passed assistant-surgeons, surgeons, medical inspectors, and medical directors, ranking relatively with ensigns, lieutenants (junior grade), lieutenants, lieutenant-commanders, commanders, and captains. The Pay Corps have the same designations, commencing with assistant-paymasters, and rising to pay directors with the same relative ranks. The Engineer Corps commence at assistant-engineers, who are appointed from naval cadets, educated in an engineering course at the Naval Academy; and they rise to chief engineers, the first 10 ranking relatively as captains, the second 15 as commanders, the third 45 as lieutenant-commanders. The Medical and Pay Corps are appointed from civil life, and must be between the ages of 21 and 26; vacancies are thrown open to competition. The professors of mathematics are selected from good mathematicians, who are generally assistants at the Naval Observatory, and are required to pass a rigid examination for the position. The chaplains are selected from any religious sect, and the appointment is purely one of interest, only the medical examination being required. The naval constructors have heretofore been appointed from skilful mechanics in navy yards, but now the assistant naval constructors are the two leading members of the classes at Annapolis, who can, if they wish, elect to qualify by taking a course at Greenwich and the Ecole Polytechnique in Paris, the British and French Governments extending the courtesy. The civil engineers have been but recently commissioned. They are 10 in number, and rank relatively as lieutenants, commanders, and captains. They are men of high scientific attainments, The warrant grades are boatswain, gunner, carpenter, and sailmaker. The appointed grade, mates, who are men that have been appointed to the position from seamen. The list was closed in 1870, and when those at present on it die, will be abolished. Clerks to navy yards and pay clerks are temporary appointments. The Marine Corps comprises, 2nd lieutenants (20), 1st lieutenants (30), captains (20), majors (4), lieutenant-colonels (2), colonel (1), and colonel-commandant (1). The general staff are three quartermasters, one of the rank of major and two of captain; one adjutant, rank of major, and one paymaster, rank of major. The non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates are fixed by an Act of Congress at 1,500. It is an infantry organisation, and under the drills and rules of the Army to a certain extent. The promotion in the United States Navy is entirely by seniority in all grades, the position of officers is fixed by competitive examinations in classes when they are quite young in the service, and it too often happens that some of the seniors are better scholars than officers. For distinguished gallantry or heroism, the President can advance an officer a grade, or so many numbers in his grade, not to exceed thirty, but Congress must approve it. This is seldom done excepting for war services, and then rarely. Just after the finish of the American rebellion, a Board was appointed to recommend officers for promotion; they recommended the gallant ones as they stood on the list, and by omitting to give the names of the undistinguished on the list they were passed over, and came in a year or so after as junior. None of them have yet regained their old places excepting in one or two exceptional cases. When afloat, the officer aboard ship next in rank to the commanding officer is called the executive officer (the old style of first lieutenant). He is generally a lieutenant-commander or lieutenant. The next in rank to the executive officer becomes navigator; then the watch officers. The manner of carrying on duty is about the same as in the British Navy. The crew and marines occupy about the same stations, and have the same designations as in a British war vessel. The naval cadets are appointed from each Congressional district, but one at a time being allowed at the Naval Academy from a Congressional district. The time as a naval cadet is six years for the successful ones; but as vacancies occur through resignations, dismissals, &c., the same district is allowed to fill them. The members of the House of Representatives nominate the naval cadets to the Secretary of the Navy. As there are generally so many applications for Annapolis and the Military Academy at West Point, the Congressmen usually throw them open to a school competition. They then report at Annapolis for a rigid physical and mental examination, which usually plucks about 40 per cent. of them. The balance take their chances for the four years' academic course; to some who are turned back, it is five and even six years; and classes generally graduate about 40 per cent. of those who started the first year. While at the Naval Academy the United States Government allows each naval cadet $500 (£100) a year, and a commuted ration of 30 cents a day, making $109·50 (£22). From this is deducted clothes, room furniture, books, messing, washing, &c.; and $75 (£15) a year must be put aside as a reserve fund to buy an outfit when graduating. The pay of the United States Navy is divided into three kinds, viz., at sea, on shore duty, and leave or waiting orders. The pay of the grades is as follows (there are no allowances of any sort), viz.:—

NOTE.—From and after July 1, 1870, the spirit ration is totally abolished, and in lieu thereof the Navy ration, under the appropriation of provisions for the Navy, is 30 cents per day. Provided, That no officer on the Retired List of the Navy shall be employed on active duty except in time of war; And provided, That those officers on the Retired List, and those hereafter retired, who were, or who may be, retired after 40 years' service, or on attaining the age of 62 years, in conformity with Section 1 of the Act of December, 1861, and its amendments, dated June 25, 1864, or those who were, or may be, retired from incapacity, resulting from long and faithful service, from wounds or injuries received in the line of duty, from sickness or exposure therein, shall, after the passage of this act, be entitled to 75 per centum of the present sea pay of the grade or rank which they held at the time of their retirement. The rear-admirals provided for in the Act of June 5, 1872, shall be considered as having been retired as rear-admirals. [Act March 3, 1873.]

In addition, the Secretary of the Navy can place an officer on furlough pay as a punishment, or at his own request to take outside service when he receives one-half of leave or waiting-orders pay. Courts-martial frequently give this pay in the sentences of suspension. The Retired List has three grades of pay, viz., three-quarters of sea pay for officers retired at the age of 62, at which officers in the Navy of all grades must retire, unless they have the thanks of Congress, which entitles the officer to ten years additional on the Active List; also, three-quarters of sea pay to all officers retired for injuries or sickness contracted in the line of duty. One-half of sea pay for officers retired for injuries or sickness not contracted in the line of duty, and furlough pay for officers retired on account of failure to pass examinations for promotion. This list is now closed, as such officers are wholly retired with a year's leave pay, according to recent laws. Although the pay of the junior grades in the United States Navy is much higher than that in the British Navy, promotion is very slow. More so since 1882, when, by the exertions of ex-Secretary Robison, who was a Member of Congress, the lists were all reduced. The rear-admirals reduced to six, commodores to 10, captains to 45, commanders to 80, lieutenant-commanders to 74, lieutenants from 280 to 250, the lieutenants (junior grade) and ensigns from 100 each to 74. Mr. Robison's scheme of reorganisation savoured more of revenge than economy or efficiency, as it is well known the United States Navy never sanctioned his schemes for himself and friends when he was Secretary of the Navy under Gen. Grant. The grades of Admiral and Vice-Admiral held by D. D. Porter and S. C. Rowan lapse at their deaths, and are not to be filled; the same as the positions held by Gens. Sherman and Sheridan in the Army. Congress can, if it wishes, revive them at any time. On the Active List, the senior Rear-Admiral, John L. Warden, of Monitor fame, entered the service in 1834. He has been a rear-admiral for 11 years, and does not retire until he is 72, having received the thanks of Congress for his gallantry in the fight between the Monitor and Merrimac. The senior commodore, E. Simpson, entered the Navy in 1840, and has been a commodore five years. The senior captain, A. W. Johnson, entered the Navy in 1841, and has been a captain nine years. The senior commander, A. Yates, entered the service in 1853, and has been a commander 11 years. The senior lieutenant-commander, Charles H. Pendleton, entered the service in 1860, and has been a lieutenant-commander 15 years. The senior lieutenant, D. G. Ritchie, entered the service in 1861, and has been a lieutenant 13½ years. The junior lieutenant entered in 1867, and has been recently promoted. The senior of the lieutenants (junior grade) entered the service in 1867, and has been in the grade seven years. The junior lieutenant of this grade entered the service in 1870, and was recently promoted. The senior ensign entered the service in 1870, and has been an ensign six years. The senior of the ensigns (junior grade), entered the service in 1874, and has been in the grade four years. The senior of the Medical Corps, Medical Director P. J. Horwitz, entered the service in 1847, and has been a medical director ten years. The senior medical inspector entered in 1856, and has been a medical inspector eight years. The senior surgeon, A. S. Oberly, entered the service in 1861, and has been a surgeon 17 years. The senior passed assistant-surgeon entered the service in 1870, and has 11 years' service in this grade. The senior assistant-surgeon entered in 1880. The senior of the Pay Corps, Pay Director J. H. Watmough, entered the service in 1844, and has been 12 years a pay director. The senior pay inspector, E. May, entered the service in 1861, and has been eight years a pay inspector. The senior paymaster, A. J. Pritchard, entered in 1861, and has been a paymaster 19 years. The senior passed assistant-paymaster, Stephen Rand, entered the service in 1869, and has been nine years in the grade; the senior assistant-paymaster entered in 1879. The senior chief engineer, B. F. Isherwood, entered the service in 1844, and has been a chief engineer 35 years. The senior passed assistant-engineer, B. F. Wood, entered the service in 1861, and has been in the grade for 17 years. The senior assistant-engineer entered the service in 1875. The senior chaplain entered the service in 1863; the senior professor of mathematics in 1861; the senior naval constructor in 1861. The senior civil engineer was commissioned in 1874. The senior warrant officers in the list of boatswains, gunners, carpenters, and sailmakers entered respectively in 1858, 1842, 1857, and 1846. They have the same rules regarding retirements as commissioned officers. All officers of the United States Navy are examined for promotion to every grade; the promotion is both physical and mental. With captains and commodores it is more a record of fitness than the severer mental examination in navigation, gunnery, seamanship, steam engineering; French, Spanish, and international law give the other grades. Officers physically disqualified are retired. Those mentally disqualified have a year to prepare for the second examination, but if they pass it, lose a year's seniority; if not, they are dropped. Officers coming for examination who are morally disqualified on account of a bad record in the grade which they hold are wholly retired from the Navy with a year's leave pay. By a law of 1882, when the naval cadets return to Annapolis for their final examination, only the first 10 are made ensigns (junior grade). The next fill any vacancies as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, and the remainder receive a year's pay and an honourable discharge. This was done by advice, as promotion in the lower grades is quite at a standstill, and naval cadets at 30 years of age would become common. The Marine Corps has always behaved gallantly, and as police in times of peace, both aboard ship and at navy yards, are invaluable. As a corps d'élite, they stand as high in their service as do the Marines of the British service. Their officers are paid as given in the list:—

Pay of Officers of the United States Marine Corps.

Grades.	Pay per Annum.
Colonel-Commandant	$3,500
Colonel	3,500
Lieutenant-Colonel	3,000
Major (Staff and Line)	2,500
Captain and Assistant-Quartermaster	2,000
Captain	1,800
First Lieutenant	1,500
Second Lieutenant	1,400

NOTE.—All officers below the rank of Brigadier-General are entitled to ten per centum, in addition to their current yearly pay as given above, for each and every period of five years' service, provided the total amount of such increase shall not exceed forty per centum of their current yearly pay; and provided further, that the pay of a Colonel shall not exceed $4,500 per annum, and that of a Lieutenant-Colonel $4,000 per annum. Officers on the Retired List are entitled to seventy-five per centum of pay (salary and increase) of their rank.

The only punishment which can be inflicted upon an officer of the United States Navy by a superior is arrest, suspension, or confinement, not to exceed ten days, excepting in case of an officer to be tried by court-martial.

The Duke of Edinburgh, who was hitherto a Prussian Major-General à la suite of the 6th Thuringian Infantry Regiment, has been raised by the Emperor to the rank of Lieutenant-General. In the Almanach de Gotha for 1884, which has just appeared, the Prince of Wales is described with other titles, as a "Field-Marshal-General in the Prussian Army." It may be remembered that when, on the occasion of the Prince's presence here at the Silver Wedding of the Crown Prince, the Emperor conferred upon his Royal Highness the title of a Prussian Field-Marshal, there was some controversy as to the real nature of the honour.

The Army.

4th Dragoon Guards. Capt. J. Shaw Maxwell, now serving on Baker Pasha's Staff in the Soudan, formerly served in the ranks of this regiment, as also in the 5th Lancers and 19th Hussars. He is in possession of the bronze star, Egyptian war medal and clasp, and 4th-Class of the Medjidie.

5th Dragoon Guards. Lieut.-Col. Truman has been selected for the command of the 7th Dragoon Guards, from which regiment he some years since exchanged.

6th Dragoon Guards. Lieut.-Col. Blake has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months, on medical certificate.

7th Dragoon Guards. Lieut.-Col. Truman, about to be transferred from the 5th Dragoon Guards, proceeds in command of the regiment to India.

1st (Royal) Dragoons. Capt. Barton, now serving on the Staff of Baker Pasha, Commanding-in-Chief the Army of the Soudan, formerly served in the ranks of the Royals. He was afterwards in the Army Hospital Corps, and then joined the Egyptian Army after last year's campaign. He has the South-African medal and clasp, Egyptian medal and clasp, together with the bronze star and 4th Class of the Medjidie.

6th Dragoons. The correspondent of the Natal Mercury, writing from Pinetown on Nov. 7, says :—"Lieut.-Col. Curtis has been on a few days' visit to his regiment, but has returned to Zululand, to resume command of the column. Lieut.-Col. Bennett, having returned from England, has taken over the command of the regiment during the absence of Lieut.-Col. Curtis. Lieut. Forbes, who for some time past has ably acted as adjutant, has left for the column in Zululand; Lieut. Remington takes his place until the return of Capt. Tye from England. It is probable that the families of the married men of the Dragoons will not be here for about a month, owing to the quarantine regulations at the Cape. Through this delay it is likely that the married quarters will be almost ready for the families on their arrival in Pinetown. A pair of table lamps have been presented to the serjeants' mess by Col. Gore, who lately retired from the command."

8th Hussars. Lieut.-Col. Langtry succeeds to the command, vice Col. Chaplin, V.C., Major Bell, from the Staff College, obtaining the second lieutenant-colonelcy.

9th Lancers. Capt. the Hon. E. Vesey joins the Staff College in February next, and it is for this purpose that he has resigned the adjutancy of the Dorset Yeomanry.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

"Deccan" says:—"There will very soon be a block in promotion in the Indian artillery list; of the 16 senior colonels, only one gives a step, the remainder are either seconded or else full colonels who will not be succeeded. This means to say that for five years the captains and subalterns will derive no benefit from vacancies in the list of Indian generals. The Indian Government are thus reaping all the advantages of recent warrants, without any of the disadvantages; they save the pay of every full colonel as he is promoted, and give no outlet whatever to the lieutenant-colonels' list. I would suggest that as every full colonel's vacancy falls in, the senior lieutenant-colonel be made supernumerary and give a step; the superumerary officer will not be eligible to hold a lieutenant-colonel's command, but may be employed in the Ordnance Department, as a commanding R.A. of a district, as colonel on the staff, &c. Again, on Dec. 31, 1878, several full colonels were induced to go by extra pensions, but promotion was only given for every second vacancy. This benefited the immediate seniors of each rank, but the corps at large has suffered by it. All those men would have gone by now, and given full steps instead of half steps, so that the corps has lost, I think, 11 steps by the arrangement. These 11 steps might now very fairly be given back by making supernumerary the senior lieutenant-colonels who would have fallen to the vacancies in due course. The captains of Oct. 1, 1877 (and all below them) are coming up to the top of the list; they are also drawing near their 40 years of age, when compulsory retirement stares them in the face; they represent, in their rank, the whole corps, and it seems hard that they should only have an outlet for promotion on one list, viz., the Imperial, while the other, the Indian, is ingeniously marked against them, from both the old and the new system of promotion."

"A Constant Reader" writes :—"Your correspondent 'Equity,' in his letter which appeared in your issue of the 17th ult., takes a thoroughly one-sided view of the case. He calls it the Imperial point of view; but are not they whose interests are at stake, viz., the Indian lieutenant-colonels, entitled to have the matter considered in their point of view? 'Equity' is in error when he says, 'the War Office desire the increased facilities for retirement in the Indian Artillery, for the purpose of maintaining a healthy flow of promotion, and preventing undue compulsory retirement on officers of the Imperial List.' Promotion in the old List and the three Indian Lists is kept entirely separate and distinct in each, and any measures of accelerated promotion in the Indian Lists would only result in supersession of the Royals by the Indians, and this could hardly be called a healthy flow of promotion. The Marquis of Hartington, in his reply to Sir T. Lawrence in the House of Commons on April 12 last, said :—'Every effort has been made, by the offer of liberal voluntary retirement (which offer is still open), to maintain the proper flow of promotion. So successful has this been, that at present the senior majors in each of the Indian Lists are of shorter total service than those on the Royal List.' The position of the Indian lieutenant-colonels is unassailable, protected as they are by Act of Parliament from compulsory retirement or removal from regimental employment, and yet 'Equity' appeals to them to renounce their rights, to forego the Parliamentary guarantee, and, out of affectionate regard for Imperial interests, to sacrifice their own, 'to bow to present necessities, unforeseen at the amalgamation,' and allow themselves to be robbed 'for the general good.' It is not surprising if the Indians do not endorse such Communistic principles as these, involving, as they do, their very existence. Perhaps 'Equity' would like to know the terms of the Henley clause of the Act for the better government of India, 1858; if so, they are as follows :—'The Military and Naval forces of the East India Company shall be deemed to be the Indian Military and Naval forces of her Majesty, and shall be under the same obligations to serve her Majesty as they would have been under to serve the said Company, and shall be liable to serve within the same territorial limits only, for the same terms only, and be entitled to the like pay, pensions, allowances, privileges, and the like advantages, as regards promotion and otherwise, as if they had continued in the service of the said Company.'"

The K Baty. 4th Brig., stationed at Fermoy, has been ordered to remove to Athlone, but the date is not yet fixed.

The following movements of troops have been officially notified :—W Baty. 1st Brig., from Hilsea to Woolwich (march Dec. 12, arrive Dec. 18); H Baty. 3rd Brig., from Christchurch to Hilsea (march Dec. 19, arrive Dec. 20); J Baty. 4th Brig., from Colchester to Christchurch (march Dec. 11, arrive Dec. 21); N Baty. 4th Brig., from Woolwich to Colchester (march Dec. 12, arrive Dec. 14).

Lieut.-Col. C. H. Barnes, R.H.A., at Newbridge, will be struck off the strength of the Dublin District on the 1st prox., when he will complete his five years' service in the rank of Lieut.-Col. Lieut.-Col. Shakerley, R.H.A., at Aldershot, has been appointed to succeed him in command of the Horse and Field Artillery at Newbridge.

Orders have been received at Dover, and read on parade, directing the disbandment of the old-established band of the Royal Artillery at that station. Much regret is expressed that the Horse Guards' authorities have decided that it should no longer exist. It may be mentioned that it was maintained entirely by the officers, being no expense to the country.

The following is a copy of a corps order, issued by Lieut.-Col. Strick, commanding the 1st Shropshire and Staffordshire Artillery Volunteers :—"Head-quarters, Etruria, Nov. 22, 1883. In notifying to the corps the appointment of Capt. R. Tylden, R.A., as Adjt., the officer commanding wishes to place on record his regret at parting with Capt. W. B. Hoggan, who has held the appointment since Feb., 1881; also, his regret at the cause of his leaving, viz., through the illness of his wife; and in giving expression to his appreciation of the way in which Capt. Hoggan has worked for the benefit of the corps, he wishes him every success in his future career."

Scots Guards. Capt. the Hon. N. de C. Dalrymple has assumed duty as brig.-major on the Staff of Lieut.-Gen. W. Higginson, C.B., Commandant of the Home District, in succession to Lieut.-Col. Herbert, Grenadier Guards.

1st, or Royal Scots. When the ceremony took place at Edinburgh recently, the 1st Batn. preferred that a former pair of colours should remain in the possession of her Majesty at Balmoral. It may not be generally known or remembered that her Majesty's father, the Duke of Kent, was colonel of this regiment. The Royal Scots are naturally proud of this connection, and when the Queen visited Ireland in Aug., 1849, and attended a review of troops in the Phœnix Park, the 2nd Batn. of the 1st Royals (as they were then called) marched past to an air from "The Daughter of the Regiment."

2nd Queen's, Royal West Surrey Regiment. Lieut. Tulloch, a probationer, wing-officer 38th Bengal N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from Oct. 11, 1882.

4th King's Own, Royal Lancaster Regiment. Lieut. Houghton, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on private affairs.

6th Royal Warwickshire Regiment. Brevet Lieut.-Col. Morton has been posted to the Oude Division, Bengal Army, as Assist.-Adjt.-Gen.

7th Royal Fusiliers. Col. D. S. Warren, C.B., lately commanding the 2nd Batn. 14th Regt., has been selected to succeed Major-Gen. Kent, in command of the Hounslow Sub-District. Capt. Thackwell, 2nd Batn., doing duty at the Wellington Depôt, Madras, rejoins head-quarters at Bellary.

8th King's, Liverpool Regiment. Lieut. Cotton has resigned his probationary appointment for the Indian S.C.

9th Norfolk Regiment. Lieut. Baker, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for twelve months, on medical certificate.

11th Devonshire Regiment. Lieut.-Col. Morris, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for twelve months, on private affairs.

12th Suffolk Regiment. Lieut. Deane, 1st Batn., is ordered to join the depôt instead of Lieut. Mackenzie, who was at first detailed.

15th East Yorkshire Regiment. The 2nd Batn. left Poona on the 27th ult. for Colaba, Baroda, Ahmedabad, and Deesa.

16th Bedfordshire Regiment. Major Curteis has vacated his appointment as Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General at the Horse Guards from the 9th inst.

22nd Cheshire Regiment. Lieut. Silvester, 1st Batn., has been appointed a Deputy-Assist.-Comy.-Gen. on probation. The 2nd Batn. was to have reached Peshawur on Wednesday from Cherat, there to be stationed.

30th East Lancashire Regiment. Capt. Wright has been appointed officiating Deputy-Assist.-Adjt.-Gen. for Musketry on the Staff of the Bengal Army.

34th Border Regiment. Lieut. and Adjt. Wardlaw has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months, on private affairs.

40th South Lancashire Regiment. The Bombay Gazette says :—"Capt. and Pymr. Fenton, A.P.D., at present attached to the South Lancashire Regt. at Peshawur, has been ordered to proceed to England this trooping season. An exchange, however, has been arranged by him with Capt. A. Brett, pymr. to the 1st Durham L.I. at Allahabad, which, if sanctioned by the home authorities, will allow Capt. Fenton to remain in India till about the season of 1885-86, and so in all probability go home with the battalion he has been attached to since joining the department."

41st Welsh Regiment. The Natal Mercury says :—"The men of the 41st Regt., of whom there were about 180, left yesterday morning (Nov. 8), from the wharf at about 8 o'clock, bound for Mauritius." Prominent reference is made in the Times of Natal to the death in Zululand of Lieut.-Col. Montgomery, from the bite of a snake. Col. Montgomery is spoken of as having been well known and universally respected, and when the sad tidings reached Natal it created a painful sensation in the city amongst civilian as well as in military circles. It was only a few days previously that he went out in charge of the expedition to the Lower Tugela, and it was while out shooting with some friends that he received the fatal snake-bite. He was considered to be an able and experienced officer, and as such he was appointed to the command of the column then operating in Zululand. Immediately after the sad event a regimental order was issued, in which, referring to Col. Montgomery's death, the officer commanding the troops said he desired to record his sense of the great loss which the service had sustained by the untimely death of an officer of such ability and experience, and at the same time to express his sympathy with the battalion in the grief which all ranks must feel at the loss of a commanding officer so popular and so esteemed. In the death of Col. Montgomery the service lost an officer of undoubted merits and talent, and they lost besides a true and staunch friend, who had the good and welfare of all written on his heart.

46th Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. Serjt. E. Andrews, the best shot of the Army for the present year, has been awarded the silver medal and a gratuity of £20.

51st King's Light Infantry. Lieut. Chapman has been granted leave from India to England for four months, on urgent private affairs.

54th Dorsetshire Regiment. A cold-blooded murder was committed at Delhi on Nov. 8 by a soldier of the wing stationed there. The man had had some slight quarrel with a comrade, and while he was sleeping he shot him dead with his rifle.

59th East Lancashire Regiment. The 5 and 9, Lilywhite's Gazette, has the following :—"We cannot refrain from expressing regret at the gradual melting-away in the Batn. of our medalled warriors. Not only is this noticeable in the ranks where it is, under the present conditions of service, a matter of consequence, but we have lately lost two officers, popular alike among their brother officers and the batn. at large, in the case of Lieut. Twynam, who so distinguished himself during the Afghan campaign at the battle of Ahmed Khel, when only a subaltern of about a year's service in gallantly, though unsuccessfully attempting at the risk of his own life to protect a wounded serjeant of another corps (2nd Batn. 60th Rifles) against odds of three to one until driven back by the overwhelming and sudden rush of Ghazis, and was recommended for the Victoria Cross. This officer, however, we may still claim as belonging to the East Lancashire Regiment, and only lent to our 1st Batn. But in the case of Capt. Apthorp we have to regret an entire severance of all connection with his old regiment, having exchanged into the Border Regt. In Capt. Apthorp we lose a genial, warm-hearted, and cheery companion, and a deservedly popular officer amongst equals and subordinates. He will also be remembered as the close friend of one whose memory is cherished by old hands, who knew him, and young hands for whose comfort and amusement he left the sum of £500 to be invested and the interest annually expended. We allude to the late Brevet Major Powys. We feel sure Capt. Apthorp carries with him the best wishes of all ranks."

60th, King's Royal Rifle Corps. Lieut. Kinloch, 4th Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for 15 months, on urgent private affairs.

61st Gloucestershire Regiment. Lieut. Daly is a candidate for the Indian S.C.

67th Hampshire Regiment. The following items are taken from Our Chronicle, the regimental paper, published at Bangalore :—"Lieut. Le Marchant and Lieut. E. M. O'Donoghue have passed the examination in Hindostanee according to the higher standard. Lieut. Le Marchant has been appointed interpreter, vice Lieut. Haking, relieved. Lieut. Haking and Lieut. Dyas have been ordered to join the Garrison Class at Bangalore. This reduces the number of officers at head-quarters to 11. Colour-Serjt. W. Young, who was invalided from Tonghoo, Burmah, in May, 1874, and who was discharged in May, 1875, after a service of over 16 years in the 67th Regt., has been promoted serjeant-major of the 3rd Batn. the Hampshire Regt. Colour-Serjt. Kierton, who has been appointed serjeant-instructor of the Bangalore Volunteers, enlisted as a boy at the Cape on Oct. 10, 1865. He was appointed drummer on April 1, 1866; promoted corporal on June 19, 1875; appointed drum-major Jan. 20, 1878; promoted serjeant and appointed colour-serjeant June 8, 1881. Colour-Serjt. Kierton served throughout the Afghan War, including the advance on Cabul, the action of Charasiab, the explosion of the Bala Hissar magazine, and the severe fighting round Sherpur (medal and two clasps)."

78th Seaforth Highlanders. Lieut. and Adjt. Christopher has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months, on medical certificate.

81st Loyal North Lancashire Regiment. Major-Gen. Sir H. Macpherson, commanding at Allahabad, issued the following order, prior to the departure of the regiment for England :—"The Major-General commanding greatly regrets that circumstances prevented his being able to say farewell in person at Allahabad to Lieut.-Col. Bevan and the 2nd Batn. L.N.L. Regt., but he begs to assure them that he parts with the battalion from his command with a feeling that he is losing a well-commanded and admirably conducted body of men. Their bearing during their stay in Allahabad has been exemplary, and Sir Herbert Macpherson feels that he re-echoes the feelings of the society of Allahabad in deploring the departure of a regiment that they had got to know so well. He wishes them 'God speed,' and a happy meeting with their friends at home."

84th York and Lancaster Regiment. A serious accident happened to Lieut. Leigh-Lye on the 15th ult. A man of the regiment when passing the officers' quarters at Prospect, Bermuda, about 4.15 p.m., heard a shot fired, followed by cries for help, and then saw Lieut. Leigh-Lye leaning out of the window of his room calling for assistance. Medical and other assistance was at once on the spot, and it was found the unfortunate officer had, whilst handling his revolver, shot himself, the bullet passing through his patrol-jacket and left chest. As Lieut. Leigh-Lye is a quiet and amiable young officer, it is a source of pleasure to all to hear he is progressing most favourably.

88th Connaught Rangers. Major Brind has been appointed to the Rohilcund District, Bengal, as Deputy-Assist.-Adjt.-Gen.

89th Royal Irish Fusiliers. The head-quarters and service companies will march from Belgaum on the 19th prox., en route to Bombay, to embark in H.M.S. Euphrates, for conveyance to England.

Tyne on Nov. 6, reached Pietermaritzburg on Nov. 8 by special train, arriving about 7 p.m. The detachment, which comprises two companies of the regiment, was under the command of Major Mills. On arrival at the station, they were met by the bands of the 58th and 41st, who preceded them in their march to Fort Napier. Forty men of the detachment have been left at Durban as a garrison, to take the place of the men of the 41st who have constituted the garrison, and who will join their comrades from the city prior to embarkation on the Tyne."

100th Leinster (Royal Canadian Regiment). Capt. Kaye has resigned his appointment as a probationer for the Indian S.C.

Rifle Brigade. The 1st Batn. marches from Ahmednuggur on Monday next, en route to Belgaum, where it relieves the 89th, proceeding to England.

MILITIA.

2nd Brigade, Southern Division, Royal Artillery. The annual regimental dinner of the Brigade (late the Hampshire Militia Artillery) took place on Thursday evening last, at the Army and Navy Hotel, Victoria Street, Westminster, when the following were present :—Col. Inglefield ; Majors Cowell and Garrett ; Capts. Lancaster, Mills, and Portal-Hunt ; Messrs. Lyon, Goodson, McCaul, Bernard, Johnson, Wilder, and S. Smith ; and Capt. Tillotson, R.H.A., (late adjt. of the brigade.)

Worcestershire Regiment. Col. T. Webb, lately commanding the regiment, died on Saturday last at his residence, The Berrow, Ledbury, Worcestershire, in his 72nd year. He was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the counties of Hereford and Worcester, and was formerly a captain in the 90th Foot.

Queen's Royal West Surrey Regiment. The annual regimental dinner of the 3rd Batn. took place at Limmer's Hotel, George Street, Hanover Square, on Tuesday. The officers present were :—Col. Hartnell ; Majors Davis, Ritchie, M.P., and Mitchell ; Major and Adjt. Tredcroft ; Capts. Mathison, C. D. Hodgson, Fairtlough, Graham, and Flower ; Lieuts. Holland, Fraser, Martineau, Appleyard, Turner, Owen, Ricardo, and St. George. Col. Hartnell proposed the health of the retired officers of the regiment present at the dinner, and said how much pleasure it gave him and his officers to see their old comrades. Major Mitchell, in replying, referred to his long and happy connection with the regiment, and the warm regard he should always have for those in it.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

2nd Volunteer Battalion, Royal Fusiliers. Lady Wolseley distributed the prizes at St. James's Hall on Wednesday evening. Her ladyship was accompanied by Lord Wolseley. Lieut.-Col. Routledge, comdt., drew attention to the gratifying fact that whilst the total enrolled strength allowed was 804, the whole of the officers and men in the past year had rendered themselves efficient. He referred with great regret to the loss of Sir Charles Russell, the honorary colonel. Lord Wolseley, he said, had now consented to take the position of honorary colonel. After the distribution, Gen. Sir R. Wilbraham, as the oldest Fusilier still in her Majesty's service, moved a vote of thanks to Lady Wolseley for distributing the prizes, and presented her ladyship with a commemorative medal. Lord Wolseley said he was glad of the opportunity of making the acquaintance of many of his comrades, and he hoped that as years went on he would have many more opportunities, and in time come to know all of them. He hoped, too, that good feeling might exist between them, and that they might mutually appreciate one another. Subsequently, Col. Routledge entertained Lord and Lady Wolseley and some 150 of his friends at supper at St. James's Hall Restaurant.

11th Middlesex (Railway) Rifles. The annual dinner of G Company was held at the Constitution Tavern, St. Pancras, on the 28th ult., under the presidency of Capt. Whewell, who was supported by Major Perry Godfrey, Central London Rangers. Capt. Whewell, in referring to the recent change in the command of the regiment, said Col. Gore Browne had retired with the highest honour, as he had greatly improved the regiment in strength and efficiency. His successor, Col. Sir W. Charley, was not merely one of the oldest officers, but was also one of the oldest members of the regiment, having in fact risen from the ranks. He had taken an active and important part in the Volunteer movement from its commencement.

The Liverpool Courier says :—"The Volunteers are great sufferers from the dual government of the force. The strictly military department keeps demanding greater efficiency, whilst the civil governors deny the means. The War Department limits the number of Volunteers to go into camp. The Generals of the Army tell the Volunteers they should come in greater numbers. There is a local illustration of this, where a Volunteer corps applied for authority to take 250 men to Aldershot, and received permission to bring 57 of all ranks. On being inspected at Aldershot, the General of the Brigade said he hoped that next year they would stir up their less enthusiastic comrades and attend as a small battalion, instead of a single company, the General implying that it was the fault of the corps, not the parsimony of the civil branch of the Army government, that the muster of men was small. On March 13 we pointed out in this column that the Army Estimates prepared by the Secretary of War for the year 1883-4 showed a decrease of £1,000 in the amount to be expended under this head. As in the matter of attending at Aldershot, so it is in musketry practice. The military rulers—especially since the Boer campaign—keep asking for better shooting, and especially at the longer ranges. The civil rulers arrange the capitation grant so that inferior shooting is condoned. If every man in a rifle volunteer battalion in the large towns were required to fire 60 rounds individually—five in volleys, five in independent firing, and 20 in skirmishing practice, there would be at least six journeys required to the rifle range, and as the great majority of Volunteers are in the large towns, and miles away from a rifle range, this would cause an expense in Liverpool of 4s., and to some metropolitan corps of 8s. or 9s. per man. If, then, the full course of musketry, as laid down by the military branch, were to be performed, the Volunteer colonels would naturally ask for an increased allowance of cash, as out of 30s. per man they could not afford 4s. to 9s. for railway fares. To avoid this demand for an increased capitation grant, the War Office declare that it is only necessary for the volunteer to clear his third class, and this he may do after 20 rounds have been fired individually—10 rounds at 200 and 10 at 300 yards, and thus only one railway fare is required annually."

Lieut.-Gen. Higginson, C.B., commanding the Home District, presided on Friday last at a meeting held at the Royal United Service Institution, Whitehall, to consider the present insecure condition of the rifle ranges in or near London, and to take into consideration any possible remedies. There was a large attendance, including Col. the Hon. Paul Methuen, C.B., Assistant-Adjutant-General ; Col. Philip Smith, Grenadier Guards ; Earl Brownlow, Earl Waldegrave, Major Waller, and Capt. St. John Mildmay (representing the National Rifle Association), and many commanding officers and representatives of shooting committees of Metropolitan Volunteer corps. After considerable discussion, a resolution was carried to the effect that, having regard to the danger attending rifle practice at the ranges now in use in the Home District, it is desirable that a committee, consisting of two representatives of the Regular Forces, including Militia, two of the Volunteer officers of Volunteer corps, and two of the Council of the National Rifle Association be formed to consider the matter.

"LINKED SWEETNESS."

Sir,—Allow me in a short tabular form to show what an unmixed blessing it is to be linked to another battalion. The following is the division of officers between the two battalions which compose the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers ; the table does not include seconded officers, adjutants of the Line battalions, nor probationers for Indian Staff Corps:

Rank.	Establishment for two Battalions.	Existing number in 1st Batn.	Existing number in 2nd Batn.	Existing Total.
Majors	8	5	4	9
Captains	10	8	4	12
Lieutenants	30	17	9	26
Totals	48	30	17	47

—i.e., the 1st Batn. have one major and three captains in excess of their share of the establishment ; while the 2nd Batn. are under-officered to the extent of one captain and four lieutenants ; moreover, they give one major to the depôt. Since May 1 there have been five openings for promotion to captain in the 2nd Batn., and only one such promotion has taken place, viz. :—1. Capt. Crawford, promoted major ; no promotion to captain. 2. Capt. Campbell, promoted major ; promotion given. 3. Capt. Starr, retired on gratuity ; no promotion to captain. 4. Capt. Spencer, Militia adjutant, after some months was sneaked into italics in the Army List, but no promotion to captain. 5. Capt. Lloyd, Volunteer adjutant ; seconded, but no promotion to captain. The two last-named officers have, in a combined period of over six years as captains of the battalion, actually served with it a combined period of less than eighteen months, as they are now to be absent for a further combined period of nine years. Surely the one vacant company which exists might be expected to be filled up. The fact of a stout man being arm-in-arm with a thin man may—and apparently does—completely hide the thin man, but it will not make the thin man

Stout.

Preparations are being made at Portsmouth for the floating of the Imperieuse, which is to take place next week, an uninteresting ceremony, compared with the bonâ fide launch from the building-slip. This vessel has been constructed in No. 11 Dock, opening off the old steam basin, and now presents, exteriorly, the spick-and-span appearance usual before launching. A mould for the carriage and slide has been placed in the foremost barbette tower ; and if there existed any doubt before as to the undesirable nature of this method of mounting heavy ordnance, a glance at the tower will suffice to dispel it. The compound armour on the barbette towers is, doubtless, excellent ; but it does not appear to protect anything in particular, nor is it at all apparent at present how the loading of the heavy breech-loading guns is to be satisfactorily performed. The Calliope is having her wooden sheathing caulked, and the vexed question of the sponsons is apparently settled at length, as the frames of the two foremost ones are in position. The Camperdown will probably receive a portion of her steel armour deck next week ; but there is little apparent progress being made with her. The Colossus is in the large basin, still undergoing the almost interminable finishing and altering process which now seems to be indispensable in our large ironclads, and which the Edinburgh, in No. 13 dock, has only just entered upon. The Triumph is in No. 12 dock, and the Polyphemus in No. 10, being prepared for the long-expected removal of her boilers, which, however, are to come out over all, instead of through the bottom, as originally contemplated. The Victoria and Albert has a considerable portion of her new planking bolted on, but is still indefinitely far from completion. In one of the small docks is that latest addition to our heavily-armed coasting gunboats, the Handy, which may be briefly described as a set of engines and a 43-ton gun, with a vessel built round them ; and not a very satisfactory vessel, in one respect, as she only steams eight knots. The gun, which has no trunions, is rigidly fixed to the slide ; as in the Colossus, the elevation, both for loading and firing, being adjusted entirely by means of the large ram under the rear part of the slide, which pivots on its outer end. It is to be presumed that all idea of working these guns by hand has been abandoned, otherwise we should be disposed to cavil at an arrangement which precludes the possibility of pivotting the gun independently of the slide. The machinery is, no doubt, excellent, but it is not infallible. The seating for the new harbour caisson, in the old ship basin, has been completed, and the basin will probably be reopened next week.

AGINCOURT, Capt. Mead, flagship of Rear-Admiral Wilson, Second-in-Command of the Channel Squadron, with the Northumberland, Sultan, and Neptune in company, arrived at Vigo on Saturday, three days out from Portland.

ALEXANDRA, Capt. Harry Rawson, C.B., flagship of Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, was at Malta on Dec. 8. Subsequent telegrams received at the Admiralty announce that her Majesty's ship Bittern had arrived at Malta. The Condor had left to survey the Skuki Bank. The Decoy left Gibraltar for Malta on the 9th inst. The Jumna passed Malta on Dec. 8, en route to Portsmouth. The Helicon arrived on Dec. 3 from Naples. The Iris arrived on Dec. 5, and was placed in quarantine. The Monarch left on Dec. 5 for Naples. The Temeraire left on Dec. 5 for Corfu. The Cruiser left on Dec. 6 for Corfu.

AUDACIOUS, Capt. Tracey, flagship of Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes, C.B., was at Hong Kong on Dec. 11.

AVON, Lieut. and Com. Stephen Thompson, was at Dover on Dec. 13, having left Netley for that station, Lydd, Hastings, and Brighton, to embark Royal Naval Reserve men for drill. The Avon had to put into Dungeness Roads through stress of weather on Monday, and on Tuesday, when off Beachy Head, encountered a furious gale at midnight, which forced Lieut. Thompson to turn back and run for Dover. A vessel foundered close beside the Avon off Dungeness, and another became waterlogged and was towed into Dover. The Avon was to leave Dover yesterday, weather permitting, to continue her work of instructing Royal Naval Reserve men in great gun-drill off St. Helen's, Isle of Wight. We understand that, considering the men under drill are mostly merchant seamen, the target practice made has been very fair.

CONDOR, Com. Jefferies, will shortly be recommissioned at Malta, the Admiralty having ordered a new crew to be sent out in the hired transport Italy, on Dec. 19. Com. Jefferies retains the command of the Condor.

COQUETTE, Lieut.-Com. F. H. Crowe, left Suez on Dec. 3 for Suakim.

DUNCAN, Capt. J. Poland, flagship of Vice-Admiral E. B. Rice, C.B., Commander-in-Chief at the Nore. A court-martial was held on Monday for the trial of Thomas Harwood, able seaman, belonging to the Duncan, for striking with a weapon James Clarke, chief gunner's mate, whilst in the execution of his duty, at Sheerness, on Nov. 28. The court was composed of the following officers:—Capt. Lord Walter T. Kerr (president), Com. J. G. Musters, and Com. R. H. Paul, of the Pembroke; Lieut. G. P. C. Gray, Royal Naval Barracks; and Lieut. Smythies, of the Firm. Mr. W. B. Risk, the Admiral's secretary, officiated as judge-advocate, and Com. J. G. Greenhow prosecuted in the absence (on leave) of Capt. Poland. The prisoner pleaded "not guilty." James Clarke stated that on the afternoon in question he was in charge of a party of men engaged in scrubbing out the battery at the rear of the Naval Barracks. He had gone from the north to the south entrance, and was turning towards the north entrance again when he observed that two Marines, who were painting, upset their paint-pot on the deck. He was about to speak to them, when he felt a blow on the back of his head. He saw it was caused by a "squeagee head." He at once accused prisoner with throwing it, and he denied it. William Marshall and James Robins, first-class petty officers, said they saw him do it, and Clarke ordered him into the quadrangle, and referred the case to the officer of the watch. Prisoner was standing about six yards from witness. The court found the prisoner guilty, and sentenced him to 18 months' hard labour. The prisoner's certificates showed that he was a good character, and there were very few entries in the defaulters' book against him.

EURYALUS, Capt. Hastings, C.B., flagship of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., arrived at Aden on Dec. 11, en route for Suakim. The Tourmaline, after visiting the Comoro Islands with H.M.'s Consul at Zanzibar, would return to Zanzibar to embark Consols appointed to Madagascar, and then assume duties as senior officer's ship. The Dryad left Tamatave on Oct. 31, for ports south of Madagascar and Mauritius; ordered to be at Zanzibar by the end of November, to prepare to pay off and recommission: she has arrived there. The Osprey left Zanzibar on Oct. 25, to cruise in Mozambique Channel; would be ordered to keep up communication between Zanzibar and Madagascar. The Dragon was expected at Bombay from the Seychelles; will be ordered to proceed up the Persian Gulf. The Ranger was at Suakim. The Woodlark en route to Suakim. The Philomel was in the Persian Gulf. The Arab was at Trincomalee on Nov. 12, and was to leave for Rangoon about Nov. 18. The Briton arrived at Mauritius on Nov. 5, and would leave for Colombo after giving leave to her crew. The Harrier and the Undine are ordered to proceed to Australia.

FORWARD, Lieut. and Com. Furlonger, was inspected by the Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, on Tuesday, and sailed on Wednesday to join the Channel Squadron.

GOSHAWK, Com. A. W. Moore, was inspected on Tuesday by the Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, and sailed on Thursday for the West Coast of Africa.

HIMALAYA, Capt. Palliser, left Portsmouth on Monday for Malta, with new crews for the Iris, which was commissioned at Portsmouth in April, 1880, and the Superb, which was commissioned at Chatham in October, 1880. She also took out Naval supernumeraries, who will be discharged at Malta for passage to China in the Hankow, hired transport.

HUMBER, Com. C. H. Hawkins, is taking in stores at Sheerness for Malta Dockyard and the Mediterranean Fleet. The Humber will embark Com. Hulton at Plymouth and a new crew for the Dryad, bringing home Capt. Johnstone and the present crew of the Dryad.

KINGFISHER, Capt. Thornton, was at Callao on Nov. 14.

MALABAR, Capt. R. H. Harris, left Portsmouth on Saturday, but had to put back, owing to a breakdown in her machinery. On her last passage from Bombay, she was compelled to put back to Malta, in consequence of her main steam-pipe having given out, which caused her to be a day late in arriving in England. Her main bearings also became heated to such an extent that, in spite of a copious use of lubricants, she reached Portsmouth with all her white-metal run out of the brasses. After having had the bearings adjusted, steam was got up at 2 o'clock on Saturday morning, with the intention of giving her a four hours' trial alongside previous to sailing for India. At the end of two hours, however, the trial was brought to a premature conclusion. When at sea, the troopship is driven with forty-four revolutions of her engines, or at about three-quarters speed, but on the trial the bearings became heated when twenty-seven revolutions had been attained. The crank shaft was lifted and further adjustments were made, and the ship subsequently left Portsmouth with a few military passengers for Queenstown. The orders were that she should make a four hours' full-power trial of her engines between Portsmouth and Plymouth, the trial being watched by Mr. Bannister, of the Admiralty, and Mr. Corner, First Assistant-Engineer at Portsmouth, who took passage for the purpose. She returned to Spithead in the evening, the run having shown further defects. It is supposed that some change of shape has taken place in the ship's bottom, whereby the trueness of the screw shafting has been affected. On Dec. 10 the Malabar returned into Portsmouth Harbour. The engines were kept moving the whole of Sunday at Spithead, but although the water-hose was kept playing upon the crank pins, the forward one continued to get hot, and further adjustments will be necessary. In the meantime, the Euphrates, which was undocked on Monday, has proceeded to Queenstown and Bombay in the place of the Malabar, leaving Portsmouth on Thursday. The Malabar will leave on the 19th with drafts.

OPAL, Capt. Brooke, was at Accra on Nov. 10, and was about to leave for Ascension. The Hon. John Smalman Smith, the new Puisne Judge, had arrived, and taken up his duties. The Frolic arrived at Accra on Nov. 10 from Sierra Leone, and was to proceed to the south-coast division of the station. The Starling was ordered to Ascension, and would return to Cape Coast Castle. The Alecto and Bullfrog would be stationed in the Bights division. The Flirt was ordered to St. Helena, and the Stork to the Cape of Good Hope.

ORONTES, Capt. Andoe, arrived at Hong Kong on Dec. 9, and the Jumna passed Malta on Saturday afternoon on her way to Portsmouth. The P. and O. Company's steamer Poonah, with drafts for Egypt, arrived at Malta on Dec. 10.

PEGASUS, Com. Bickford, has returned to Singapore with master and second engineer rescued from the wreck of the Nisero. The remainder of the crew, 25 in number, are detained on shore as prisoners, but hopes are entertained that their release will soon be effected.

RANGER, Com. W. E. Darwall, opened fire on Dec. 6 on the rebels round Suakim. "Mahmoud Pasha Taher, who commanded at Suakim, disgraced himself upon the occasion of the Moncrieff disaster," says the correspondent of the Times. "Yet the Government, while ordering a commission of inquiry to investigate his conduct, left him in command with the result that he committed every possible blunder. With an inferior force, destined to form the nucleus of Baker Pasha's command, without supports, without taking the smallest precautions, or obtaining any information, he despatched his troops against an enemy of unknown strength, carefully remaining himself out of danger. He delayed attention to their urgent appeals for assistance, until the sole remaining force which could be relied on had been destroyed. Having at last been recalled, he will probably next figure in a high civil appointment. Suleiman Pasha Niazi, the civil Governor, has also been recalled. The Suakim forts were attacked from Nov. 26 to Dec. 1, and so also was the encampment of a friendly tribe north of the town. On the morning of Dec. 2, a force, consisting of 500 Soudanese troops, 200 Bashi-Bazouks, and 200 cavalry, besides officers, went out to attack the rebels and slave-dealers. The force was annihilated within a distance of three hours' march from here. The loss amounts to 15 officers, 680 soldiers, and one mountain gun. There returned, 25 staff officers, 15 cavalry, and 18 infantry, of whom eight were wounded. The available force here consists of 1,000 infantry and 500 of the gendarmerie. Baker Pasha is expected to-morrow. There is an utter panic among the Egyptian officials. The fall of the Egyptian garrisons at Tokar and Sinkat is expected daily, in consequence of starvation. The rebellion is increasing, owing to the apathy of the officials. Othman Digna, the chief of the slave-dealers, is reported to have been killed. The blacks fought well, killing many hundreds of the rebels before they were outnumbered and destroyed. Her Majesty's ship Ranger holds the town, and there is no fear for the Europeans' lives. To this message it is only necessary to add," continues the Times, "that Baker Pasha will be detained until the 15th inst., owing to the absolute necessity of arranging for transport before he leaves, as nothing would probably have been done in Cairo if he had at once started. Zobehr Pasha is enrolling blacks for the expedition. They enlist freely, with the object of returning to their own country; but whether they will fight when they have arrived there is another matter. They are to accompany Baker Pasha, while a certain Hussein Bey, who is supposed to possess great influence among the tribes, has volunteered to head a detachment of Bedouins intended to relieve Khartoum by the river. Meanwhile, there is no further news from Khartoum, though a high Government official assured me that Hicks Pasha had been victorious, and that he was marching on that town. My informant also stated that the Sennaar incident was an insignificant revolt of some 300 men. The same official, who is, perhaps, the most intelligent subordinate in the service of the Egyptian Government, appeared to base his principal hopes for the future on the fact that the Mahdi must die some day, and then all would be over."

SAPPHIRE, Capt. Fullerton, has returned to Kobé from the Korea, where she had been on a diplomatic mission.

SPHINX, Com. Caffin, arrived at Malta on Dec. 10.

SWIFTSURE, Capt. Aitchison, flagship of Vice-Admiral Lyons, was to leave Panama with the Sappho on Dec. 9, and afterwards cruise with the squadron. The Constance, Satellite, and the Mutine were on the coast of Peru on Nov. 19, and ordered to be at Callao by Dec. 15 to meet the flag for annual cruise. The Heroine was at Esquimault on Nov. 19 as senior officer's ship.

VALOROUS, Capt. the Hon. R. Hare, left Portsmouth on Dec. 11 for Glasgow, with a navigating party, to bring round the Phaeton, built and engined by Messrs. Napier. She put into Portland on Dec. 12, through stress of weather.

WOODLARK, Com. T. P. W. Nesham, arrived at Aden on Dec. 5, and left on the 7th for Suakim.

WYE, Staff Com. Miller, arrived at Colon from England on Dec. 6, and would leave for Jamaica on Dec. 10.

J. Schofield, B. W. Colclough, W. G. R. Martin, J. G. Dathan, and E. F. Rowe have passed the examination for assistant-clerkships in the Royal Navy.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1883.

THE correspondence which has been going on for some little time past in the columns of the Morning Post seems now to have come to an end, and we are very glad that it has. It was humiliating to those who felt themselves obliged to appeal to the public, and humiliating to the country. Though we sympathise deeply with those officers who have been deprived of their profession through no fault of their own, we fail to see that they served any good end by writing to the papers. It would not soften the hearts of those in authority; it would not get them back their Purchase-money, nor would it assist them to procure employment. According to the old adage, "God helps those who help themselves." It would be far better, therefore, if the officers thus cut adrift were to combine and form themselves into a society with an organisation similar to that of the Corps of Commissionaires. The society thus formed should have a local habitation and a name, a zealous and able head, and a small staff of energetic men. All officers wishing for employment should deposit their testimonials at the office, and state the nature of the employment required and any special qualifications possessed by the applicants. The administration should ascertain whether the statements made were correct, and a small per-centage should be charged upon every income obtained through means of the Society. This scheme, if in the hands of able and energetic men, would stand every chance of success, and the working of it need not be expensive. By this system officers would save themselves infinite trouble, and those having appointments at their disposal would also derive an advantage. We by no means agree with the correspondent in the Morning Post, who signed himself "Seven Years' Service." His experience would appear to be limited. In thirteen years hence, he, too, may be cut adrift. He will then find that to obtain employment is by no means an easy matter for a retired officer. The estimate which he seems to have formed of the British officer is, we think, quite incorrect. Our experience ranges over considerably more than seven years, and we are of opinion that the British officer will compare favourably with the officers of any other nation, while for general information he is not behind the members of any of the other professions. "Seven Years' Service" says:—"The truth is, many an officer, alas! has no individuality; he will not cultivate the quality, and he will not work in a groove." We should have thought that his not being able to work in a groove would have been an absolute advantage, for he would be all the more able readily to turn his hand to something else in case of need. But we live and learn, and "Seven Years' Service" is evidently so very superior to the general average of men that we must treat all that he says with respect. He goes on to say, still speaking of the shortcomings of the British officer, "He studies neither politics nor the great questions of the day, neither his fellow-beings nor their occupations, neither any branch of knowledge, nor yet any other pursuit." These are neatly turned periods, and their sound is far better than their sense. We are glad to find that so great an authority as this writer evidently is admits that the British officer does his duty like a "Briton." We infer from this that the British officer, at any rate, minds his own business, and does not interfere with subjects with which he is so frequently told he has no right to deal,—politics. This is by no means an easy task, and we respect him all the more for being able to do it. If this young cockerel who crows so early and so loud had only a little more experience in social matters, he would know that for every vacancy that occurs in civil life there are hundreds of applicants, many of whom have special qualifications that no Army officer could be expected to possess. A man may be an excellent soldier, but a very indifferent man of business. He may have a genius for handling troops, but no aptitude for figures. Even Lord Wolseley himself might bring dire disaster into the counting-house. It must be admitted that in all but a few exceptional cases, the positions open to ex-Army officers are few and far between, for in business matters an Army officer cannot be expected to cope with men who have been born and bred to commercial pursuits. There are, however, positions which the ex-Army officer is well qualified to fill, and it only requires a special organisation, on the lines we recommend, to ensure their being obtained.

It is believed the War Office have at last fixed upon an ingenious arrangement, so as to inform Parliament of the satisfactory condition of, at any rate, one branch of the Army—the Artillery. The Estimates will show a reduction of 2,000 men, which it has been found impossible to obtain, and by which the Royal Regiment has been short of its establishment for a considerable period. The recent extraordinary statements by Cabinet Ministers, War Office officials, and by the "inspired Press," will now be understood.

We do not think we can write too strongly or too often regarding the unsanitary state in which the Royal Barracks, Dublin, are allowed to remain. Not only have various officers died from typhoid fever, which the medical men have declared was caught in these barracks, but several of the officers of a Hussar regiment recently quartered there were obliged to go away on sick leave, so as to give them a better chance of recovery away from such noxious atmosphere. One officer, Lieutenant Richmond, died of typhoid fever lately; Lieutenant Thistlethwayte, 60th Rifles, and Lieutenant Bayley have both been laid up with the same fever; and even more recently, Lieutenant Doyne, 21st Hussars, who accompanied his regiment from Dublin to Cahir, no sooner reached that station than he fell sick with enteric fever, and is even now at the time we write only slowly recovering. The officers of the 18th Hussars, who only marched into the Royal Barracks at the latter end of October, already find that the smells arising from drains and night-soil are painful facts. We hear that a Board has assembled to report upon these barracks, but we fear the report will share the fate of too many others,—it will be read, docketted, and pigeon-holed. We trust, should every means fail of inducing the Secretary of State for War to move in this matter, and improve these barracks by carrying out the suggestions of Major-General James, Royal Engineers, that the subject will be brought before Parliament by some of the relatives of those officers whose death can be laid at the door of the then Secretary of State for War. Whilst large sums of money are yearly voted for building and keeping in repair barracks in England, the state into which most barracks occupied by regiments in Ireland have been allowed to fall, is a disgrace to the Government. We purpose, on a future occasion, to bring to notice the state of a few of these public buildings, and the totally inadequate vote allowed for their repair.

The following notice has been sent to all Members of Parliament, of both parties:—"Amid all the clamour of Army reformers the Indian Army very seldom finds a prominent place, and it is only by agitation, which in itself is far from desirable, that those whose lot is cast in that service ever get their grievances properly attended to. The subject of pension and retirement regulations was brought prominently forward a couple of years ago, with the result that a most disgraceful state of affairs was exposed and a speedy remedy had to be adopted, which, though far from complete, has done a reasonable amount of justice. Another complaint of great importance has now come to the front, and that is, on the question of promotion in the Staff Corps and Indian Army. It is a fact that under the present rules a lieutenant is not promoted till after twelve years' service, and a captain does not develop into a major till after twenty years—a period at which he would, if in a British regiment, be superannuated. A major is not promoted to the rank of colonel till after 26 years. As against this, a cavalry subaltern in a British regiment gets a troop in about seven years, while the infantry subaltern is promoted, on the average, in nine years. There is no sort of reason for this glaring anomaly; indeed, the advantage, if any, ought to be on the side of those who have to serve out of England, and in an unhealthy country. A further injustice is done to the sub-lieutenants in India, by which many of them are deprived of one or even two years' service, and it is intended to bring the whole subject before Parliament and the country in every legal way. The security of India depends on the existence of an efficient and contented army, and the sooner the powers that be look to this matter with a view to remedying it, the better it will be in the interest of the nation. The head-quarters of the movement are at 22 Grosvenor Mansions, Westminster."

Last year the Russian Council of State sanctioned an expenditure of £3,313,430 sterling on fortress extensions, and £1,350,000 on siege artillery, to be distributed over a period of 13 years. A first instalment of this, consisting of £358,727, has been assigned for the ensuing year, to provide for the manufacture of several hundred steel guns at the Aboukoff Works and in the Ural Mountains, all of which are intended for garrisons along the German frontier.

We believe that the pipe-clayed buff belt will soon be a thing of the past, it having been finally decided that the belts and straps of the new valise equipment shall be of brown leather, as recommended by Dr. Oliver, the inventor of the magazine accoutrements. The arguments are all in favour of the latter.

The regulation leather leggings will shortly give place to a much more serviceable article, made of canvas. In this respect, we are behind our neighbours on the Continent. The present polished-leather legging may have a smart appearance on show parades, but on active service it has proved a miserable failure.

Our Woolwich correspondent writes, much comment is excited there by the forthcoming appointment of a Lieutenant-Colonel of Artillery to command the Riding Establishment, which, already consisting of one Major, one Captain, and two Subalterns, has as many officers as there is work for, which is chiefly teaching the cadets how to ride. It is believed the reason of the appointment is the plethora of Lieutenant-Colonels with no duties to perform.

We understand the independent opinion of English officers attached to the Egyptian service who are at present on leave in England is unfavourable to the efficiency of the Egyptian Army, which they believe can never be depended upon in time of danger.

Major P. Morrisey, on the Retired List, late 38th Foot, has been appointed a Captain of Invalids at Chelsea Hospital. Major Morrisey served in the ranks of the 13th Hussars in the Crimea, and afterwards held the Adjutancy of the regiment for many years.

A case of some importance to the Volunteer service is likely shortly to come before the Courts of Law. The plaintiff will be the Lieutenant-Colonel of a Metropolitan Volunteer Battalion, the defendant, its Honorary Colonel. The Honorary Colonel, as we understand the facts, is playing the part of a sort of military dog in the manger. He has been asked to do one of two things,—either pay the arrears of subscription due from him under an agreement entered into on his appointment, or resign his commission, and make way for somebody who will subscribe to the corps funds. He has refused hitherto to adopt either one course or the other. The Lieutenant-Colonel is therefore said to have determined to submit the case for judgment, feeling that by all principles of equity, the defaulting Honorary Colonel ought to adopt one of the two courses open to him. We confess we have no sympathy with those who accept positions and afterwards endeavour to shirk pecuniary liability, and we venture to hope that the decision in this case will dispose of other senior officers who, whilst sticking pertinaciously to their rank and privileges, refuse to allow themselves to be "bled," as they term it, when the season arrives for the paying of subscriptions necessary for the maintenance of their regiment in a proper and efficient condition. The system which compels Volunteer officers to put their hands into their pockets and make up the deficiencies of the Government grant is, of course, indefensible. But so long as it exists, officers, whatever their rank, ought not to be allowed to set the rules of their regiments at defiance; and no commanding officer, however well he may be supported, can expect his subordinates to pay subscriptions promptly and willingly, if they know that those in the higher ranks, who have all the kudos and none of the work, resist all appeals to them for a fair share of pecuniary help. A soldier who has earned distinction in the field may bring credit on a regiment, but a civilian, whatever his social status may be, ought not to be allowed to hold a military rank, unless he is prepared to carry out all the obligations which that rank entails. Whatever the rules may be on the subject, there can be no two opinions as to the right of the Lieutenant-Colonel to press for payment of subscriptions. In effect, all subscriptions of Volunteer officers are illegal. But it is obvious that the service could not be kept up without these subscriptions. Senior officers ought to set an example, and not quibble over the payment of their fair proportion of expenses. Or if they do object to parting with their money, they should adopt the only other reasonable alternative,—tender their resignations, and quit a position which under the circumstances they cannot fill with dignity to themselves or benefit to the service.

In his speech on Wednesday, Lord Wolseley expresses the hope that the day is not far distant when the names of the Volunteer officers will appear in the Army List, "not in a separate portion of it, but together with those in the Regular service." If Lord Wolseley means by this that he would like to see all the Volunteer regiments shown in the Army List as battalions of Line regiments, on the same page or pages, and under the same headings as the Line regiments, we venture to hope that that day is very far distant indeed. The muddle that has ensued on the jumbling-up of the Militia and Line in the manner indicated, is bad enough; but with the Volunteer battalions added, the confusion would be simply hopeless. Imagine the Rifle Brigade, with its four Regular battalions, its five Militia battalions, and its eight Volunteer battalions, all appearing as one regiment! Stupendous! It is time that such tomfoolery ceased, and the recognised authorities turned their attention to more serious matters, and tried to create that first requirement,—an Army.

We believe Major C. W. Long, Royal Artillery, succeeds Major Hon. A. Stewart in command of the Riding Establishment at Woolwich.

A committee of officers of the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers has been appointed to visit Dover, Portsmouth, Plymouth, and some other fortified stations on the coast, for the purpose of reporting upon the appliances necessary for the several sea-coast batteries armed with the new heavy guns for sea defences, to enable them to be fired by means of electricity.

The war game played at the Horse Guards on Thursday—the first of a series for officers of the Auxiliary Forces—was most successfully conducted throughout, and to Lieutenant-General Higginson is due credit for the happy idea which has enabled Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteer officers, residing in and about London, to develop their military knowledge in a very useful, if not altogether practical manner. The Commanders on the occasion—Majors Davis, 3rd Battalion, Royal West Surrey Regiment, and Bevington, 3rd Volunteer Battalion, Royal West Surrey Regiment—were pretty equally matched, and both displayed considerable originality and knowledge of the movements of the three arms. The game was watched most attentively by a large number of officers of the Auxiliary Forces, who by their presence testified that General Higginson's thoughtfulness in throwing the model-room open to them was fully appreciated.

The Liverpool Courier expresses a very reasonable hope that the colours late deposited in Edinburgh may not be treated as the cathedral authorities of Chichester did those of the 35th (Royal Sussex) Regiment. In the course of some alterations or so-called "restoration," the colours, which had never been "lost" in action, were lost in the cathedral, and eventually found amidst a heap of rubbish. Her Majesty the Queen thereupon requested the colours might be lodged in Windsor Castle,—a most significant rebuke.

The Government of India have cancelled the rule restricting British Cavalry and Infantry regiments in India to one serjeant and one corporal to every 13 privates in the former, and to every 19 privates in the latter. This will give much satisfaction to commanding officers, whose hands hitherto have been tied by the Audit Department when promotions were to be made. Thenceforth the full established number of serjeants and corporals may be kept up, barring, of course, those who are on the way home as invalids or time-expired, in whose places promotion may not be made until they are absorbed, discharged, or otherwise provided for at home.

The North-West Timber Company of Canada, with a capital of £250,000, in shares of £5 each, has been framed to acquire and work the licences granted by the Crown Timber Office of Canada, for cutting the timber over an area of 250 square miles, situated on Lake Winnipeg; the land yielding, at the present time, at least 25,000,000 superficial feet of merchantable timber, the value of the pine and spruce alone, when cut and sold, being estimated at £1,150,000, in addition to that not yet sufficiently grown to become marketable. The price agreed to be paid by the directors to the vendors is equal to less than the value of the standing timber, a feature which ought alone to recommend this company to investors. The shares now offered to the public are 32,000 in number, which will be entitled to a preferential dividend of eight per cent.

The Admiralty have decided upon building by contract a new vessel of a novel type, designated a torpedo cruiser. Their Lordships are apparently dissatisfied with the torpedo-ram Polyphemus, and the new cruiser will in its general lines resemble the latest design of a lightly-armoured corvette, and will be constructed of steel, with exceptionally high steam. It will be fitted to discharge torpedoes above and below the water-line, and for auxiliary purposes will mount a battery of guns.

The directors of the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railroad Company have authorised their London agents to receive applications for £200,000 of bonds, which constitute a first permanent charge upon the railroad and all its franchises and the property of the company, consisting of a fleet of ferry boats, water fronts, docks, &c., the present earnings of which the directors state are more than sufficient to pay all charges, including the interest of the bonds now offered, the calculation being based upon a traffic already existing and under the directors' control. We refer our readers requiring detailed information to our advertisement columns. The offices of the London agents are at 80 Lombard Street.

JOHN COWAN, Esq., Director Caledonian Railway Company, Glasgow.
JAMES PENDER, Esq., Director Eastern and South African Telegraph Company, Old Broad Street, London.

TRUSTEES IN UNITED STATES.—The United States Trust Company, of New York, 49 Wall Street.

Messrs. BOYLE, CAMPBELL, BUXTON, and Co. are authorised by the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railroad Company to receive APPLICATIONS for £200,000 of the BONDS above mentioned. The price of subscription is par, or £200 per Bond, payable as follows:

5	per cent. or	£10	per bond on	application.
20	,,	40	,,	allotment.
37½	,,	75	,,	January 15, 1884.
37½	,,	75	,,	February 15, 1884.

with option to pay up instalments in anticipation, under a discount at the rate of 5 per cent per annum.

These Bonds constitute a first permanent charge upon the Railroad and all its franchises and the property of the Company, together with the lease and working arrangements of the Staten Island Railway Company, and its fleet of ferry boats, water fronts, docks, and ferry franchises, the present earnings of which are, as will be seen hereafter, more than sufficient to pay all charges, including the interest of the Bonds now offered.

The Staten Island Rapid Transit Railroad Company was formed for the purpose of facilitating, increasing, and controlling the large passenger and other traffic between the City of New York and the suburb of Staten Island, one of the nearest and most desirable residential districts of New York.

The proceeds of the Bonds will be expended in completing and extending the line of road along the north and east shores of Staten Island, under the direct supervision of an engineer duly appointed by the English trustees.

This extension of the existing railroad will concentrate the traffic and increase the revenue of the Company very largely.

The Bonds will be redeemed at par on January 1, 1913.

The interest will be payable half-yearly in London at the counting-house of Messrs. Boyle, Campbell, Buxton, and Co., agents of the Company, 80 Lombard Street, E.C., on the 1st days of April and October in each year. The Bonds will bear interest from October 1, 1883.

In the event of there being no allotment, the deposit paid will be returned without deduction; and should a smaller number of Bonds be allotted than that applied for, the surplus of the deposit money will be appropriated to the payment of further calls, under deduction of 5 per cent. per annum for prepayment.

Copies of the Company's Charter, the mortgage deed under which the Bonds are issued (which contains all necessary clauses for the complete protection of the bondholders), and the lease, can be seen at the office of the London Agents of the Company, Messrs. Boyle, Campbell, Buxton, and Co., 80 Lombard Street, E.C., and with the Solicitors, Messrs. Finlayson and Auld, 150 West George Street, Glasgow.

Application for the bonds on the form accompanying the prospectus may be sent either to the Clydesdale Bank (Limited), 30 Lombard Street, E.C., or any other of the branches, or to Messrs. Boyle, Campbell, Buxton, and Co. (the London Agents of the Company), of whom prospectuses may be had on application.

The following is an extract from a letter addressed to Messrs. Boyle, Campbell, Buxton, and Co., by Mr. Erastus Wiman (of Messrs. R. G. Dun and Co., New York, London, Glasgow, and Manchester), Director of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and President of the Staten Island Railway Company:—

Staten Island lies in the harbour of New York, six miles from that great metropolis, and has an area of 58 square miles. In point of natural beauty and attractions as a place of residence, it is perhaps not too much to say that it is unsurpassed, if equalled, in the world.

The Island has already a permanent population of 40,000 (most of the adults of which are engaged in business pursuits in the City of New York), which is steadily increasing, and must more rapidly increase by facilities of conveyance between the Island and the City.

The traffic between this Island and the City of New York has hitherto been carried on by two separate companies, viz.:—

1st. The Staten Island Railway Company, across the Island, whose ferry-boats serve the south shore.

2nd. The New York and Staten Island Steamboat Company (Stairns) on the north shore.

The services of these two companies can be practically combined by this Company, and by the contract with the Staten Island Railway Company, and the construction of the new line of shore railroad, this Company gains virtually a monopoly of the whole traffic between Staten Island and New York, the traffic being already more than sufficient to pay the interest on the proposed loan.

The present net earnings of the Rapid Transit Railroad Company average		$156,313
Fixed charges—
7 per cent. on existing mortgage on the leased Staten Island Railway Company, assumed by this Company	$21,000
Rental of Staten Island Railway Company's property	59,600
Six per cent. on $1,000,000 Bonds now offered	60,000	$140,600
Surplus over all charges...		$15,713

This statement is based on the existing traffic receipts but a careful estimate of results of next year's working influenced by the expenditure of these bonds on the extension and construction of the new branch lines, gives:—

Actual receipts available, first year		$477,000
Estimated expenditure after increasing service threefold over existing arrangments		274,000
Surplus over all expenses		$203,000
Fixed Charges—
Seven per cent. on the $300,000 mortgage already existing on the leased Staten Island Railway Company, assumed by this Company	$21,000
Rental of Staten Island Railway Company's property...	59,600
Six per cent. on $1,000,000 Construction Bonds now offered	60,000	140,600
Surplus over fixed charges, first year		$62,400

The above statement is calculated on acquiring only one-half the traffic of the north shore of the Island, without any increase whatever, as the result of augmented facilities.

It is believed this traffic will increase at the rate of 10 per cent. This, together with the acquirement—by superior facilities or negotiation—of the entire traffic of the north shore, will, it is confidently believed, increase the total business within three years to...	$739,950
Expenses need not materially increase, as the arrangements for the existing traffic provide very ample accommodation for the contemplated growth, but add for expenditure, repairs and renewals, and increased expenses, say, $70,000 per annum, making total expenses	344,000

With which to pay fixed charges of $140,000.

THE ADVERTISER,
WITH A LARGE EXPERIENCE
WHOLESALE WINE TRADE,
CAPITAL AND CREDIT HERE AND ABROAD,
The Result of Many Years' Trading, would wish to
COMBINE with GENTLEMEN of INFLUENCE of the ARMY and NAVY, to ESTABLISH A CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY,
FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF WINES AND SPIRITS, ON A NEW PLAN.

The commercial status and great experience of the advertiser would enable the new Society to buy on the best terms, that, as compared with Societies employing intermediaries, would represent the saving of a large per-centage on the cost prices; again, it would not be saddled with the possible losses from the depreciation of Stocks, or otherwise, of other Departments. The Wine Department, per se, is said to be the one that yields the most profit to the Co-operative Stores.

To give the new undertaking a fair start, and as an earnest of his confidence in its success, the Advertiser would give his services for a term without remuneration or profit to him whatsoever. Full explanations at an interview, which can be arranged by addressing BETA, care of Mr. West, 49 George Street, Portman Square, W.

PARTNERSHIPS, with limited liability, in a Firm of high repute and many years' standing in the City of London. Profits exceed 20 per cent. per annum. £20,000 (in one sum, or in amounts of not less than £2,000) is required, owing to reorganisation and the demands of an increasing business. Audited balance-sheets are open to inspection, and thorough investigation invited.—Principals or their Solicitors to apply to "X.," care of GODDEN S. HARE, Solicitor, 2 Metal Exchange Buildings, E.C.

WANTED.—A PARTNER in an Established Proprietary Club, or a person who will take the Management of the same, inclined to invest capital therein. A full list of Members and of the Committee, and all details will be furnished on application to MARRECO and DARNELL, Chartered Accountants, 1 Clement's Inn, London, W.C.

PARTNERSHIP.—WANTED, a GENTLEMAN with CAPITAL, to take the Management and Share of a Foreign Branch of an old-established London Firm, Purveyors to H.M.'s Forces. A retired officer not objected to.—Address, "R.," care of Messrs. CHARLES BARKER and SONS, 8 Birchin Lane, E.C.

COFFEE.—A Gentleman, opening up a Coffee Estate in Coorg, would be glad to MEET with a PARTNER or JUNIOR, to learn the business. £3,000 required. About 100 acres in cultivation.—For further particulars, apply to "S. P.," Stanwick House, near Higham Ferrers.

TO OFFICERS RETIRING.—An opportunity offers for a Gentleman who can control £3,000 to £5,000 to secure an interest in a genteel business (not trade). The business is a monopoly, and is a certain fortune. Every investigation courted, including three months' trial in office, at the end of which time, if mutually agreeable, a Partnership would be formed. No letters noticed which do not contain reference to a first-class Solicitor.—Address, H. S. CLARKE, care of James Hoare, 5 St. Martin's Court, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

LANE'S PRIVATE HOTEL (Nos. 1, 2, and 3 ST. ALBAN'S PLACE, CHARLES STREET, St. James's, S.W.), for Officers in the Army and Navy, Members of Clubs, and others. Most eligibly situated in the immediate vicinity of the principal Club Houses. Gentlemen requiring sleeping accommodation only, are respectfully informed every attention will be paid to their comfort and convenience. A trustworthy porter in attendance all night.

"Recommends itself not alone to those of limited means, but to the wealthy, who, when frequenting large gatherings, whether at racecourses, theatres, public meetings, or even on that sacred thoroughfare, the king's highway, have known what it is to be robbed of their valuables."

OROIDE GOLD WATCHES,

Accurate timekeepers, 21s to 50s, safe and free per post (registered).

The "SERVICE" KEYLESS WATCH,

Open face, jewelled in eight holes, Two Guineas, post free.

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose."

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring and working licences for cutting timber granted by the Crown Timber Office for Canada, under the Consolidated Statutes of Canada, cap. 23, at nominal rents and royalties, to the North-West Timbering Company of Canada (Limited).

The licences to be first acquired comprise working rights over an area of 250 square miles selected of timber lands, situated on Lake Winnipeg, in the province of Manitoba, communicating by water with the City of Winnipeg, from which they are distant about 100 miles, affording the cheapest and most convenient mode of transport by floating down the timber rafts to the central market of the Great North-West.

These timber forests are in a virgin condition, and have been carefully and independently explored by Messrs. Holland, Forbes, and Kemp, Canadian timber valuers of experience and position. Their report shows that the forests contain vast quantities of spruce, pine, birch, tamarac (larch), and other varieties, the most important of which for market purposes are the spruce and pine which may be taken to be from 20 to 25 inches in diameter, four feet from the ground, the land yielding now at least 250,000,000 superficial feet of merchantable lumber. (Vide Reports.)

The value of the pine and spruce timber alone upon these estates when cut and sold may be estimated at £1,150,000, in addition to the immense quantity of growing timber not yet large enough for market; sufficient with careful management to render the forests practically inexhaustible.

The Company is in the position of a going concern, earning immediate dividends, having two sawmills, situated upon Lake Winnipeg, one at Selkirk and the other at Fort Alexander, in full work, capable of turning out 20,000,000 ft. of merchantable timber per annum, and with everything necessary for continuing the business upon even a more extensive scale than at present.

The Company also acquires convenient and suitable timber yards and premises in the cities of Winnipeg and Regina, and Moosejaw and Medicine Hat; also large storehouses and depôts at Bullshead, on Lake Winnipeg, the head-quarters of the winter timber business, with the necessary appliances, so the Company steps into an established and developed business, now yielding large profits.

The licences to be acquired by this Company are, as customary in Canada, renewable annually under the regulations of the Department of Crown Lands, and form a perfect title.

The value of timber lands in America is pointed out in the Times of January 18, 1883, under the heading of "Land in North-Western America."

The position and prospects of the timber trade in Canada warrant the belief that large profits will be immediately realised. The enormous demand which exists for timber has induced a vast and increasing trade; consequently, there can be no question that, year by year, the value of timber in Canada will steadily increase.

The geographical position of the timber limits, mills, and depôts acquired is such as to give the Company an immense advantage in carrying on business on a large scale with the great Canadian North-West. The nearest available sources of supply of timber for this enormous district, which is so rapidly becoming populated and developed, are the Company's forests and timber yards.

The profits which, under the existing circumstances, it is estimated the Company can realise, are as follows:

The selling price of timber at the Company's yards in Winnipeg is 20 dols. per thousand, and at Regina, Moosejaw, and Medicine Hat it is from $30 to $40 per thousand; and at new centres further West the price is higher. The cost of producing timber delivered at Winnipeg, including every charge, in which is also embraced the royalty and rent to the Crown, is $10 per thousand, and as the production of the two steam saw mills is equal to 20,000,000 ft. per annum, the value of which—not at the average price of sale at the Company's lumber yards which would be from $30 to $40, but at only $20, the price at Winnipeg—will be as—

or a net profit of £40,000 per annum, equal to nearly 25 per cent. on the capital to be issued, exclusive of the profits on the sales of small timber, as laths and rooting timber, which forms a large additional item of profit.

In the above estimate it will be seen that no allowances are made for the profits of the timber yards, through which channel all the sales must necessarily go; it is only reasonable to assume that for a well-equipped business under the best administration, the profits cannot be inferior to those of other smaller companies labouring under less advantageous circumstances which pay dividends of from 25 to 30 per cent. per annum.

The capital of the Company is £250,000, divided into 32,000 shares of £5, entitled to a preferential dividend of 8 per cent., in each and every year, before payment of a dividend on the 18,000 shares of £5, to be allotted to the vendors in part payment.

The Company will acquire all existing contracts, and take over all stock-in-trade at a valuation.

The price which the vendors (who are the promoters of the Company) have agreed to accept for all the above properties, and for the valuable rights conferred by the timber licences, is equal to less than the value of the standing timber, taking in part payment shares of the Company—which are not entitled to any dividends whatever until 8 per cent. per annum has been paid on the subscribed capital—the vendors undertaking to defray the whole of the preliminary expenses of the Company, including advertising, printing, &c., up to the allotment of shares.

The contract consideration to be paid to the vendors is £60,000, payable in cash by agreed instalments, and £90,000 in fully-paid shares of the Company.

The capital now proposed to be raised will be ample not only to pay for the property and provide sufficient working capital, but also to make provision for the extension of business which the greatly increasing development of the country must produce.

The Directors have very carefully considered the estimates made, which they believe to be perfectly reliable, and, looking to the extremely profitable character of the business, the undertaking presents features recommending it as a desirable investment, yielding immediate and large returns, free from the risks which accompany so many enterprises.

The only contract which has been entered into is between the North-West Lumbering Company of Canada (Limited), of the one part, and James Macdonald, as a trustee for and on behalf of the Company, on the other part, which with the Memorandum and Articles of Association, can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

Applications for shares must be made in the printed form, accompanied by a deposit of 5s per share, and forwarded to the Bankers of the Company, the Royal Exchange Bank (Limited), 75 Cornhill, London, E.C.; or to the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company, from either of whom prospectuses and forms of application can be obtained, and from the following Brokers:—

In Glasgow	Keyden and Chrystall, St. Vincent Street.
In Birmingham	James Parker, Esq., Bennett's Hill.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

December 3, 1883.

The terrible disaster to General Hicks' Army in the Soudan may be considered as fully confirmed. A remnant of hope may, indeed, remain that some brave men have succeeded in avoiding their fate, but even that hope is of the faintest, and, as an available army of resistance, it must be considered to have disappeared. So much imperfect and inaccurate information has been wired to England in the excitement of the first news, and that information has been so very unjustifiably "extended" by a process with which the British public is now familiar, that it may be interesting if I recapitulate briefly, as, having seen every single despatch from Khartoum, I am able to do, the entire evidence upon which all information is founded. The evidence received at Khartoum up to 6 p.m., on Friday last, November 30, is from four sources exclusively :—

1. A Copt, who was a Government official in the town of Obeid when taken by the Mahdi last winter. He appears then to have saved his life by professing Islamism, and about six weeks ago started on a donkey, disguised as a dervish, with the intention of getting to Khartoum. On his way (I give his story without any comment) he saw with his own eyes a battle which lasted three days. That at the beginning of the battle, Hicks' army was divided into columns; that the foremost being attacked, it fell back upon the other and formed a square; that the Egyptians inflicted considerable loss on the Mahdi's forces; that at last the Mahdi summoned some well-armed troops out of Obeid; and that the army of Hicks was then destroyed to a man. He adds that an artist and fifty soldiers were to his knowledge absent from the rest, and therefore escaped. This witness goes to Khartoum, is threatened with punishment if he is detected lying, but refuses to change his story, repeating that he saw it "with these eyes."

2. The second witness is a native of country between Obeid and Dueme. He professes to have seen the end of the battle. According to him, the army was entrapped into a "wooded defile without water," was unable to use its guns, fought for three days, and then exhausted for want of water were all "cut to pieces." He adds, an artist and fifty soldiers came in after the battle, and were taken prisoners and carried to Obeid. This man carries his news to Colonel de Coëtlogon, at Dueme.

3. The third witness is one of a number of spies who have been continually sent out to bring in intelligence of Hicks, and who have at different times brought reports of Hicks' success. He belongs to a family loyal for two generations to the Government, and professes to have a father and brother with Hicks' army. He returns to Khartoum, having been at Obeid. He saw nothing of any battle, but he saw the Mahdi's army enter Obeid with captured guns, and he was present at a religious ceremony in honour of a victory, and he adds that there was one European prisoner present.

4. The last witness is a Coptic merchant. He also professes to have seen the battles, and gives many details. Alaidin, he says, was killed the first day. Hicks only on the third day by a lance. The last cartouche was fired on the third day. Then the soldiers were exhausted for want of water, and paid four dollars for a drink out of their more fortunate comrade's flask. Some, he thinks, may have got away, but they would have been sure to go to the wells, and then they would have been caught.

Now, what amount of credence can be attached to these four stories. To take the last first. I think the fourth may be dismissed, as sounding much more like hearsay evidence than that of an eye-witness. He must have been very close indeed, much closer than I ever knew a Copt to get to danger, to see and recognise Alaidin and Hicks Pasha's face, not to mention the overhearing of the bargaining for water, all which smells very much of the imagination of a Copt merchant. The portion about the men making for wells and being taken there is admittedly conjecture. I think the whole may be considered so based on some rumours he had heard. But take the other three, and it is difficult to withhold belief to the main facts. First of all, let us observe that if the whole story is a lie, these persistent rumours are purposely circulated with an object. Now, I have had experience of many carefully concocted Arab lies, and I have found them always stupidly circumstantial, and agreeing in their every detail. The fact that these do not is evidence in favour of their truth. Take the first two alone,—men who have been presumably far apart, since one makes for Khartoum and the other for Dueme. The first, who is on the Khartoum side, knows that there are an artist and fifty men out of the camp, and so he reports them as saved. The other, who appears to have lingered near the spot later, sees an artist and fifty men come into camp, and not killed, but taken prisoners. Both, I should add, describe the European in a way which enables him to be identified with Vizetelly, of the Graphic. Then comes the third witness, to my mind the most reliable of the lot, for he knows least. He is at Obeid, he has heard nothing of a battle, when he sees the army of the Mahdi coming into the city with Egyptian guns and one European prisoner, and celebrating a victory. Without stopping to ask a question, and so risk detection, he comes back and tells what he has seen. The above gives every detail which we possess. I have seen wonderful stories in English, French, and local papers, giving much more minute details. As there are only two Englishmen alive in the Soudan, Colonel Coëtlogon and Power, of the Times, as we may be sure that they would carefully examine every witness who came in, as I have seen every one of their telegrams, and as they distinctly say that these four witnesses are the sole ones they have been able to discover, I am compelled to state that all over and above what I have stated is pure imagination. Some have published circumstantial details of how Hicks' troops went over to the Mahdi; examining carefully into this report, I have invariably found it end in this assertion,—"Oh, they must have done, they always have done," or, "How could eleven thousand have been killed?" or, "Did you ever know an Arab fight three days?" Now, while I am quite free to confess that nothing would seem more probable to me than that Egyptian soldiers should desert to the Mahdi, justice to those soldiers compels me to say that there is not a shred of evidence to show that they did so; there is not even a hint. If you refuse credence to the fact that those men fought for three days, and I admit it is very incredible, then you must refuse credence to the whole story, and Hicks and his army may yet be alive. Either the men died fighting, or there is no evidence of their death. It is a bright spot in a dark tragedy, if we can believe that English officers have taught Egyptian soldiers to die like men. The veracity of the circumstantial accounts to which I allude may be guaged by the fact that Major Bentinck Martin, at present in London, commanded the Cavalry, and that Captain Forrester Walker directed the Artillery, presumably from the balcony of Shepheard's Hotel. Another represents your gallant correspondent, Major Colborne, as a sole survivor, and I am not certain that he is not supposed to be the witness who was disguised as a Dervish.

NOTES FROM ALDERSHOT.

The usual route-marching by the Infantry Brigades has been varied with outpost duty during the week, the weather having been favourable for these operations.

The companies undergoing "military training" were exercised in night-picket duty on Tuesday. This portion, at least, of the six weeks' course of training, if carried out by officers of experience, cannot fail to be of value.

Classes for field-sketching and reconnaissance have been formed, consisting of one officer and four non-commissioned officers from each regiment of cavalry and infantry.

The instruction of the non-commissioned officers will be carried out by the officers, who are selected from those who have gone through a course of surveying at Sandhurst, or under a garrison instructor. The whole of the work done by these classes will be under the supervision of Major Miles, garrison instructor.

The plans are being prepared for a new post-office, shortly to be erected in the South Camp, in place of the disgraceful shed in K lines at present used for postal and telegraphic purposes.

The new canteen of the Royal Engineers, in the South Camp, was opened on Monday evening last. A large sum of money has been expended in making this building a most comfortable convivial club.

An interesting lecture was delivered in the Prince Consort's Library on Monday afternoon last, by Lieutenant-Colonel Alleyne, Brigade-Major of Artillery, on the subject of "Artillery in the Field." Sir Archibald Alison was present.

Detachments, consisting of Captain Jameson, Lieutenants Stewart, Combe, and Bourchier, and 116 men, 26th Cameronians, and Major Phibbs, Captain Wingfield, Lieutenant Godwin-Austen, and 123 men, 39th Dorsetshire Regiment, will leave Aldershot on Tuesday for Portsmouth, to embark in the Malabar for India, to join the 90th and 54th respectively.

Surgeon-Major E. C. Markey, A.M.D., arrived at the camp on Tuesday, and assumed charge of the Cambridge Hospital, vice Brigade-Surgeon W. H. Muschamp, ordered to Ireland for duty.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. W. Shakerley, R.H.A., has been ordered to Woolwich for duty.

THE CHINESE NAVY.

[Part I.]

The latest development of the Tonquin question is drawing the attention of Europe to the strength and efficiency of the Chinese Navy, of which, however, but little information is to be found in naval literature. We have already published a series of articles on the Arsenals of China, which we now supplement by a review of the matériel of the steam war navy, compiled from data in our possession. All reference to the personnel of the Chinese Navy has been purposely omitted, as likely to mislead, for a simple statement of numbers and organisation forms no correct criterion for estimating the value of the same as a fighting body; and above all, as it is by no means certain by what nationality of men the vessels will be worked and fought, should the Navy be called into action. The outbreak at the present moment of hostilities between France and China is in so far unfortunate for the latter empire, as the most formidable portion of her Navy is compelled to lie idle in German ports, without daring to put to sea, even if permitted to do so by the German Government. To these embargoed ships we shall denote a few words before proceeding to describe the force actually in Chinese waters. It will be remembered that some years back a German firm received, through the Chinese Ambassador to the Court of Berlin, an order to build two powerful ironclads, semi-coast defenders, and a swift unarmoured cruiser, the latter to resemble the well-known Rendel type of vessel. The two first-named vessels, the Ting Yuen, launched in 1881, and Chen Yuen, launched in 1882, are now lying under the forts of Swinemuende, ready for sea, and the cruiser has just been launched. Another German shipbuilding firm has also received orders to build two swift cruisers, which are rapidly approaching completion. These vessels were not ordered by the Chinese Ambassador, but through a Hamburg firm having connection in China. The dimensions of the Ting Yuen and Chen Yuen are :—Length, 308 ft. 5 in.; beam, 60 ft. 3 in.; draught, 20 ft. 9 in.; depth, 26 ft. 11 in.; displacement, 7,400 tons; engines, 6,000 indicated horse-power, twin-screws; speed, 14·5 knots; armour, 14½-in. Wilson's compound plates; armament, four 12-in. and two 9½-in. Krupps, mounted in four barbettes, besides torpedoes and machine-guns. The Vulcan Company's unarmoured cruiser is 236 ft. long, 34 ft. 6 in. wide, 23 ft. 7 in. deep, draws 15 ft. 9 in., has a displacement of 2,355 tons, and twin-screw engines of 2,800 horse-power, driving her at a speed of 15 knots per hour. She is, like the above vessels, built of steel, and has an armoured deck for the protection of her engines and other vital parts. Her armament consists of two 8½-in. Krupps, mounted in a machine gun-proof turret forward, and a 5⅞-in. Krupp, carried in a similar turret aft. She also carries a number of machine-guns and a supply of Whitehead torpedoes. The cruisers building at Kiel are of 2,200 tons burden, with engines of 3,000 horse-power. They will carry powerful Krupp guns and Whitehead torpedoes. Thus it will be seen that five of the most useful vessels are unavailable for immediate service. The fleet in Chinese waters is composed of four divisions, viz., that of the Pei-Ho and North Coast, that of Foo-Choo, that of Shanghai, and that of Canton. The chief vessels in the Pei-Ho division are the deck-armoured cruisers, Yang-Woi and Tchao-Yung, built at Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1881. They are representatives of the Rendel type, are 210 ft. long, 32 ft. broad, 21 ft. 9 in. deep, draw 15 ft. 8 in. of water, and have a displacement of 1,350 tons. Their engines exert a power of 2,600 horses, and propel them at a speed of upwards of 16 knots per hour. One of the chief features of these vessels is their powerful armament, which consists of two 10-in. and two 5-in. breech-loading Armstrong guns, besides smaller guns and torpedoes. These are the only sea-going vessels belonging to the Pei-Ho and North-coast Division, as the remaining force is made up of that class of "man-of-war" of which her Majesty's gunboat Staunch is the prototype. It is an instructive and interesting study for those interested in Naval matters to follow the development of the modern fighting-vessels, be it gunboat or be it line-of-battle ironclad, from its birth in 1859 (taking the "Kinburn batteries" as the first step towards the great revolution) to our present Inflexible, Brennus, and Morosini class; but how small must this inch-by-inch progress appear when compared with the sudden transition from sailing junk, armed, for the most part, with smooth-bore nine-pounders, to the very latest type of fighting-vessels, as now represented in the modern Chinese Navy. The first steam war-vessels for the Pei-Ho Fleet were ordered of Mandarin Ward, and built in North America in 1863; but the sudden death of this "Mandarin" and the outbreak of the War of Secession cancelled the contract, and the vessels were ultimately purchased by the Northern States. In 1874, however, Messrs. Laird Brothers, of Birkenhead, received from the Governor of the Pei-Ho provinces instructions to build two gunboats of the Staunch type, as mentioned above, but of slightly larger dimensions. These were the Foo-Cheng and Chien-Cheng, both launched in 1875. They are 87 ft. long, 26 ft. broad, 9 ft. deep, draw 6 ft. 6 in. of water, and have a displacement of 260 tons. Their engines indicate 180 horse-power, and their speed is eight knots per hour. The hulls are built of iron. These boats each carry one 10-in. Vavasseur gun, mounted in the bow, and we may here observe that the Chinese Navy, in the extraordinary mixture of type and calibre of its guns, is only approached by that of a great European Power, which shall be nameless. The next vessels ordered were those of the Alpha class, launched in 1876. Their dimensions were 118 ft. 6 in. by 27 ft. by 10 ft., with a draught of 7 ft. 6 in., and a displacement of 319 tons. They each carried one 11-in. muzzle-loading Armstrong, and two 12-pounder breech-loaders. Engine power, 310; speed, 9·2 knots. These boats having given satisfaction, two more were ordered, the Gamma and Delta, which were 120 ft. long, 30 ft. broad, 11 ft. deep, drew 8 ft. of water, and had a displacement of 410 tons. Their speed averaged 9½ knots, and they each mounted one 12-in. M.L. and two 12-pounder B.L. Armstrong guns. These boats, which were launched in 1877, were followed in 1879-1881 by seven vessels of a larger type, the first four of which were named by the Chinese the Chin-Nang, Chin-Pei, Fei-Fung, and Lung-Lang; the three remaining boats, though probably renamed, are still known as the Iota, Kappa, and Lambda. Their dimensions are :—Length, 125 ft.; beam, 29 ft.; depth, 12 ft. 3 in.; draught, 9 ft. 6 in.; displacement, 440 tons. They are propelled by twin-screw engines of 420 horse-power at a speed of 10 knots per hour. While the hulls of the first-named boats were built of iron, those of the latter are of steel. They each carry an 11-in. Armstrong B.L. gun in the bows, besides two 12-pounders on the broadsides. So much for the Pei-Ho and North-coast Division, which, as will be seen, is composed of gunboats for coast defence, with the exception of the fast cruisers Yang-Woi and Tchao-Yung, which latter vessels would, no doubt, prove handy craft if properly commanded.

MACHINE-GUNS.

I PROPOSE to enter into the question of machine-guns as used in our own and foreign navies, leaving the question for their use for military purposes to be discussed in another paper. The projectiles thrown by a Nordenfelt 1½-in. or a Hotchkiss 33-millimètre gun, are capable of penetrating the side of a wooden vessel at 2,000 yards. It is, therefore, unquestionable that a very considerable modification must be made in our slightly armoured vessels to protect them; whilst totally unarmoured ships must become things of the past, however swift or handy they may be. Had such weapons been available at the battle of Trafalgar, the ships of both combatants would have become so riddled that every man on board above water-line would have been killed or wounded. No ships of the future will be secure from the attack of machine-guns, unless their most vital parts as well as their crews are properly protected by armour. In the tops of ironclads, on the bulwarks of every class of ship or armed merchant vessels, and in ships' boats, one kind or another of machine-gun will be a necessity. Lord Charles Beresford, in June last, gave an interesting lecture at the Royal United Service Institution on this subject, and it is to be regretted that it does not seem to have had any appreciable effect. The present machine-guns are by Dr. Gatling, Messrs. Nordenfelt, Hotchkiss, and Gardner. It is worthy of remark that all four of these inventors are foreigners. A recent writer said "long continuance in the grooves of the public service tend to blunt the mental faculties and circumscribe the exercise of individual judgment by subservience to rule or precedent;" and I say, in no spirit of detraction to our past and present authorities, that the country requires some modern official Hercules to cut through these bonds of red-tape and precedent, so that inventions and improvements may be accepted on their own merits and utilised without delay for the advantage of the public service. We are very far from possessing a perfect machine-gun either for use against torpedo boats, ships, forts, or land operations. To Dr. Gatling, the inventor of the gun that bears his name, as well as to the inventor of the French Montigny mitrailleuse, we owe a great deal. Gatling guns were used with great effect by the Naval Brigade in the Zulu War, and Egypt. But it has been found very difficult to keep Gatling guns in perfect condition during a campaign; they are easily disarranged, for although each barrel has its own mechanism, the same action being used for loading, firing, and reloading, if anything goes wrong with one of these actions the whole of the barrels must come round to the same feed-port, and the gun is disabled until an armourer or mechanically-minded seaman-gunner can put it into good order again. The same remarks apply to Gardner's rifle-calibre machine-guns, although with perhaps less force, as their mechanism, though just as complex, is less liable to be deranged. The single-barrelled "Gardner" is a beautiful and effective little weapon, and it seems a pity that the inventor was persuaded to produce two and five-barrelled guns, which appear to me to be far less useful weapons, owing to their small penetrative power and want of effective range. I think that all machine-guns firing small-arm bullets should only be used in boats, tops, and for land service. In all cases where machine-guns are fired by a crank, the fatal defect is that the man who fires is not the one who takes aim; with either the object or the gun moving, the word of command to "fire" has to be given, heard, and obeyed before the action is made, thus introducing two extra elements of error. The four-barrel 1-in. Nordenfelt is a gun of much higher power, and is the best defence that we have at present against torpedo boats. It has no appreciable recoil, and handiness if not lightness of mounting. During this year, on board the Excellent and her tenders, this gun was fired by one person whilst the aim was taken by another; thus used it has the same disadvantage as if fired by means of a crank, and it was impossible to make good practice, except by accident, with a moving platform and a moving object; though when aimed and fired by one and the same man, the practice was excellent. It has been arranged lately that the man who aims the Nordenfelt gun can also fire it by using his left hand on the elevating or traversing wheel, and his right hand on the lever; two lines of sights are provided for this purpose. He can then, if he has a long arm, do both actions at the same time; but the muscular action necessary to work a lever backwards and forwards quickly cannot, generally speaking, be conducive to a steady and correct aim. Hence, a man to aim and one to fire are necessary. When the man works the lever independently, and relies on the man aiming to keep the object on, the hits are very numerous. In the single-barrel Nordenfelt shell-guns, except when used for short ranges, the man who aims can also fire the gun by pulling a trigger; he has therefore nothing else to think of than to lay the gun correctly and fire when his sights are "on." The empty cartridges are extracted and the gun reloaded by another man, on whom, however, the firer must keep his eye, so that they may both work together in unison. In all Nordenfelt machine-guns, except the single-barrelled as before stated for short ranges, the lever which loads and unloads also fires the gun, and the jerking motion caused by its being moved backwards and forwards rapidly is liable to prevent a correct aim being taken, especially whilst firing continuous volleys, when a man to aim and one to fire are necessary. I may here remark that all single-barrel machine-guns that have yet been invented are open to the disadvantage of getting heated after continuous firing; the lighter they are the more does this occur, and after many rounds these guns will frequently become useless, owing to the wearing of the barrel or leading. The Hotchkiss gun has been used since 1875 in the French Navy, and a great and increasing number of these guns of 27 and 33 millimètres calibre have been supplied to the French services. It has great handiness in aiming and firing, being provided with a stock and aimed from the shoulder without appreciable recoil; but it is heavy and cumbersome, whilst the cartridges have been known to jamb, and thus prevent the barrels revolving. At the official trials at Portsmouth, this gun was found to be very slow in working, especially when aiming deliberately. Lord Charles Beresford in his lecture laid great stress on the advantage the French had with their Hotchkiss guns, as they were able to fire shell, which would be useful for range-finding. His lordship also stated that "it is certain that a rain of machine-gun shells will do more to demoralise a ship's company than a few heavy shot or shell striking." I cannot conceive, however, that so far as range-finding is concerned they would be of much use, whether the shells explode on striking the surface of the water or not. In any future naval action, with anything like equal combatants, it would be madness to stand still and look at one another, as was the case in Egypt when the ships anchored and hammered the forts at Alexandria. Then shells were doubtless excellent range-finders; but will, or rather can, such circumstances ever occur again? Two ships passing one another at 10 knots, or a torpedo-boat running 20 knots, alter their distance 337 yards a minute,—that is about the time taken up in passing the word down and sighting the guns. The Hotchkiss shell, in use in the French Navy, cannot penetrate a ½-in. iron plate at an angle of 45° at 500 yards' distance, and I am informed that it is acknowledged to be useless for such purposes by the French Naval authorities, who are searching for a more effective machine-gun. The demoralisation of a ship's company will depend on the courage and discipline existing, and of that in our Navy we have no fear. Were the guns' crews protected by shields, machine-gun proof, and the port-holes reduced in size by using the muzzle-pivoting system, we may, I think, safely regard the present machine-shell-firing guns as being not very formidable weapons. A Hotchkiss gun is a Gatling in construction in all respects, but having only one mechanism to all its barrels. If anything goes wrong with any one of the barrels, the whole of them are thrown out of action. In this respect, it is far inferior to the Nordenfelt. In the Hotchkiss single-barrel gun, the man who aims has to move a lever up and down before he fires with the pistol-trigger; this gives him too much to do, and prevents him, when firing quickly, from taking a cool and steady aim. Having briefly considered the present guns, I will endeavour to set out the requirements of a perfect weapon for sea service. The first and most desirable quality should be range and accuracy of aim. At any moderate distance—say, up to 1,800 yards—the perfect machine-gun should be able to pour such a fire into the enemy's port-holes or embrasures as would render the working of his guns a matter of great danger, whilst the conning-towers of ships and other exposed positions should be riddled with shot, which, if they do not actually penetrate, would go far to demoralise the adversary. The other necessities are, beside rapidity of fire, which goes without saying, lightness and handiness of mounting, no recoil, no vibration after being fired, and sufficient penetration, above what is now called "machine-gun proof," that the 1½-in. steel plate used for protection against the present machine-guns should be of no avail. In our present guns we have scarcely any or very few of these requirements, and the future gun will win that approaches most closely to a fulfilment of these conditions, or which embraces as many of them as possible.

WIDOWS' ARREARS.

"Vidua" asks:—"What are the necessary steps to be taken on the death of an officer on retired pay, with a view to obtain the arrears of pay due and a pension for his widow, and compassionate allowance for the children under age? Is the widow entitled by the law, military or civil, to the arrears of pay due to deceased? And if so, why are there so many difficulties thrown in her way before she can obtain it? If the widow has been left 'well off,' and there is a will, we know that this will must be proved; but we know of many cases where the deceased had little or nothing but their retired pay, and the widows left penniless, and in some cases, though a will has been left, yet there was so little to leave that the will was hardly worth the expense of proving. In a recent case that came under my notice, the widow, upon making application for the arrears of pay, was informed that 'if the deceased has left no will or one which has not been proved, and you are desirous of receiving the arrears due, without incurring the expense of probate or letter of administration, you should apply to the Secretary of State for War.' The widow replied that there was a will left, but it was with reference to an untenanted house in Ireland of little value, and that she did not wish to go to the expense of proving the said will; and being in want of ready cash at the time, she requested that the arrears of pay might be paid to her; but she was informed that as there was a will, that it must be proved. She again applied to the Secretary of State for War, quoting the above extract, but it was of no avail; she received the usual stereotyped clerk's reply. And she eventually, after some months' delay, had the said will proved, the expenses incurred absorbing all the arrears of pay. Now, this is a case where the widow was really in want of money, and though officially informed that if she did not wish to incur the expense of proving the will, that the Secretary of State for War could dispense with the probate, yet her request was not granted. Will you, therefore, kindly inform me under what peculiar circumstances the Secretary of State for War is justified in dispensing with the proving of a will? Again, the widow is called upon to furnish the receipted bills for the funeral expenses, and a certificate that her husband's estate from all sources does not exceed £100. If a widow is left furniture, &c., or any property exceeding this amount, would she thereby forfeit the arrears of pay, and if not, why is she called upon to sign this certificate, and to forward the receipted bills for the funeral expenses? There are very few instances where the estate from all sources does not exceed £100, and, therefore, why are widows harassed by the contradictory replies to their requests, and called upon to sign certificates which must be and are evaded? One would think that all that was necessary was for the widow to prove that she was the lawful wife of the deceased. Yet these obstacles are thrown in her way, and in the meantime, the poor widow is at her wits'-end, perhaps, for the amount due to her deceased husband, and which she depends upon to help her to pay for the funeral expenses of her deceased husband."

"Plain Facts" writes:—"There is not the slightest mystery as to what becomes of the money paid for barrack damages. It is shown as an asset, in the Army Paymasters' accounts. The amount of the estimate for the current year is £6,000. It will be found at p. 65 of the Army Estimates, under the heading 'Appropriations in Aid' (damages to barracks and hospital buildings, £6,000). As the strength of the Regular Army in the United Kingdom and the Colonies is about 137,000, the charge is considerably less than a shilling per head, even neglecting the portion of the amount paid by the Militia. The actual expense of making good the damages is defrayed out of the Vote for Works (Vote 13, Part 3). As to the suggestion that 'the same party who take over the barracks should go round, say, a month afterwards, and certify to the commanding officer that the repairs have actually been made,' your correspondent, 'Veritas,' is apparently unaware that, after a damage has been repaired, a certificate of completion is sent to the officer commanding the troops occupying the barracks for signature, and that without his signature the paymaster will not pass the bill. When a marching-out inspection takes place, an officer is present on behalf of the troops. He has the right of appeal in every case which he considers unjust, and therefore if troops are wrongly charged, it is their own officers who are to blame in the matter. As regards the statement that the same damages are charged several times over, I think that if your correspondents, instead of making general charges, were to confine themselves to facts, they would find it very difficult to substantiate their remarks. I do not maintain that a damage has never been entered twice on the list, but where this has been done it has always been in error, and the charge has been erased as soon as it has been pointed out. When a regiment marches in, the quartermaster or some other officer takes a note of all the existing damages. The list is signed by a member of the Royal Engineer Department, and remains in the possession of the regiment. When the marching-out inspection takes place, this can always be produced as evidence that these damages, unless repaired during the occupation of the barracks by the regiment, were not done by it, and are, therefore, not chargeable to it. Barrack damages, I may safely say, are the most disagreeable subject Engineer officers have to deal with, and they would only be too glad to get rid of it. If, however, all damages were made good at Government expense, the troops would hardly be likely to take proper care of the property entrusted to them. I must apologise for the length of my letter, but hope it will have the effect of enlightening your readers on a very simple subject, which seems to mystify them so much."

BARRACK-ROOM COURTS-MARTIAL.

SIR,—A great deal of absurd sentimentality has been expressed about an incident which recently took place in a regiment at home. As an officer of some service, I say I consider the custom of "barrack-room courts-martial" was an excellent one; formerly, I know it used occasionally to be carried out in my own corps, and I have no doubt that those who underwent the ordeal would, if asked, reply that the tribunal was just and the punishment merited. I know also that such measures were never resorted to by the men until other means of inducing their erring comrade to change his ways had failed. There was no disgrace attached to the fact that a man had been court-martialled by his comrades. You occasionally come across a slovenly, untidy man, irregular in his habits and ways, mostly late for any duty he is detailed for, continually in trouble, and altogether a discredit to himself and comrades; now, that is a case where the older soldiers of a company should deal with the offender, and they would do a great deal more good towards making a smart and good soldier of him, than his being frequently reported to the officer commanding his company and all the days C.B. from the commanding officer. I believe there used to be only one kind of sentence; the erring comrade, having been duly tried in the company and convicted upon evidence, was placed leaning over the end of a barrack-room table, and his trousers pulled up tight, he then received in proportion to the gravity of the case a certain number of stripes with a bed-strap across the breech. In conclusion, I wish to add that if the men now-a-days would now and then "court-martial" any comrade thrust into their midst who brings discredit upon them, they would make a good soldier most probably out of one who was going to the bad; and I feel sure no officer would query the justice of a

BARRACK-ROOM COURT-MARTIAL.

SIR,—The answer to a question raised a short time ago by Major Morgan about fraudulent enlistment of a Militiaman is not so clear as your correspondent, "Garrison Instructor," tries to show. The following is one argument:—A Militiaman out for training is subject to military law by Army Act, sec. 176; when a Militiaman becomes subject to military law, he becomes so in all respects as a Regular soldier, Army Act, sec. 178; therefore a Militiaman who enlists in the Regulars when he is out for training can be tried for fraudulent enlistment as a Regular soldiers under Army Act, sec. 13. The other argument is that although a Militiaman becomes subject to military law in all respects like a Regular soldier when out for training, yet as the term "fraudulent enlistment" is specially defined, and restricted to certain conditions and offences, and as a Militiaman out for training is not included in either of those definitions contained in Army Act, section 13, and Militia Act, section 26, such Militiaman cannot be tried for fraudulent enlistment. The second opinion is the most authoritative one, but the Acts seem to be open to both constructions. This should be made more clear, but practically the liability or otherwise is of little importance, except to those about to be examined, because it is laid down by regulation that in all cases where a Militiaman is found serving in the Regular Army, and there is no objection to his retention in the Army, punishment may be dispensed with, and the required stoppages only imposed. With regard to another question in military topography, which appeared in your journal a short time ago, and which seems to be misleading to those slightly acquainted with the subject, permit me to point out that the question has nothing to do with astronomy, or with finding the position of a heavenly body, but is merely for the purpose of finding the variation of the magnetic needle. As the British officer may have to make sketches in any part of the globe, and the magnetic compass with which he usually works does not point to the true north, but varies with the latitude, it is surely a useful and a practical problem to find out this variation, in order to adjust sketches together, or to maps drawn to the true north. To do this, all the astronomy required is to know the constellation called the Great Bear, with its two Pointers, which I suppose most children learn at school. If the observer takes the bearing of the Pole Star with his compass, the angle read will be the variation of his compass. But as the Pole Star is not the actual pivot round which the heavens appear to revolve, a small angle has to be added or subtracted, if observation is taken when the Pointers are due west or east of the Pole Star. If, however, the observer can take his observation when the Pointers are due north or south of the Pole Star, no addition or subtraction is required. Apologising for the length of this double explanation, I am, &c.,

A BANDSMAN'S "BLOW."

"A Continuous-service Musician" writes:—"The other day an application was sent to H.M.S. Duke of Wellington, receiving-ship at Portsmouth, for bandsmen, to recommission the Superb at Malta, which order has since been cancelled, their services not being required, as there are 'Maltese and Italian' bandsmen at present in her to do another commission. Now, I ask, what reason is it that a ship going into the Mediterranean never takes English bandsmen in her in sufficient numbers to make a complete band? Are these foreigners better instrumentalists than we Englishmen? Again, I ask, is there the slightest possible chance for we continual-service bandsmen to make any progress with our instruments? Are our Naval officers aware that there are at the present moment in the receiving-ships and barracks at Sheerness bandsmen who have been doing duty as messengers, &c., for months, very often for years, during which time they never touch an instrument, in fact, very seldom see one? Yet such is the case; and I must say it reflects great credit on those in charge. Officers are somewhat surprised to hear of these young fellows being so dreadfully backward in their music, many of them being quite useless as instrumentalists when at last they get, through a fluke, into a sea-going ship. A great many of these men have been really clever on their instruments as boys in the training-ships. I hope Mr. Frohnert, the inspecting bandmaster of training-ships, will make a note of this, and see how many there are who, having won "first-class certificates" for music as boys, are at the present time almost useless through no fault of theirs, and report the result to the officials at Whitehall. It would also be as well for those officers who prefer foreign talent to institute a full inquiry about this,—one of the many grievances this class suffers from, they having good cause to complain. I now make a general appeal to those officers in the Navy, especially those who are amateur musicians—of which there are a great number in the Navy who could shame many a professional—to investigate and thoroughly sift the whole concern. Already a petition has been forwarded to Whitehall from the whole of the continual-service bandsmen of the Channel Squadron, during the stay of the ships at Portland last October. As yet, nothing has been heard about it, either officially or through service papers, but there are great expectations as to the result."

ADMIRALTY TROOPSHIPS.

SIR,—"Outis," writing apparently with official knowledge, takes exception to your statement with respect to service on board Indian troopships. He asserts that service on board troopers is not unpopular with Naval officers. "Outis" says the Admiralty are deluged with applications to serve on troopers. This may be so,—but your statement is not inconsistent with the fact. Any kind of service is better than half-pay. No doubt, too, the summer leave attracts some officers, and especially married men, who wish to remain near home. But while actually serving, all Naval officers agree in detesting their duties on Indian troopers. They feel that they are placed in a derogatory position, and they do not hesitate to say so openly and plainly. Officers serving in troopers are, as a rule, for ever sneering at the business, and wishing themselves back, as well they might, on men-of-war. Ask any Naval officer you may meet if he agrees with "Outis," and I know what his answer will be. "Outis" says the Admiralty are satisfied with the present system, and do not intend to alter it. Nobody doubted it. It is precisely because the Admiralty are so satisfied where others feel dissatisfaction, that I have determined to write what I know to be a fair and temperate statement of the case which I have heard very favourably discussed.—I am, &c.,

VERITAS.

The Irish Times says:—"At the present time, when it is still deemed necessary to maintain such a large force in Ireland, the statistics issued by the War Office of the strength of the Army in the island for the past 20 years possesses considerable interest, especially when compared with the corresponding statistics for Scotland, which on no occasion during the period has had more than 4,500 troops of all arms stationed in it. The year just closing has, of course, been exceptional as regards the numbers under Gen. Sir Thomas Steele's command, but it will be seen from those valuable figures that the force has upon several occasions since 1861 had to be kept at a high figure, and that it is now double what it was in 1879 and 1880. In 1861, out of 221,604 effectives of all arms at home and abroad, over 25,000 were employed in Ireland, while Scotland had only a little over 4,000. In the nine following years the numbers were kept under that total to a greater or less extent, thus—1862, 22,067; 1863, 21,397; 1864, 21,200; 1865, 21,091; 1866, 24,238; 1867, 23,746; 1868, 21,557; 1869, 21,478; and 1870, 24,824, the latter being an advance on the previous year of 3,346. This was followed in 1871 by a still larger accession of numbers, the highest, with the exception of 1881, during the period mentioned, 27,653 officers and men being distributed in various parts of the country. At the same time, there were only 3,462 in Scotland. Though the Irish force was increased in that year by nearly 3,000 non-commissioned officers and men, there was, strange to say, a decrease in the number of officers, the numbers being 1,126, against 1,278. The year 1872 saw little diminution in the force, which stood at 1,197 officers and 26,014 non-commissioned officers and men, out of a total effective strength for the Army of 192,007; but in the following year a considerable reduction was effected, which was maintained up to 1880, the totals for the respective years standing thus:—1873, 25,511; 1874, 22,533; 1875, 23,541; 1876, 22,752; 1877, 22,714; 1878, 23,968; 1879, 18,684; and 1880, 20,584. It will be seen that during the twenty years the smallest force quartered in Ireland was in 1879, when it was under 19,000."

The Admiralty have appointed a committee, composed of Rear-Admiral R. F. Hamilton, C.B., as chairman, Capt. W. E. Gordon, and Com. W. H. May, to consider and report how the increased instruction in torpedo work now desirable for officers and seamen can be imparted. The committee will visit the several Naval establishments, for the purpose of selecting a place for a new establishment for torpedo instruction.

Hints on Sickness. By Henry Burdett. (Kegan Paul and Co.)—The author of this very useful pamphlet has brought to bear upon the subject a very large amount of experience, and also a large amount of care and attention in its preparation. The greater portion of the former was gained in connection with public and private hospitals, and in the management of charities. Its principal feature is that it consists of "hints" for those whose friends are sick, or who are ailing themselves. By means of these hints information is conveyed to large classes of people who, without their aid, might be groping in the dark all their lives as to the state of their health. In fact, the author's aim has been to make this a useful book for all classes of the community who have to do with illness in their own homes or in those of their neighbours. In order to effect this, the price has been fixed so low as to come within the reach of every one,—1s. 6d. Another highly valuable feature in Hints on Sickness is that it gives full particulars as to the terms of entrance, hours of attendance and admission in all institutions in England and Wales founded for the relief of sickness or bodily infirmity. The first part treats of the question "Where to Go," part No. 2 of "What to Do," giving a good deal of information as to the treatment and nursing of emergencies and simple ailments. Part No. 3 consists of a household surgery, and a list of appliances used in the treatment of the sick. No one requires to be told that cases of sudden emergency, like accidental poisoning, occur frequently in families, as well as minor accidents. The directions contained in this book will, if carefully followed, tend much to relieve anxiety and avert danger. The only objection that can be raised to a medical handbook like this, is the absurd one that it may induce nervous people to jump at the conclusion that they are suffering from endless complaints. These are the people who possess some "fad" as to illness, without which they cannot be happy.

CASSELL AND CO., LIMITED.—Very many years have passed away since Messrs. Cassell and Co. (not "Limited") commenced the publication of a highly important series of books, which might be classed under the head of "Light Literature." As time went on, the number of Messrs. Cassell's publications increased monthly, and instead of losing ground, steadily improved in quality, as well as quantity. The most recently published work by this firm —the Christmas number of the Quiver—is exceptionally interesting, and serves well as a specimen of a periodical which made its mark at once, and never lost ground. At the approaching Yule time this year, Messrs. Cassell and Co. have adopted a novel, but, at the same time, a most practical mode of drawing the attention of their numerous readers to the matter contained in the various works they have published. They do this by offering to the public, at a truly nominal sum, an illustrated catalogue of their publications, containing about 100 choice engravings, each of which illustrates some important scene or event in their works. The frontispiece, a most charming production, is drawn and etched by Herkomer, and is selected from the Magazine of Art. Almost immediately following comes an equally charming drawing by Frank Dicksee, which pictures a homely scene in the early life of "Evangeline," one of the most touching poems in the English language. For other claims to patronage we must refer to the catalogue, which seems to contain some new gem at every page.

MESSRS. JOHNSTON'S MAPS.—Amongst other works, Messrs. Johnston have prepared and issued a "Standard Chart of the British Empire," measuring 58 by 50 inches. It is printed in colours, and consists of careful drawings, comprising the Maltese Islands, Gibraltar, Helgioland, the Isle of Man, the Channel Islands, Cyprus, Aden, Perim and Socotra, India, Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, the Fiji Islands, the Straits Settlements, Hong Kong, North Borneo, Mauritius, South Africa, West Africa, St. Helena, Ascension, British Honduras, British Guiana, the West India Islands, the Bermuda Islands, the Falkland Islands, and British North America. There are some rather remarkable facts connected with this work which tend to show how strongly marked is the progress of education in England and the Colonies. The idea of publishing a work like this was originally suggested by the Royal Colonial Institute, who expressed a wish that the children in Board Schools should be instructed in matters connected with the Colonies. Mr. Mundella at once coincided, and hence arose the preparation of "The Standard Chart of the British Empire." The work is admirably executed, and has been prepared to meet the wishes of the Education Department, and in accordance with the Code.

BACON'S MAPS.—At the present moment, when public interest is centred in the Soudan and Upper Egypt, "Bacon's New War Map" will be welcomed with pleasure. With its assistance, it becomes most easy to follow the course of the disasters which have already annihilated two armies, at the same time to form an opinion as to the probable course which England will adopt at the present critical position of affairs.

The Midland Counties Watch Company, of Vyse Street, Birmingham, have sent us a copy of their new Christmas catalogue, which is beautifully illustrated with over 500 copper-plate engravings of watches and jewellery. There are also over 1,000 testimonials received from all parts of the world. These testimonials speak in the highest terms of the goods received from this firm, which are supplied at the very lowest wholesale cash prices direct to the public. We would advise all our readers to send for a copy. It can be obtained on application to the manager (Mr. A. Percy), and will be sent gratis and post free to any part of the world.

The Admiralty have invited applications from dockyard officials for the position under the Indian Government of foreman-in-charge of the dockyard at Bombay, in succession to Mr. Hounson. The candidates are to be officers ranking with foremen of the yard who have passed the necessary examination for constructors, and to be under 50 years of age. The conditions render the field of selection very small. A term of two years' service will be exacted.

Vice-Admiral the Duke of Edinburgh has been informed by the Admiralty that, excepting the turret-ship Neptune and the armour-clad Sultan, the vessels of the squadron are to be excluded from a general Fleet Order which has been issued for all sea-going armourclads to be fitted with torpedo nets. This arrangement goes to confirm the impression that it is contemplated to replace the obsolete vessels engaged in this service by powerful monitors of modern construction.

At the LYCEUM, Miss Mary Anderson has successfully appeared to crowded houses as the heroine of Mr. W. S. Gilbert's cynical, rather than classical, comedy of "Pygmalion and Galatea," originally produced at the Haymarket twelve years ago with a cast including Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, Miss Caroline Hill, Mr. Buckstone, and Mr. Howe. Miss Mary Anderson who has represented Galatea with marked success through the United States, here gives a distinct portraiture of the statue endowed with animation, perhaps more impressive than interesting, but not the less on that account likely to charm her audience. The fascination of her face and figure would be alone sufficient to enthrall the imagination of the spectator, and her power of attraction may be left safely to rest on these grounds. Pygmalion's jealous wife, Cynisca, is portrayed with remarkable power by Miss Amy Roselle. Mr. Barnes effectively embodies the awkwardly-situated sculptor, and Mr. Kemble as Chrysos, Mrs. Arthur Stirling as Daphne, Mr. Macklin as Leucippe, and Miss Annie Rose as Myrine afford very adequate support. In the preceeding drama of "A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing" Miss B. Henri acted Anne Carew with a power and pathos completely controlling the sympathies of her audience.

The lavishly-embellished spectacular and poetical drama of "Claudian" is drawing large audiences at the PRINCESS'S, and the histrionic art of Mr. Wilson Barrett, as the representative of that profligate noble, doomed to expiate his crime of killing the holy father Clement by sharing for awhile the fate of the Wandering Jew, is no less readily to be acknowledged than the taste and brilliancy of the superb scenic accessories provided under his liberal managerial superintendence. The prologue is so crowded with strong situations that the rest of the play seems to form an unavoidable anti-climax. Though a lengthy run may never be reached, the latest production at the Princess's will not fail to secure for the manager a yet firmer hold of the support of the playgoing public.

Mr. J. L. Toole has had a cordial welcome on his return to his own theatre, and after making his audience roar with laughter in "Artful Cards," the popular comedian amused them for another five minutes by making a very diverting speech. In this improvised address it was intimated that, besides the forthcoming comedy by Mr. Arthur Law, new pieces by Mr. H. J. Byron and Mr. Hollingshead would be produced during the season.

At the GAIETY, Mr. Edward Terry has reappeared after his prosperous provincial tour, and introduced to Metropolitan playgoers Mr. Pinero's farcical comedy of "The Rocket," so favourably received throughout the country. The reception here given was equally favourable. The other characters were satisfactorily filled by Mr. A. Beaumont, Mr. H. C. Sidney, Miss Maria Jones, and Miss Dolores Drummond. Both Mr. Terry and the author appeared to receive well-deserved congratulations on the fall of the curtain.

On Thursday next the adapted comedy of "A Scrap of Paper" will be revived at the ST. JAMES'S, with new scenery and effects. It will be remembered that this was one of the most profitable pieces played at the Court Theatre, under the Hare and Kendal management.

The new comic opera, by Sir Arthur Sullivan and Mr. W. S. Gilbert, will be produced at the SAVOY THEATRE on Saturday, Jan. 5.

Miss Nelly Harris has become the purchaser of the recently-built NOVELTY THEATRE in Great Queen Street, Long Acre.

At ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's entertainment will, on Monday next, include a new first part, entitled "A Moss Rose Rent," and a new musical sketch by Mr. Corney Grain, entitled "Master Tommy's School."

The announcement of the death of Signor Mario, who expired on Tuesday last at Rome, will recall many old memories among opera-goers. He was in his 74th year, and last appeared at the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, about a dozen years ago. He was the second husband of Madame Grisi.

On Monday next, Dec. 17, a new first part will be produced at Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's Entertainment, entitled, "A Moss Rose Rent," written by Arthur Law, the music supplied by Alfred J. Caldicott; and on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 22, Mr. Corney Grain will give for the first time his new musical sketch for the holidays, entitled, "Master Tommy's School."

THE Morning Post of the 11th inst. contained a letter from Major-General E. M. Boxer, R.A., discussing the advantages claimed for the rifle which has lately been subjected to a series of trials, in order to test its suitability to all probable conditions of active service. General Boxer, from his practical connection with the manufacturing and experimental establishments at Woolwich, which extended over many years, is entitled to write with some authority; and when he deprecates all the changes which the adoption of this new rifle would involve, as detrimental or of doubtful utility, his opinions claim serious consideration. But another letter, subscribed with initials only, appeared in the Morning Post of the 13th, controverting General Boxer's statements and opinions. We will endeavour to hold the balance fairly between these exponents of widely different opinions, and to give an impartial summary of the points at issue.

The first alteration to which our attention is directed is an increase of six ounces in the weight of the rifle. This would be, of course, an evident disadvantage, if it were not compensated by diminished recoil, or increased accuracy, or in some other way. Increasing the weight of firearms always lessens the recoil, cæteris paribus, and has most effect in this way when the increase in weight is at the breech. The amount or force of recoil can be ascertained and measured by very simple mechanical experiments; but the inconvenience and pain which it causes when excessive, with rifles, and the consequent loss of accuracy in shooting, can only be estimated. The next point is the increased range and flatter trajectory of the new ·40-bore rifle. General Boxer cannot see any advantage in the increased range, because our Infantry soldiers have not skill enough to take full advantage of the powers of the Martini-Henry rifle; and he considers the flattened trajectory a positive evil, because, with it, shots aimed too high will range too far to hit any one. The former objection has been urged against every successive improvement in fire-arms since the Crimean War, and the latter arises from that lingering fondness for ricochet firing which led General Boxer, in one of his works, written many years ago, to express the opinion that rifled artillery, notwithstanding its greater accuracy, was unsuitable for the general purposes of war, because with its introduction the effects of ricochet firing would be almost nullified! The addition of a wind-gauge seems a questionable improvement, unless its use be restricted to good shots and long ranges. The lines on the back-sight, giving the elevations for every 25 yards, will be useful whenever the distance is known, or can be estimated within 25 yards; but such minuteness in the adjustments for elevation would be almost useless in the hands of our stripling soldiers, whose term of "colour service" generally expires before they have acquired the nerve, discipline, and confidence necessary to make good skirmishers. Formerly, every Line regiment contained a large proportion of veterans, whose experience and influence were of the utmost value in teaching and influencing recruits and young soldiers; but all this has been sacrificed to chimerical schemes of reform. The depressing fore-sight, graduated to 2,000 yards, might be an advantage to uncommonly good shots and judges of distance, in calm weather; that is, to about one man in a hundred, and to him on one occasion in a hundred. This fore-sight is suited to the condition and prospects of the Army just now, for they, too, are depressing. The experimental shooting at Aldershot, referred to in the second letter, is of little practical value, because the number of men who fired (9) was very small, and they fired at a distance (2,000 yards) which was, doubtless, accurately measured. Besides, in the absence of any statement to the contrary, we may assume that the men were carefully chosen. There is one practical consideration involved in the reduction of the diameter of the bullet, which is strangely overlooked; and that is, the comparative effects produced on an enemy by bullets of large and of small diameter. The following extract from Mr. Blair Brown's "Surgical Experiences in the Zulu and Transvaal Wars," which we noticed on the 24th ult., bears on this question. Though he refers to the difference in the effects of large round bullets and of long bullets of about ·45 in diameter, his remarks are applicable in some degree to the proposed further reduction of the diameter of the bullet. He says, "I believe also the shock of a large round bullet, and the pain caused by its lodgment, to be a much more effective way of stopping the approach of an individual than a cylindroconoidal bullet entering the same place, passing through at great velocity, and leaving a harmless little wound, which heals by first intention, unaccompanied by any shock or pain, and which, I have even noticed, the individual never knew he possessed until attention was called to it." If we go on reducing the diameter of bullets, we make so near an approach to acupuncture, that we may at last be charged and even defeated by enemies whom the wonderful accuracy of our fire has perforated in all directions! The Martini-Henry rifle was tried and reported on by Committees, and yet when it was first issued, it had many obvious and palpable defects. The proceedings of countless Committees since, appointed to investigate and report upon all manner of Military questions, have been generally miserable failures; and there seems no reason to expect a satisfactory administration of the Army till some chief arises strong enough and wise enough to abolish Military Government by Committees. We agree with "C. G. S." that there is something to be said in favour of the new rifle, and with General Boxer, that there is a great deal to be said against it.

THE last Royal Warrant regulating the promotion and retirement of officers naturally contains some articles which formed part of previous Warrants, such as Articles 7 (c), 10 (c), 11 (b), and 31, which permit the promotion of officers to all regimental ranks on half-pay, "upon the recommendation of our Commander-in-Chief, with the special approval of our Secretary of State," subject to the limitation that an officer so promoted "shall be brought back to full pay in the branch of the service from which he shall have been promoted, within one year of such promotion." In the former Warrant there was a limit to the number of promotions which could take place in each rank during a year; in the present Warrant the limit disappears. How does it happen, then, that instead of an increase in the number of these promotions, now the limit is withdrawn, such promotions are less numerous? The rank which chiefly benefited by half-pay promotion was that of lieutenant, the limit in this rank being ten per annum, and it is upon the subalterns of the Army the loss of these promotions chiefly falls. Let us take a case. The senior subaltern of a regiment, which is ordered to India, has just rejoined from sick leave, but is pronounced unfit for India. If he exchanges or obtains a transfer, he finds himself at the bottom of the list of subalterns of his new regiment. His only alternative, therefore, is to go on temporary half-pay, and he will then lose all chance of promotion for an indefinite period,—probably until he becomes senior lieutenant of the Army. This surely is a case deserving half-pay promotion. The officer so promoted will probably become thoroughly fit for service between his promotion and his restoration to full pay. To deserving officers who have been promoted from the ranks, and who seldom, in the ordinary course of regimental promotion, obtain their company until the time is almost arrived for their compulsory retirement. Half-pay promotion, after a reasonable period of service as subalterns, would be a most welcome concession. Circumstances of peculiar hardship could in numberless cases be at least alleviated, if not altogether remedied, by half-pay promotion, with restoration to full pay within twelve months. These cases, of course, appear in all ranks, especially at the present time, amongst the captains of the new Territorial Regiments, in which the senior captains of one battalion see themselves repeatedly superseded by their juniors in the linked battalion. We admit that to promote all captains who have been so superseded at once, with the necessity of restoring them to full pay within twelve months, would be impracticable, but at the same time there are some exceptionally hard cases which could be remedied. There may, of course, be some cause for the sudden discontinuance of half-pay promotions. We can hardly imagine, however, that articles the range of which was apparently intentionally widened could have been allowed to fall almost completely into disuse without a good cause.

COMPULSORY Retirement, which was introduced into the Navy and Army under the name of "Age Retirement" by the Civilian element at the Admiralty and War Office, appears to be most distasteful to the gentlemen who elaborated the scheme, when applied to themselves. The Admiralty and War-Office authorities have recently decided to retire their Civil Servants at the age of sixty, provided they have completed forty years' service. This decision has made the Senior Clerks at the Admiralty and War Office quite frantic with rage and indignation. The ending of an honourable career, they say, is just the point that makes the difference between the Queen's service and private enterprise, and they have started a vigorous opposition to the scheme in the daily papers. But why did they not think of this when the ending of the careers of so many officers in the Navy and Army were concerned? Not only, in our opinion, is the new age retirement scheme for Clerks in the Admiralty and War Office just, and fraught with many advantages to the public service, but we believe it could still further be improved, were the authorities to take advantage of the occasion to replace the civil element by officers of distinction, in each branch, as fast as retirements take place under the new rule. It is the Civil Government of the Navy and Army which has done so much harm to both those services within the last half-century, that we should like to see it compulsorily retired, and not merely the "decrepit" at sixty. It must seem strange, indeed, to those who remember the arguments brought forward in favour of compulsory retirement in the Navy and Army, to now read what the civilian clerks are writing in the columns of the daily Press against being themselves compulsorily retired. To them, "sauce for the goose is not sauce for the gander.' Abstractedly, they say, it must certainly be a disadvantage to exchange a veteran for an untrained youth. But, they ask, has the system of compulsory retirement any advantage in the long-run; has it any beneficial influence on the juniors? They think it scarcely possible! And yet age retirement was introduced by these gentlemen into the Navy and Army to benefit the junior grades of those services, by accelerating the flow of promotion. Some of the best officers of both services were ruthlessly retired in their prime, and men not half so well fitted to fill their posts promoted. The latter have assisted the "civilian element" to introduce their fads and fancies into the services, and these men of fads and fancies now object, in their turn, to go. By so doing, they admit that their juniors will obtain promotion "a little earlier than otherwise." But, they say, that is no inducement to them to distinguish themselves in the higher grade, for they will know that their turn to go will soon come round. Every high-class man's natural ambition, is, they assert, "to keep the top place as long as he can," as few would be content to look forward to the day when they may just reach the top place, and then retire. But that is the very thing these civilian clerks have doomed Naval and Military officers to do. This they forget, or find it inconvenient to remember; and they then claim that, because in the public service a man has no opportunity of realising a fortune, it is when he reaches the top of his department that he may well expect to reap the reward of his long and faithful service. To deprive the juniors of this hope, they say, is to offer a premium for mediocrity, "as it will neither benefit the service nor elevate the servers." In their eyes, when applied to themselves, compulsory or age retirement "has every objectionable element, without the merit of being cheap." And yet, strange to say, when this scheme was first devised to accelerate promotion in the Navy and the Army, it was said not only to have the advantage of cheapness, but of greatly benefiting the officers concerned. Now, however, "it is one of the modern methods of losing our character, damaging the service, and yet paying the piper into the bargain." What strange inconsistency!

Referring to the paragraph we published last week at the desire of the Admiralty, respecting applications for Naval Cadetships and Assistant-Clerkships, we are now requested to state that it should be distinctly understood that the notice referred to the five service or non-competitive cadetships, and to the one assistant-clerkship given annually to the sons of officers of the Navy, Marines, and Army, under certain conditions, specified in the Regulations.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, accompanied by the Duchess of Edinburgh, left London on Sunday afternoon for Portsmouth, to assume the command of the Channel Squadron. On arriving at Portsmouth they were driven to Government House, where they stayed the night. The Duke hoisted his flag on board the Minotaur on Monday morning, and left the harbour shortly after 11 o'clock. The officers of the Minotaur were honoured by an introduction to her Imperial and Royal Highness, who lunched on board, and afterwards returned to Portsmouth in the yacht Fire Queen. Although a gale of wind blew, the stream was largely dotted with sailing and rowing craft.

The Achilles and Forward will join the flag off Plymouth, and proceed in company to Vigo.

The Dutch Government will, we understand, provide the ransom for the twenty-five men belonging to the crew of the Nisero, at present detained as prisoners on the coast of Acheen.

The publication of the Memorandum which the German Minister of Marine is preparing for presentation to the Reichstag, is being looked forward to with much interest by Naval men on the Continent. The plan for the construction of a German Navy, as laid down upon the conclusion of the last war with France, has now been carried out, although with some slight modifications; and Parliament, the Members of which, as a rule, know nothing whatever of Naval affairs, is inclined to rest satisfied that the great ambition of the nation has at length been attained. It will be remembered that a portion of the five milliards paid to Germany by France as a war indemnity was set aside for the creation of a Navy; but this allotment has long been spent, and all further sums required for Naval purposes have to be voted by Parliament in the ordinary manner. On such occasions, the task of the Minister of Marine is a very arduous one, as that official has as yet always been appointed by the Emperor for his military talent only, and he is not necessarily a gifted orator or an experienced financier. As a natural result, the leaders of the Opposition parties have, for the last few years, had an easy task in persuading Parliament to considerably curtail the Navy Estimates; and the proper development of the Navy has, therefore, been prevented. The late Minister of Marine, Herr von Stosch, laid great stress upon the importance of replacing such vessels as had been lost to the Navy, either by wreck or by their unfitness for further service, by new vessels of the latest designs, but without success, as not only had this Minister to contend with the opposition factions in Parliament, but, above all, he was unable to gain the good-will of Prince Bismarck. Von Stosch is a man possessed of an unusual amount of energy and determination, and for a long time it was uncertain whether he or Prince Bismarck would prove successful in the struggle for mastery,—the chief point at issue being whether or not the post of Minister of Marine should be directly subservient and responsible to the Chancellor. Both parties repeatedly sent in their resignations, and that of Herr von Stosch was ultimately accepted by the Emperor, but solely upon the ground of the Minister's ill-health. Herr von Caprivi, the present Minister of Marine, entirely adopted the views of his predecessor as to the necessity of replacing the obsolete matériel of the Navy by modern vessels, &c., and he is, therefore, in conjunction with the ablest officials of the Admiralty, working out a memorandum, which is to show in a more permanent form than could be done in a speech what the real requirements of the Navy are. It is anticipated that this exposé of the Minister's programme will meet with the approval of the public at large, and thus influence the Reichstag when the time for considering the Navy vote shall have arrived.

Vice-Admiral Sir William Dowell, who will shortly arrive at Canton to relieve Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes in the command of the China station, will, we understand, at once assume the command of the joint English, American, and German Squadron being formed to protect European interests in view of possible hostilities breaking out between France and China. The Daring, Swift, and Espoir have been ordered to join the combined or International Squadron. According to latest advices received at the Admiralty, the following vessels were on their way to Canton, viz., the Audacious, flagship, Albatross, Cleopatra, Fly, Vigilant, Foxhound, Zephyr, Pegasus, and Cockchafer. The German Squadron, under the command of Admiral von Goltz, will be composed of the following ships and vessels:—Stosch, Leiptzic, Hyœne, Illis, Nautilus, and Albatros.

Last week the Popoffka, Vice-Admiral Popoff, was docked at Sebastopol, in consequence of extensive leaking. It was then found that the hull was considerably twisted and cracked, and many of the plates torn away from their rivetings. In many respects, the injuries to the hull bear a strong resemblance to those discovered in the yacht Livadia when it was laid up at Ferrol, after crossing the Bay of Biscay, on its way to the Black Sea. The Livadia, however, had been subjected to a severe storm; while all the strain that the Popoffka has been exposed to this year, is a few brief cruises outside Sebastopol to try her guns. A commission has been appointed to report upon the defects, which, if radical, will probably result in the vessel being placed in the Reserve. The sister-ship of the Popoffka, Novgorod, has already for some time past been put out of commission, as useless.

There appears to be some hope that the "instructions for rendering accounts at the Royal Marine Divisions and Recruiting Stations" will at length be approved by the Admiralty, as the Committee which prepared them and was instrumental in their temporary issue nearly three years ago, sat last week at the office of the Accountant-General of the Navy, and made their final Report.

It will be interesting to watch whether the condition will be respected in the contract for the construction of the two ironclads at Sebastopol, binding the Black Sea Steam Navigation Company to use only Russian steel. The first consignment of the native metal, 500 tons, from the steel works at Briansk, in Middle Russia, has proved so bad, that the whole of it has been condemned by the officer superintending the construction of the vessel. The steel output of the whole of the establishments of Russia is so small, that if this be repeated two or three times, the Government will have no alternative but to let the builders import their metal from abroad, as has been done with nearly every ironclad in the Russian service. The workshops in which the machinery for the ironclads is to be constructed were "blessed" last week at Sebastopol, and now about 2,000 hands are engaged in connection with the building of these ships.

There are at present assembled at Suakim, the Euryalus, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., the Woodlark, Ranger, and Coquette; or a squadron carrying 26 guns and 648 officers and men. The Philomel, Sphinx, and Dragon, carrying 16 guns and 368 men, are on their way to reinforce this squadron.

In order to provide trained non-commissioned officers of the Royal Marines competent to undertake the duties of the several Departments in the event of a battalion of the corps being ordered on detached or foreign service, the Admiralty have directed that the Staff of the Adjutant's, Paymaster's, and Quartermaster's offices at each of the divisions be increased by one clerk each, without extra pay, so that whenever a battalion is formed a competent clerical staff will be at hand, without impairing the efficiency of the Head-quarters Establishment. This is a most judicious step, as it has often occurred that to meet the requirements of a battalion, the Head-quarters' offices have had to suffer, an event which the new arrangement will obviate.

During the recent storm on the east coast of Ireland, important services were rendered by the Coastguardmen of the Kingstown Division, especially those of Ringsend Station, who were afloat in the lifeboat during the whole of Wednesday night.

It may not be generally known that among the first parcels transmitted by parcels post in Ireland was one on her Majesty's service, containing the belt and bayonet of a corporal of Marines, who deserted under the following circumstances. He was sent in charge of a deserter from one of the district Coastguard ships to the county gaol, and, having reached his destination and delivered up his charge, he then himself deserted, taking care first to consign his belts and side-arms to the parcels post, directed to the commander of the ship to which he belonged, and who received them in due course.

The information supplied by the Admiralty regarding the movements of her Majesty's ships, besides being most scanty, and, as a rule, months old, is often incorrect and misleading. Thus, for example, on December 20, the public are officially informed that the Bullfrog was that day taken into dock at Devonport. No doubt, the friends of all on board wonder how she so suddenly got home from the West Coast, while, as a matter of course, she has not left her station.

The Admiralty have accepted compensation, it is said, from the Swedish Government for the damage done to the Hydra by the Swedish frigate Vanidas, when she dragged her anchors in the gale, and carried away the Hydra's topmast. To accept such compensation would make this country appear so mean and sordid before foreign nations, that we can hardly credit the report.

Four French ironclads of the first class, viz., the Terrible and Caiman, of 20 inches armour and 72-ton guns, the Tonnant, of 18 inches armour, and the Foudroyant, of 16½ inches armour, both with 48-ton guns, are to be finished during 1884, with one ironclad of the second class, the Vauban, of 10 inches armour and 14-ton guns,—in all, five new armour-plated ships. It does not appear the English Navy will be reinforced by more than four, viz., the Collingwood and Rodney, of the first class, the Imperieuse and Warspite of the second. At present the French have virtually complete six ironclads of first class against four English. The Admiralty appear, however, perfectly satisfied at the gradual decline of our naval power.

We find that the statement of a local paper that part of the 101st Royal Munster Fusiliers have, since their arrival home from Nova Scotia, been under canvas at Pembroke Dock, is devoid of foundation.

A Committee of Commanding Officers has been assembled at Aldershot for the purpose of considering the grave question of the proper mode of laying out a soldier's kit. It has been found that no two corps are alike in this matter, and it is considered that there should be a uniform system of showing kit throughout the service. If a soldier is able to show a complete kit, the way in which he lays it out for inspection seems to be a very little matter indeed.

According to L'Armée Française, the forces which the French have at present in Tonquin are as follows:—Twenty-four companies of Marine Infantry, 150 strong, furnished by the four regiments of that arm, and forming an effective of 3,600 men; one battalion of Annamite Rifles, 1,200 strong; one scratch regiment formed of Algerian sharp-shooters and Foreign Legion, composed of 1,860 men; one battalion of Blue-jackets, 600 strong; one battalion of the Line, 500 strong; seven mountain batteries served by 850 men; total, 8,710 men. In addition to this, there are other troops at Hué, &c., so that the expeditionary force at present consists of 9,430 men. The intention of the Government is to raise this force to 16,000 men, and to accomplish this a second scratch regiment is to be formed with more African troops, no doubt with the double idea of not interfering with the home establishment, and of employing troops who, it is supposed, will stand the Tonquin climate better than men drawn from France. However, during the Mexican Expedition, it was observed that the troops drawn from Africa suffered more than any others from the climate; just as it was remarked in the terrible Moscow campaign of 1812 that the troops who stood the bitter cold of the retreat, the best were Neapolitan cavalry, Portuguese from the banks of the Tagus, and Frenchmen from sunny Provence and Gascony; they resisted snow and ice better even than the Russian soldiers who, much better fed and clothed, suffered as heavily between Smolensko and Warsaw as the main body of the Grand Army. The second scratch regiment is composed of 3,000 men, and a third scratch regiment is to consist of three battalions of 1,000 men each drawn from the 4th battalions of regiments quartered at Bourg, Antibes, and Albi. Volunteers will be required to raise these battalions to the strength at which they are fixed. By adopting the above measures, the War Minister hopes to be able to settle matters with Annam, the Chinese, and the Black Flags, without interfering with the general plan of Continental mobilisation. The expeditionary corps, placed under the command of General Millot, who succeeds Admiral Courbet, as the Admiral succeeded the ex-Civil Governor and horse-leech Harmand, will be divided into three brigades under the orders of General Négrier, General Brière de l'Isle, of the Marine Infantry, and Colonel Bichot. As in some of the encounters with the Annamites, the enemy fled with a celerity which it was impossible for the French troops to equal, we see that a small body of cavalry is being sent out. The force of artillery which the French are ready to employ in order to assert their rights to Tonquin is respectable and varied, consisting of ordinary field pieces, mountain guns, machine guns, and siege guns. Then there are 12 gunboats, carrying 28 pieces and 550 men; the Tonquin squadron, which will remain under the orders of Admiral Courbet, consisting of three ironclads and six cruisers, not to speak of the Chinese squadron of two ironclads and four cruisers, under the orders of Rear-Admiral Lespès. It is said that during his stay in Tonquin General Millot will exercise the same privileges as the commander of an Army Corps, will be able to accord promotion up to the rank of major, and to distribute decorations. General Millot is a distinguished officer, who has seen a great deal of service, and he will be accompanied by several officers thoroughly acquainted with the Tonquin country. There is a great diversity of opinion in France as to the expediency of this expedition, which is blamed by these and praised by those. If we are to put faith in the figures published by one French journal, the expedition has already cost £3,000,000 and over, and of course this bill is running up, as a large number of transports are being hired. It is said by La Republique Française that 7,000 officers and 30,000 men have volunteered for service in Tonquin. This may possibly be true as regards the officers, but we have good reason for doubting the statement as regards the men. We know that in one large garrison town near Paris, where there were no volunteers forthcoming, the privates were obliged to draw lots to see which should go.

The Russian Minister of War, we hear, has assigned the sum of 300,000 roubles for the construction of military roads in the Batoum district, so as to open up the country in the direction of Akhaltsick and Kars. It is only a few weeks ago that the Minister of Marine decided upon the improvement of the port of Batoum, at a cost of 5,000,000 roubles. Evidently, therefore, Batoum is looking up.

A Commission has been appointed by the Russian Minister of War to examine the various methods in vogue for teaching illiterate adults, with a view to adopting the most approved, in various quarters, for expediting their education. As is well known, the Army in Russia consists mainly of men who can neither read nor write.

The war estimates in France has just been brought before the Chamber, which has had the pleasure of overhauling and voting the sums demanded. In accordance with custom, the estimates for next year are in excess of those last voted, in spite of the cry for economy. The Moniteur points out that the Budget of 1869 was 371 million francs, which corresponded with an effective of 400,000 men. In 1872, the year after the Franco-German year, the estimates stood at 431 millions, and gradually increased, until in 1875 they attained the sum of 500,000,000 francs, or £20,000,000—a pretty good sum, considering that obligatory service is in force in France, and that the troops are not paid as in England. For these 500 millions, France showed an effective of 442,000 men. In 1879, the estimates showed an increase of 53 million francs, for 469,310 men; and in 1883, France arrived at the respectable figure of 587 millions, which does not include the expenses of the Tunis expedition, fortifications, purchase of arms, &c. For next year, the estimates stand at 597 millions, and the effective at 518,000 men. As the Moniteur observes, the increase in the estimates is out of proportion to the number of men under the colours, a fact due to the large number of officers and non-commissioned officers. The writer adds that, where the Germans have 90 privates, the French Army has only 60.

As the French company on a war footing consists of 250 men, it was rcently decided to mount the captains. We find in the Progrès Militaire a bitter reproach on the subject of the manner in which the Marquis de Galliffet, who commands the 12th Army Corps, is instructing his infantry officers to "witch the world with noble horsemanship." The General sends his foot captains, lieutenants, and subalterns to the riding-school, and, placing even the captains under the orders of a cavalry lieutenant, forces them to begin at the beginning, and treats them, in fact, like raw recruits. The Progrès can hardly suppose that the gallant cavalry commander in question wishes to disgust his infantry with horseflesh, but if he does, he has gone the right way to work. Altogether, the foot captains in the 12th Army Corps seem to be having a very rough time of it in the saddle.

Whately, 1st Battalion, Royal Sussex Regiment, November 27, 1883; Captain Littledale, Commissariat and Transport Staff, November 22, 1883; Colonel J. M. Leith, C.B., Cameron Highlanders, November 29, 1883; and Lieutenant-Colonel W. L. K. Ogilvy and Lieutenant W. H. Salmon, King's Royal Rifles, November 28, 1883.

Colonel Leith, C.B., and Captain Baynes, Cameron Highlanders, resumed the duties of Commandant of the Citadel and Garrison-Adjutant of the Citadel on November 29, 1883.

The ss. Edinburgh embarked at Alexandria for England, on the 1st inst., 13 officers, non-commissioned officers, and men.

Lieutenant Lysley, King's Royal Rifle Corps, embarked for Bombay per P. and O. steamer Brindisi on December 1.

The services of Lieutenant H. K. Stewart, 1st Gordon Highlanders, are placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government, for temporary employment with the Egyptian Army, and those of Lieutenant G. S. Harvey, Royal Highlanders, are placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government for employment with the Constabulary. The latter, but not the former, is pending the approval of his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief and the Secretary of State for War of the resignation of his commission, illustrating very forcibly the difficulties under which Baker Pasha is placed in forming his force.

The 17th Company. R.E., returns from Alexandria to Cairo on Tuesday, the 11th. This company has the proud position of being the only part of the Army that attempted to fulfil the prediction of the Mahdi of Guildhall by evacuating Cairo. They have, however, had to return, so that your correspondent, without "getting up a row," as suggested in your friendly note, maintains continued faith in his rash prophecy.

ALL young officers of the Division who have not been put through the regulation course of gymnastic instruction since joining the service, have been ordered to attend at the Camp Gymnasia for this purpose on the 1st prox.

Lieutenant-Colonel Alleyne, Brigade-Major, R.A., delivered a second lecture on "Artillery in the Field," on Monday last, in the Lecture Hall of the Prince Consort's Library, South Camp, in the presence of a large number of officers and non-commissioned officers.

A Divisional assembly and dance was held at the Officers' Club on Wednesday. Sir Archibald and Lady Alison and many of the neighbouring gentry were present.

A board of officers assembled on Tuesday to report on the fitness for occupation of a number of new brick huts recently erected in the North Camp. Thus far the reconstruction of the Camp has gone. Although some £20,000 have been expended, not a single soldier is yet housed in these permanent buildings.

The following officers will commence a course of instruction in gymnastics at Aldershot, on the 1st prox., for the purpose of qualifying as superintendents of gymnasia:—Captain Swiny, 73rd; Lieutenants Lamb, 39th; Lee, 49th; Boyce, 19th; Prinsep, 56th; Hamilton, 2nd; Perkins, 8th; and Drummond, 2nd Scots Guards.

THOSE who are at this season of the year on the wing seeking winter quarters under the shelter of the sunny slopes of the Lower Pyrenees, will be interested in this little narrative of the personal experiences of the authoress during her rambles amongst them last year, and may perhaps themselves be encouraged to follow in her footsteps, and wander away from the beaten tracks around Pau and Biarritz and St. Jean de Luz, amongst the beautiful scenes, all so full of romantic interest, which in the Basque Provinces of France and Spain everywhere surround them. Though nearly three-quarters of a century have elapsed since Wellington, emerging from the Cantabrian Passes, rolled back the tide of war on to the rich plains of the South of France, and British bayonets forced Soult's legions to take refuge behind the ramparts of Bayonne, Mrs. Crawford seems to have had little difficulty in tracing the positions and following the movements of the contending hosts during the eventful years of 1812-13, and indeed, with Napier's help, in fixing upon the exact locality on which the 9th, 52nd, 68th, and other distinguished regiments performed exceptional deeds of heroism, and won for themselves undying fame during the battles of the Pyrenees and of those of the Bidassoa, the Nivelle, and Nive. Through all this lapse of years, she seems to have found the hasty entrenchments, forts, and earthworks thrown up to check our victorious advance, and shield the fair soil of France from the invaders' tread, though overgrown with furze and bramble, still sharp and clearly defined, and was able to track the course of events step by step. A soldier's wife, accompanied by her husband, who bears the name and is a descendant of one whose career was inseparably connected with some of our greatest achievements in the Peninsular War, could not fail to be carried away by her enthusiasm when visiting scenes hallowed by so many stirring associations, and whose natural beauties, moreover, seem so amply to repay the trouble expended in exploring them. In her amusing and often instructive little volume, Mrs. Crawford has shown intending visitors to this interesting district how few and insignificant the difficulties really are which deter tourists from wandering amongst these comparatively untrodden paths.

Longman for the new year is quite up to the average. We find in it a further instalment of "Jack's Courtship," written in Mr. Clarke Russell's vigorous style. Then follows a tale by the author, who so suddenly sprang into high favour with the reading public, Mr. Anstey, who tells a story with the quaint title of "The Decay of the British Ghost." Mr. Bret Harte follows, and never writes anything not well worth reading. Best of all is Mrs. Oliphant, with four chapters of a new serial, "Madam." It is said that Mrs. Oliphant writes very far more than any author or authoress. However this may be, it is certain that she writes with an equality of power which is truly remarkable. The author of "Vice Versâ" gives four additional chapters to his tale in Cornhill, "The Giant's Robe." There is nothing in the present instalment which requires notice. However, it is some satisfaction to find that "Dolly" has resumed her independence, and has helped to crush her enemy; that the bad man in the book, Mr. Caffyn, is on the point of making a wonderful discovery. Evidently, the story is nearly wound up.

Messrs. Raphael Tuck and Sons, of Coleman Street, City, have published a series of Christmas and New-Year Cards, which may challenge, without fear of the result, the artistic efforts of the many great firms which have devoted so much care, and engaged so much talent, in the preparation of these very popular forms of celebrating the return of Christmas and the opening of the New Year, and we recommend our readers with confidence to send to Messrs. Tuck for one of their catalogues and some specimens of their beautiful work.

Map of China. (Edinburgh: Johnston.)—Messrs. Johnston, of Edinburgh, have published, at a rather critical moment, a boldly executed map of China, Tonquin, and Cochin China, together with a chart extending to Western Europe, and also some instructive statistical information. This map, which has evidently been prepared with considerable care, will be welcomed by mercantile houses and others which regard the present position of affairs in China with anything but satisfaction. But even to the unenterprising citizen, who does not care a jot for the country, or never leaves his homestead in England, it will prove of interest, even if he were to confine his researches to the "statistical notes." The map and chart are marked most distinctly, and the work produced deserves most favourable consideration.

The Duke of Edinburgh has presented a donation of £25 to the Royal Sailors' Home at Portsmouth, with the inspection of which he recently expressed great satisfaction.

Col. Butler, author of "The Great Lone Land," has been making a tour in Manitoba and the adjoining territories. He spent nearly a month travelling west and north-west of Winnipeg. On returning to that city he was interviewed by a local reporter, to whom he stated that his visit was in connection with a large emigration and colonisation scheme which it was hoped to carry out next year. He was much impressed by the wonderful transformation which the country had undergone since his visit twelve years ago, and he spoke in the highest terms of the quality of the land he had inspected in the north Saskatchewan and other districts.

H.M.S. IMPERIEUSE.

THE Imperieuse has been added to the Navy, having been floated out of the dock in which she was built at Portsmouth on Tuesday. The Imperieuse is a steel, twin-screw, armour-plated cruiser of 7,600 tons. Her length between perpendiculars is 315 ft.; her breadth, 62 ft.; her depth of hold, 24 ft.; and her mean draught, 24 ft. 11 in. The thickness of her armour—compound—on belt is 10 in.; and on barbettes, 8 in. She will be armed with four 9·2-in. (18 tons) breech-loading guns (one in each of the barbettes), carried on the Vavasseur system, six 6-in. breech-loading broadside guns, 10 Nordenfelt guns, and four Gardner guns, besides boat and field-guns. She will also carry 12 14-in. torpedoes, which will be fired from three above-water positions, on each side of the ship. She will be brig-rigged, and will be equipped with two second-class torpedo-boats, besides steam and sailing craft. Her engines, by Messrs. Maudslay, Sons, and Field, are to develope 8,000 horses; and her speed is to be 16 knots an hour. The total cost of the ship is estimated at £325,000. Her keel was laid on Aug. 10, 1881, and the whole of her armour—1,400 tons—is now on her decks, side, and barbettes; but the ship is, as yet, scarcely two-thirds completed. The concourse of spectators was small, compared with those who have assembled when some of the more celebrated ships have been launched, and though around the dock some thousands of persons were congregated, the stands which had been erected at the bow were far from crowded. The bands of the Royal Marine Artillery and Light Infantry were in attendance, and played alternately. The ceremony of floating and christening was performed by Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar, wife of the General Commanding the Southern District. Her Serene Highness on arriving at the dockyard was received by Admiral-Superintendent Herbert, by whom she was conducted to the stand, where the Controller of the Navy, Admiral Brandreth, the Chief Constructor and Constructors, and many Naval and Military officers, were waiting to receive her. The Commander-in-Chief, Admiral Sir G. T. P. Hornby, and Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar arrived subsequently, having been in attendance on her Majesty the Queen. The Princess and suite were first taken to the dock to survey the vessel. On the centre of the stage was a table on which were three buttons connected with the electric apparatus. All being ready, one of the these buttons was pressed by the Princess, when the water from one of the large basins immediately poured through a culvert into the dock. The escape of the water could be instantly detected, and such was the volume in which it entered the dock that, though the latter is some 430 ft. long by 80 ft. wide, the ship floated in about a quarter of an hour, drawing 20 ft. aft. and 12 ft. 6 in. forward; a displacement of about 3,000 tons was then represented. The floating of the ship was followed by enthusiastic cheering by the crowd. While the water was rising the Princess had been conducted on board, and shown over the ship. Her Serene Highness having returned to the platform, the ordinary service on such occasions was read by the dockyard chaplain, the Rev. E. A. Williams. Prayers were followed by the ceremony of christening. To a silver-gilt pillar, surmounted by a crown, a bottle covered with flowers was attached, and the ship having been advanced nearer the stage, the bottle was dashed by means of electricity against her bow, the Princess at the same time naming her the Imperieuse. The crowd again cheered lustily, the band played "Rule, Britannia," and shortly afterwards the Imperieuse, bearing the Royal Standard, the Union Jack and other flags, was hauled out into the harbour. Everything worked most satisfactorily, no hitch of the slightest kind occurring. Before her Serene Highness retired, a beautiful little model of the ship was presented to her by the Chief Conductor as a souvenir of the event. Some two years must elapse before the Imperieuse will be ready for sea.

SECRETARIES TO FLAG-OFFICERS.

SIR,—I observe in a leading article in your issue of Dec. 8, that you remark, relative to the appointment of Mr. Rickard as Secretary to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh:—"Mr. Rickard is an Assistant-Paymaster, and from time immemorial it has been the custom of the service that the Secretary to a flag officer should be a Paymaster." Permit me to point out to you that, although I have access to a few old Navy Lists only, a glance at them will show you are incorrect in this particular. See the Navy List of Jan., 1863. 3. Assistant-Paymasters are shown as having served as secretary to a flag-officer. See the Navy List of July, 1868. 2. Assistant-Paymasters, different officers to the above, are so shown. See the Navy List of Jan., 1879. 3. Assistant-Paymasters, also different officers to any of the above, are so shown. These dates are within the memory of many, I may say most of us, of any standing. It may, however, have escaped your notice that it was only until the issue of the Gazette notice, dated March 2, 1870, regulating the retirement of navigating and civil officers, section vi., article 6, that the assistant-paymasters were debarred from serving as secretaries to flag-officers or commodores of the first-class. This regulation, for which there was apparently no reason, except to still further crush the prospects of the unfortunate assistant-paymasters, marred the prospects of many a rising man, and I am rejoiced to see that H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, in Mr. Rickard's case, has succeeded in showing the absurdity of keeping it in force.—I am, Sir, &c.,

PAYMASTER, R.N.

[We are well aware that prior to 1870 assistant-paymasters have acted as secretaries to flag-officers. That in no way excuses the Admiralty breaking through their own laws on the present occasion, after so often refusing to do so for other flag-officers since 1870.—ED. A. & N. G.]

SIR,—With reference to your article on the appointment of acting secretary, you repeat the term, "custom of the service," which certainly has the merit of putting it in a quiet sort of way. Should you refer to par. 242, p. 58, of the Queen's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions, you may read, "To qualify an officer to receive a commission as Secretary to a Flag Officer or Commodore of the 1st-class, he must be on the list of Secretaries or Paymasters."

FAIR PLAY.

—I am, &c.,

[We have quoted the paragraph referred to. "Fair Play" should read fair.—ED. A. & N. G.]

SIR,—Could not something be done to improve and simplify the present system of conducting trials by courts-martial in the Army? I refer more especially to cases of private soldiers. As an adjutant of some years' standing, I have seen several prisoners acquitted, when, if the prosecutor had more license in his mode of examination and cross-examination, they would have been found guilty; and, on the other hand, I have seen men convicted who, had they ordinary senses, or an officer to conduct the case for them, would most assuredly have been acquitted. There are two means by which the difficulties of a prosecutor, a prisoner, or a prisoner's friend would be very much facilitated, and justice thereby aided and maintained. 1. By the attendance at all courts-martial of a shorthand writer, to enable the prosecutor, prisoner, or prisoner's friend to conduct the examination and the cross-examination, in the same way as counsel in a court of justice. Of course, examination can be conducted in this manner now; but were it the custom to do so in the present day, when courts-martial are so frequent, I venture to say the British officer would have little else to do but sit on courts-martial from morning to night. 2. By allowing prosecutor, prisoner, or prisoner's friend to ask questions tending to prove the non-reliability, &c., of witnesses, which questions should not be taken down in writing by the court except by demand of the prosecutor, prisoner, prisoner's friend, or by the direction of the court. I venture to say that the present system of conducting the examination and cross-examination of witnesses is unfair alike to prosecutor and prisoner. Only a short time ago, a case occurred, where the principal witness for the defence, in the course of cross-examination by the prosecutor, swore positively he heard certain insubordinate words made use of, and almost immediately after swore he never heard them. To get at this, it was absolutely necessary for the prosecutor to ask many questions quite irrelevant to the charge against the prisoner, but which, in the end, not only were the cause of the witness contradicting himself on the most important point, but when put together, showed from other causes the witness was entirely unworthy of belief. The consequence was a conviction in a case in which there was no doubt of the guilt of the prisoner; but had it not been for the proof of the non-reliability of the evidence of the principal witness for the defence, an acquittal must have followed. Should you think it worth while to insert this, or any part you may deem worthy of it, I am, &c.,

AN ADJUTANT.

The Daily News' correspondent at Colombo telegraphs on Dec. 15:—"I called on Arabi Pasha to-day, and found him comfortably located in a large house, three miles from the town. He was sitting on a verandah facing the tropical garden, hard at work learning English. He has made considerable progress, and is very proud of his acquisition. He spoke frankly of men and affairs in Egypt, and has no desire to go back until Egypt is free—meaning from the subordination of Tewfik. Ismail, he tersely says, is a clever man, but unscrupulous. Tewfik he had a very poor opinion of. He desired me to salute for him Lord Randolph Churchill. He is, said Arabi, the friend of slaves. Arabi looked well, and professes contentment. His chief ambition now is to learn English. To-morrow Arabi pays a visit to the new Governor, Sir Arthur Gordon, who has just arrived."

Gen. Lord Wolseley, G.C.B., and Lady Wolseley, and Lieut.-Gen. Sir Edmund Whitmore, K.C.B., military secretary, had the honour of dining with the Queen and Royal Family at Windsor on Saturday evening last.

"Garrison Instructor" writes:—"I am much obliged to 'Index' and your other correspondents for their letters correcting mine, concerning the question of Militiamen committing the offence of fraudulent enlistment. As 'C. F.' remarks, 'the point is practically of little importance, except to officers about to be examined,' and, therefore, it would be well that all who are studying military law should correct their text-books, as at pp. 100 and 118 of the last edition (dated 1883) of 'The Elements of Military Law,' by Lieut.-Col. Boughey, it is laid down that 'Militiamen leaving their corps during training, and enlisting in the Regular Forces, would be tried for fraudulent enlistment,' which ruling it is now decided is incorrect."

The Globe says:—"The short-service system in the Army is now fully understood to mean the service of short men in the Army; and our 'attenuated regiments' are the regiments full of slim, narrow-chested boys. The Army Reserve, too, may be understood to mean the reticence of War-Office authorities upon these unpleasant subjects. But what is the interpretation of the fact, vouched for by a correspondent, that a regiment is about to leave for India containing many men who 'never wore her Majesty's uniform at all until a few weeks ago?' Is our present system of enlistment so hopeless as that?"

Col. Sir Owen Lanyon, Assist.-Qrmr.-Gen. at Portsmouth, has been granted four months' leave of absence on account of illness, during which he purposes making a tour of Canada and the United States. His duties will in the meantime be performed by Col. Emerson, 28th Regt.

A correspondent cannot understand why swimming is not taught in our Naval and Military schools, and made part of every young man's training, with his gymnastic exercises and drill. "How much finer," he says, "our men would be in bodily health, were this great cleanser and purifier added to their daily comforts. When I read the news of a case of drowning, I feel that as a nation we are not doing our duty, when this life-saving art is not being taught in every school. A practical teacher will, of course, make practical pupils everywhere."

NAVAL NOTES.

Robert Garland, sailmaker's mate, of the Boscawen; Emannel F. Curtis, sailmaker, of the Indus; W. C. F. Gun, writer, 1st-class, of the Assistance; C. T. W. Hurchham, gunner's mate, of the Repulse; Charles Hall, signalman, of the Minotaur; Henry Naysh, painter, 1st-class, of the Northumberland; Richard Francis, caulker's-mate, of the Neptune; Thomas Massey, ship's corporal, 1st-class, of the Victor Emanuel; James H. Daysh and John Simmers, commissioned boatmen, William Hibbert, chief boatman, Charles Underwood, chief boatman-in-charge, Matthew Leaf, George Smith, and Martin Mawer, boatmen, and William Broad, divisional carpenter, of the Coastguard, have been awarded the medal for long service and good conduct.

The six hours' full-speed trial of the Rapid, 12, screw corvette, took place in the Channel, off Plymouth, on Saturday. The steaming was considered very satisfactory.

The Hecate was on Saturday taken into the Channel for the purpose of testing the strength of the superstructure recently added to give her greater stability and increased internal accommodation. Since her construction she has been unemployed, and the object of the superstructure is to convert her into a seagoing monitor for service abroad. The guns were fired singly, in pairs, and afterwards in an electric broadside with most satisfactory results, the damage being trivial.

No relief appears to be arranged for the Woodlark on the East Indies station, commissioned March, 1880, for the Foam in the West Indies, commissioned June, 1880, or for the Tourmaline in the East Indies, commissioned Sept., 1880, though reliefs have been sent out to several ships commissioned many months after.

The French, we observe, have three ironclads on the China station, the English only the Audacious, flagship, and the Wivern, an obsolete turret-ship, for the defence of Hong Kong. We wonder how long this anomaly is to continue.

It seems probable that the Nelson will be recommissioned in Australia next year, as she has only served one commission, and is a new ship. It is believed the Raleigh will relieve the Euryalus in 1885 on the East Indies station, though we should have thought her great draught of water rendered her a most unsuitable vessel.

The Forward, a small gunboat, able to steam about nine knots an hour in fair weather, is temporarily attached to the Channel Squadron as a despatch-vessel. We hear a good deal of the inactivity of the Royal yacht. The same might now be said, we think, of the Enchantress, the Admiralty yacht, used by their Lordships for about a week per year, and which, built as a despatch-vessel, is far more fitted for that purpose than the Forward.

The French cruiser Primauget, which was constructed of wood and iron at the Rochefort Arsenal, and launched last year, has just completed her speed trials. She is a vessel of 2,236 tons displacement, 286 ft. 10 in. long, 37 ft. 5 in. wide, 16 ft. deep, and has a mean draught of water of 18 ft. 6 in. Her engines, furnished by Messrs. Schneider, of Creusot, are of the horizontal three-cylinder compound type, designed to work on a forced draught. The trials were considered very satisfactory, as the engines indicated 2,900 horse-power (200 more than required by contract), and the speed realised was 15·3 knots per hour. The consumption of coal per indicated horse-power an hour was somewhat under two pounds. The Primauget carries an armament of 15 5½-in. breech-loading steel guns, as well as Hotchkiss machine-guns, and she is also fitted with apparatus for discharging torpedoes.

The Franco-Russian Shipbuilding Company of St. Petersburg have commenced the construction of two unarmoured steel-built cruisers for the Russian Government, both of which are to be ready for sea in the course of 1885. Their dimensions are:—Length between perpendiculars, 265 ft.; beam at load-line, 45 ft.; mean draught of water, 16 ft.; displacement, 2,956 tons. The material used in their construction must, according to contract, be procured in the country. The cruisers will each be armed with six 6-in. steel breech-loaders, mounted in semi-circular barbettes, four 9-pounders, and six Hotchkiss machine-guns. They will also be fitted with above-water torpedo tubes, which will be discharged from the bridge by means of electricity. The engines are designed to indicate 3,500 horse-power, and it is expected that the vessels will be capable of steaming 15 knots per hour, for which speed they will carry ten days' coal, viz., 700 tons. The new Franco-Russian Company have purchased the works of Messrs. Baird, so that they are in a position to manufacture their own engines. The contract price for the above cruisers is 1,250,000 roubles each.

The authorities of Sheerness Dockyard have received instructions to complete the repair of the Myrmidon, screw gun-vessel, by Dec. 28, as she is to be commissioned early in January by Lieut.-Com. Alfred Carpenter for surveying service.

The Crown Prince of Portugal arrived at Portsmouth Dockyard on Dec. 17, on his return journey to Lisbon, the Portuguese corvette Africa being moored alongside the dockyard in readiness to convey his Royal Highness to the Tagus. On the jetty a guard of honour of the Gloucester Regt. was drawn up, and when the Crown Prince alighted from his saloon carriage, the band of the regiment played the Portuguese National Anthem, and the flagship and garrison battery fired a Royal salute. Gen. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, Admiral Sir Geoffrey Hornby, and Rear-Admiral Herbert, with their respective staffs, received the Crown Prince on the jetty. The ship's company were mustered on deck when his Royal Highness went on board the Africa, which sailed early in the afternoon for her destination.

THE CHINESE NAVY.

[PART II.]

THE fleet of the Foo-Choo Division is composed of unarmoured cruisers and gunboats only, with a few transports and converted merchant steamers, the chief of which were built at the Foo-Choo Arsenal. The Yang-Ou, a wooden corvette, was the first large vessel-of-war built in this part of China. She was launched in 1872, and is 190 ft. long, 37 ft. broad, 23 ft. 6 in. deep, and draws 18 ft. of water. Her displacement is 1,608 tons, and she is fitted with engines of 1,250 indicated horse-power, which propel her at the rate of 13 knots per hour. Her armament is composed of one 7½ in. and 12 4½-in. Whitworth guns, and she is manned by a crew of 200 officers and men. A cruiser of considerably larger dimensions, and built on the composite principle, was launched from the same yard in 1883. This is a vessel of quite modern type, of 2,152 tons displacement, and engines of 2,400 indicated horse-power. She is constructed for a speed of upwards of 15 knots per hour. Her dimensions are:—Length between perpendiculars, 252 ft. 6 in.; beam, 37 ft. 10 in.; depth of hold, 23 ft. 3 in.; and her extreme draught is 18 ft. 6 in. She carries an armament of two 8-in. and six 4½-in. Vavasseur guns, of which the larger calibres are pivoted on deck. A large steamer, probably a purchased merchant-vessel, named the Wan-Niang-Tsin, was added to the Navy in 1869. She is composite built, 223 ft. long, 30 ft. broad, 17 ft. 4 in. deep, draws 13 ft. of water, and has a displacement of 1,450 tons. She is fitted with engines of 600 horse-power indicated, and her speed is only nine knots per hour. Her armament is composed of four 4¾-in. Krupp and two 3¾-in. Blakeley guns. In the years 1870 to 1876, nine composite corvettes were built, viz., the Foo-Poo, Tsi-Yan, Fy-June, Yong-Pao, Hay-King, Chen-Hang, Yuen-Kay, Teng-Ing-Chew, and Toy-An. They are all of the same size, their dimensions being:—Length, 200 ft.; beam, 32 ft. 6 in.; depth, 17 ft.; draught, 12 ft.; displacement, 1,253 tons. Their engines are of 600 horse-power, and they average about 10 knots per hour. They each carry one 8-in. and six 4¼-in. Vavasseur guns. Three cruisers of a somewhat larger class were launched in 1877, 1878, and 1879, and were named the Wai-Juan, Choa-Ou, and Kang-Tsi. They are, like the above-mentioned vessels, built on the composite plan, 210 ft. long, 31 ft. wide, 18 ft. 6 in. deep, with a draught of 16 ft., and a displacement of 1,209 tons. The 750 horse-power engines enable them to steam at a speed of 11½ knots per hour. In armaments they resemble the Foo-Poo class of vessel. Two gunboats, the Ching-On and Quang-On, built in England, came into the possession of the Chinese Government in 1859. They are wooden vessels of 670 tons burden, with engines of 680 indicated horse-power and speeds of 10 knots. Their armament consists of two 3¾-in. Krupp and two 10-pounder smooth-bore guns. The Anlan and Chento, two gunboats of 220 tons burden and 220 horse-power, were also built in England in 1857 and 1859. They are capable of steaming 10 knots per hour, and each carry one 7-in. and two 3¾-in. Armstrong guns. A vessel of more modern design is the Shang-Tung, built by Messrs. Denny, of Dumbarton, in 1868. This gunboat is 140 ft. long, 23 ft. wide, 10 ft. 6 in. deep, draws 6 ft. 6 in. of water, and has a capacity of 330 tons. Her engines develope 245 horse-power, and her speed is 9¼ knots per hour. She carries an armament of one 7-in. and one 3¾-in. Armstrong guns. The hull is constructed on the composite principle. A similar vessel to the above was supplied to the Chinese in 1863 by Messrs. Laird, of Birkenhead, but this boat, the Tientsin, was constructed entirely of iron. Her chief dimensions, &c., are: Length, 150 ft.; beam, 25 ft.; depth, 12 ft. 8 in; draught, 10 ft.; tons burden, 450; horse-power, 390; speed, 9½ knots; armament, two 4½-in. Whitworth and one 68-pounder smooth-bore gun. Three sloops, the My-Yuen, Foo-Sing, Hok-Seng, were added to the Foo-Choo fleet about 12 years ago. They are wooden vessels of 509 tons, mounting one 6-in. and six 4½-in. Vavasseur guns, but their value as fighting vessels is small, as their speed is only eight knots per hour. The list of ships-of-war of the Foo-Choo Division is brought to a close by the composite-built gunboats Tsin-Yuen, Ting-Hay, and Ching-Woi, launched in 1871 and 1872. They are 161 ft. long, 26 ft. 3 in. wide, 9 ft. 6 in. deep, draw 12 ft. of water, have a displacement of 573 tons, and are fitted with engines of 480 indicated horse-power, which propel them at a rate of 10 knots per hour. Their armament is composed of one 6¼-in. and four 4½-in. Vavasseur, and two 3¾-in. Armstrong guns. The Shanghai Division is composed of an ironclad gunboat and several powerful unarmoured cruisers, all built at the Shanghai Arsenal. The ironclad is a vessel of 195 tons, designed by Mr. Rennie, chief constructor of the dockyard. She is 104 ft. in length, 20 ft. 4 in. in breadth, 8 ft. 6 in. deep, and has a draught of 7 ft. Her twin-screw engines, of 340 indicated horse-power, were likewise manufactured at Shanghai, and propel her at a speed of 10 knots per hour. She mounts one 6¾-in. Krupp gun in a casemate, or fixed turret, forward. The vessel is built of iron, and was launched in 1875. Two large cruisers, named the Hay-An and Yn-Yuen, were launched from the same yard in 1874 and 1875, and were fitted with engines manufactured at the arsenal. Their principal dimensions, &c., are: Length, 300 ft.; beam, 42 ft.; depth, 27 ft.; draught, 21 ft.; displacement, 2,630 tons; indicated horse-power, 1,750; speed, 12 knots, and they each carry two 9-in. Armstrong and 24 7-in. Vavasseur guns, of which the former are mounted on deck and the latter in the battery. Their hulls are built of wood, they are full-rigged, and each have a complement of 372 officers and men. Another cruiser is the Yung-Woo, composite built, and launched in 1870. She is 200 ft. long, 36 ft. wide, draws 17 ft. 6 in. of water, and has a displacement of 1,425 tons. The engines, of 1,000 indicated horse-power, propel the vessel at a speed of 11 knots per hour. Her battery is composed of one 9-in. Armstrong, eight 5-in. Vavasseur, and four 28-pounder smooth-bore guns. The Shanghai fleet further includes a number of transformed merchant steamers, of which no reliable data are obtainable. The Canton fleet is composed of about 15 gunboats, averaging 180 tons, which are employed in the suppression of piracy and smuggling. They are, with few exceptions, vessels of obsolete designs. It will be remembered that some 20 years ago Capt. Sherard Osborne proceeded to Canton with a small squadron for the purpose of aiding the Viceroy in forming an efficient Navy, but owing to the singular shortsightedness of the Chinese officials, this scheme was frustrated. Although the above statement of the strength of the Chinese Navy is by no means a complete one, it will nevertheless serve to show that some 60 steam war-vessels are available at the present moment, to which should be added 18 European-built torpedo-boats.

The Admiralty have fixed Jan. 29 for the floating of the Warspite, 10, 7,390 tons, 8,000 horse-power, which has been under construction for nearly two years at Chatham, in a dock, from which she will be floated out as the Imperieuse was this week at Portsmouth.

The trials of the new Russian ironclad Wladimir-Monomach are reported to have given results which seem to be almost too good to be true. With the engines working at from 85 to 86 revolutions per minute, and with a steam-pressure in the boilers of 60 lb. to 70 lb., the speed attained was 19 knots per hour. The vessel was very light at the time of the trials; but it is anticipated that when brought down to her load-line, she will, nevertheless, make 17 knots.

After prolonged consideration, the Admiralty have decided to abandon their original intention to equip the Bellerophon, iron armour-plated ship, as a sea-going gunnery-ship attached to the Cambridge, and to bring her forward for commission as a battle-ship. The Bellerophon, which is thus destined for further service, has been laid up at Keyham dismantled for a long period, and a considerable amount of work will be necessary to bring her forward, so that a year or more will elapse before she is ready for the pendant. In lieu of the 9-inch muzzle-loading guns with which she was formerly armed, she is to be equipped with 10 8-inch breechloaders of newest pattern, and 4 6-inch breechloaders. In addition the Bellerophon will carry 6 25-pounders, 10 Nordenfelts, 4 Gardners, and 12 Whitehead torpedoes.

It is stated that the Sultan and Neptune are to be transferred to the Mediterranean Fleet next year. That being so, a new and most powerful squadron could be brought together if the work in the various dockyards continues to be pushed on as effectually as at present. The Edinburgh, Colossus, Dreadnought, Ajax, Agamemnon, and Devastation ought all to be ready next year, and they make a fleet which would readily comply with the various demands made on the Channel Squadron of late days, and to which the ships of which it is at present composed are totally unsuited, while the men who would be available for the smaller ships' companies would be most useful for manning another flying squadron. If this great change should be made, it is to be hoped that the internal arrangements will also alter for the better, and that the present relations between superior and subordinate may become less strained. More especially does this apply in the matter of leave, a question which so intimately concerns the junior, and in which he is so entirely in the hands of his superior. Take the case of the Achilles on Monday. It was known that she would not leave the Sound until the middle of the day on Tuesday, but in spite of this the Commander-in-Chief issued an order that all leave was to expire at 9 a.m. on Monday, and a day and a half was spent by officers and men looking at the shore, unable to spend their last day or two before a long cruise with their wives and families, thanks to a caprice, whim, call it what you will, of the high authority who holds their destinies in his hands. A happy way this of sending a squadron away in a good humour.—Western Morning News.

On Saturday last the Childers, torpedo-boat, 60 tons, built by Messrs. Thorneycroft, of Chiswick, for the Victorian Government, arrived at Portsmouth for the purpose of having her torpedo-gear tested by the officers of the Vernon. She carries two air-guns in her bows for the discharge of Whitehead torpedoes of the newest type, which are 19 ft. long and 15 in. in diameter. She will carry two Nordenfelt guns on the beam, and will be fitted with an electric light on the top of the conning-tower. She is to be commanded by Lieut. Jerram, R.N., and the crew will consist of sixteen officers and men. Capt. Thomas, R.N., in command of the Victorian Navy, went round in the Childers, which left the Thames at 12 o'clock on Friday, and encountered a strong westerly gale with heavy gale, which washed over her fore and aft. She behaved very well, and did not sustain any damage. Her engines have developed a high rate of speed, fifty-nine knots having been made during a three hours' trial trip. On Monday, her torpedo fittings were tried under the direction of Lieut. Gallwey, of the Vernon, and were found to be in a thoroughly efficient state, and in the course of a run a 15-in. 19-ft. torpedo was discharged from her starboard tube. On Tuesday, three runs were made, when one torpedo was discharged from her starboard and two from her port tubes, with satisfactory results. The Childers will leave for Australia about the middle of next month, proceeding viâ the Suez Canal, Point de Galle, Batavia, and the Torres Straits, in convoy of two gunboats, which are being built for the Victorian Navy by Sir William Armstrong, Mitchell, and Co., of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. One of these gunboats will be armed with a 25-ton breech-loading gun, Nordenfelt and machine-guns, and the smaller gunboat will carry an 11½-ton gun.

THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the Glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d, tins, 1s 1½d, labelled "JAMES EPPS and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, M.D., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN OIL-COLOURS.

THE Winter Exhibition of Works in Oil, which opened on the 17th inst., attracted a very large number of visitors. It must be a matter of regret that some means could not have been organised so as to ensure every exhibitor some chance of having his work critically considered. But that could not be. No doubt, lamentations were heard in some quarters; but what can be done, when nearly 800 pictures demand admittance to the gallery, and as favourable a position as possible? The exhibition is, no doubt, one of high merit, although many critics will pronounce it to be "unequal." That is a safe word, and may mean much or little. For example, we find on one side Alma Tadema in all his strength and wonderful artistic power; on the other side, we find perched on high various specimens of what may be called paintings, but can scarcely be regarded as art. Although this example of the great master, "Well-known Footsteps," is a small one, it is a work of exquisite finish, rich and harmonious. Not far removed is a fine sample of Mr. Alfred Parsons', who has of late years established such a high reputation as a landscape painter. Mr. Whimper sends two very fine landscapes, "On the Conway" and "On the Cornish Coast." It would be difficult to give the palm of superiority to either of these. Those who love to study scenes of battle will crowd round Mr. Woodville's "Just in the Nick of Time." It represents an episode in the late Egyptian War, and serves to bring forth in strong light the fine conception and bold treatment which has secured to this artist the reputation of holding the first place in the list of subjects such as that now exhibited. Those who are in love with animal painting will find pleasure in studying "Treasure Trove." We must postpone for the present a further consideration of this highly interesting collection of paintings.

Some vessels despatched in search of the Condor discovered her in the Bay of Galipia, near Cape Bon, where she and 56 other ships had taken refuge from the gale, and were waiting for the sea to go down before leaving.

The Committee of the Royal Naval Benevolent Society instituted in 1739, of which her Majesty the Queen is patron, desire us to remind all friends of the Navy that donations, however small, towards the funds of the Society will be thankfully received by the secretary, at 18 Adam Street, Adelphi; or by the bankers, Messrs. Child and Co., and Messrs. Drummond. We would remind our readers that this Society often relieves the real, pinching want of relatives of Naval men who are too proud to let their poverty be made known.

The Russian Admiralty have ordered the construction, at the Ochta Dockyard, of a wooden sailing corvette, to be employed as a training-ship for the students of the Naval Academy. This vessel will have a displacement of 1,200 tons, and will carry an armament of nine 4-in. and one 3-in. guns.

The Weser Shipbuilding Company of Bremen have been ordered by the German Admiralty to construct six second-class torpedo-boats, similar to the one lately purchased in England.

HOW TO AVOID THE INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF STIMULANTS.—The present system of living—partaking of too rich foods, as pastry, saccharine and fatty substances, alcoholic drinks, and an insufficient amount of exercise—frequently deranges the liver. I would advise all bilious people, unless they are careful to keep the liver acting freely, to exercise great care in the use of alcoholic drinks, avoid sugar, and always dilute largely with water. Experience shows that porter, mild ales, port wine, dark sherries, sweet champagne, liqueurs, and brandies, are all very apt to disagree; while light white wines, and gin or old whisky largely diluted with soda water, will be found the least objectionable. ENO'S FRUIT SALT is peculiarly adapted for any constitutional weakness of the liver; it possesses the powers of reparation when digestion has been disturbed or lost, and places the invalid on the right track to health. A world of woes is avoided by those who keep and use ENO'S FRUIT SALT, therefore no family should ever be without it. CAUTION.—Legal Rights are protected in every Civilised Country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "ENO'S FRUIT SALT." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions, in Sixteen Languages, how to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at ENO'S Fruit Salt Works, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C, ENO'S Patent.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Field-Marshal Lord Napier of Magdala unveiled a memorial window in Rochester Cathedral on Wednesday, to the officers and non-commissioned officers who were slain or died from disease in the South African and Afghan Campaigns. His lordship was accompanied by Major-Gen. Sir A. Clarke, Col. Sir J. Stokes, Col. Gordon (commanding the School of Military Engineering), &c. There was a special musical service, in which the cathedral choir and organist were assisted by the Royal Engineers' string band. Lord Napier, after unveiling the window, said, "These monumental windows have been erected by the corps of Royal Engineers in affectionate memory of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers who fell in the late campaigns in South Africa. Afghanistan, and in the Waziri country. The window to the right is dedicated to the memory of the heroic Col. Durnford, who, with a handful of men, fell bravely attempting to stem the torrent of overwhelming numbers of the enemy. The window to the left is sacred to the memory of Lieut. Henn, who, with 11 Bombay Sappers, checked the advance of the Afghan army, and fell bravely fighting, with all his men, in covering the retreat of the British force. The centre window commemorates the service of Capt. Cruikshank, who fell in a sortie from Candahar; Capt. M'Gregor, who died in battle; Major Dundas and Lieut. Nugent, who died from the explosion of a mine; Lieut. M'Dowell, who fell at Isandula, faithfully beside his chief, Col. Durnford; and to Lieut. Poulter, Lieut. Ancrum, Lieut. Price, and Lieut. Dobson, who died from sickness brought on by the hardships of the campaign; with eight good soldiers and non-commissioned officers who died in battle. Forty-one died of sickness, disease, and hardship during the campaign. These brave soldiers gave their lives in the very pride and prime of their youth and manhood. They left their employment in time of peace, rejoicing to draw their swords in their country's service. Right well had they earned their country's gratitude. They were not men unprepared, for they knew well the sacrifice that might be demanded of them, and most nobly had they paid that sacrifice. They were trained in a school which taught them that the faithful performance of duty was the highest point of honour. It was, therefore, right and meet and appropriate that their names should be here inscribed in that sacred building, amidst the community among whom they had sojourned, and in view of their brother-officers and soldiers who cherished with pride their example, and were proud thus to honour them and preserve their memory." The Dean of Rochester replied in a few words of grateful appreciation of the beautiful memorials confided to the care of the Chapter. After an anthem, the Bishop of Rochester gave an address appropriate to the ceremony, and then a final anthem was sung, and the benediction concluded the service. At Brompton Barracks the officers gave a luncheon, which was followed by a concert.

The Auxiliary Forces.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

The Hon. Artillery Company. The regiment is not only the oldest regiment in the kingdom, but a branch of the Company is also the oldest military body in America, viz., "The Ancient and Honourable Artillery Company" of Massachusetts, which was formed in 1638 by members of the London Company who had settled there a few years earlier, The H.A.C. recently sent a magnificently bound copy of the "History" of the Regiment, by Capt. G. A. Raikes, F.S.A., to the President of the United States, and they have just received the following acknowledgment:—"Executive Mansion, Washington, Nov. 27, 1883.—My dear Sir,—Pray pardon the long delay in acknowledgment of the receipt from the Hon. Artillery Company of London of the handsomely bound copy, in two volumes, of the history of that organisation. The pressure of official matters, and an absence from Washington during part of the summer, have prevented an earlier response. I deem it a privilege to possess in this manner so authentic and valuable a record of this famous and ancient Military Company, and I beg that you will be good enough to express to the members of your Company my appreciation of their kindness in sending me this interesting work. Assuring you of my best wishes for the continued success of the organisation, and with thanks for your courtesy, I am, &c. (signed), Chester A. Arthur. To Henry R. Freshfield, Esq., President of the Hon. Artillery Company."

3rd London Rifles. The annual presentation of prizes took place at Guildhall on Saturday last. The Lord Mayor presided, and was accompanied by the Sheriffs. There was a large concourse of persons present, and the regiment mustered about 500. Lieut.-Col. Laurie stated that the regiment still maintained the lead as the largest regiment of the metropolis. The present strength was 1,082, and its efficients 1,053. The Lord Mayor, in the absence of the Lady Mayoress, presented the prizes. The gold medal, as best shot in the regiment, was taken by Assist.-Serjt.-Major W. Ratley.

19th Middlesex (Bloomsbury) Rifles. Major-Gen. Elkington, C.B., Depty.-Adjt.-Gen. for Auxiliary Forces, presided on Saturday at the annual distribution of prizes, which was held at the new head-quarters, Chenies Street, Bedford Square. Lieut.-Col. Smith-Richards said the enrolled strength was 949, and there were 885 efficients. These figures were not so large as last year, but though this fact was to be regretted, he could state that the corps was never in so sound a state as now. Of the 64 non-efficients, there were a good many recruits, and some men had been unable to fire their class owing to the closing of the Scrubs ranges. Foremost among the prizes were the Duke of Bedford's Cup, value £100, awarded to Pte. G. Young; and another cup, value £50, also presented by his Grace, for the encouragement of drill, which was handed to Capt. Hodge, for his company. There were besides these, seven other challenge cups, of a total aggregate value of about £160, besides gold and silver medals, &c. Gen. Elkington, at the close of the distribution, congratulated the regiment on its sound condition.

"A Volunteer Officer" writes:—"At the present time the arms of several Volunteer regiments are in the hands of the Government, having been returned into store for the purpose of being repaired and overlooked. Would it not, therefore, seem a suitable occasion to substitute serviceable weapons for the worn-out Snider rifles? Many of them are simply converted Enfields, and had been much used before conversion. It is stated that the Regular Force is shortly to be armed with a repeating rifle; if so, there could be no reason to delay the issue of Martini-Henry rifles to the Volunteers."

It has been decided to call a special meeting of commanding officers of the Home District, to consider the condition and general equipment of the Volunteer Force. The meeting will be held early in January.

The Mayor of Brighton presided over a private meeting at Brighton on Monday, to consider what steps should be taken in respect to the next Easter Monday Volunteer Review. After several members of the Sites Committee, who had interviewed farmers and owners whose land was requisitioned for the Review last year, had reported to the meeting, it was resolved to endeavour to arrange for a Review site on the Dyke Estate, which lies to the north-west of Brighton. For this site one force could proceed from the main London and Brighton line, and the opposite force from the Horsham or Brighton and Shoreham lines. A telegram was received from Lieut.-Col. Knight, general manager of the London and Brighton Railway Company, stating that the Company will be glad to meet the general wish of the town with regard to railway facilities.

London Amusements.

The holiday entertainments are now being actively rehearsed. At Her Majesty's Theatre will be produced, on Boxing Night, "Little Red Riding Hood," a pantomime chiefly sustained by the Vokes family. At Drury Lane, Mr. Augustus Harris provides an elaborately spectacular version of "Cinderella." The National Standard is furnished by Mr. John Douglass, with "Puss in Boots." The Surrey pantomime is entitled "Jack and Jill, or the House that Jack Built." The Britannia pantomime is called "Queen Dodo and the Three Wonders." The Elephant and Castle Theatre has a pantomime entitled "Whittington and His Cat." At the Haymarket, Adelphi, Lyceum, Princess's, Alhambra, St. James's, Strand, Vaudeville, Court, Savoy, Toole's Theatre, and the Comedy Theatre, no special novelties are thought necessary. To the Olympic is transferred the Surrey drama of "The Crimes of Paris." At Sadler's Wells, the Adelphi drama of "Notre Dame" will be the Christmas entertainment, thus breaking through the traditions of some threescore years.

The St. James's celebrates the Yuletide festival by a revival of Mr. Palgrave Simpson's three-act comedy of "A Scrap of Paper," adapted from Victorien Sardou's ingenious drama of "Les Pattes de Mouche." Mr. Kendal and Mrs. Kendal resume their positions as Colonel Blake and Susan Hartley. Mr. Hare is again the representative of the astute Dr. Penguin, and with Mrs. Gaston Murray as Mrs. Penguin, Miss Webster as Lucy Franklin, Miss Linda Dietz as Lady Ingram, and Mr. Herbert Waring and Mr. D. S. Boucicault as Sir John Ingram and Archie Hamilton, a very satisfactory cast is provided. An original comedietta, by Mr. Theyre Smith, called "A Case for Eviction," supplies a pleasant prelude, with Mr. George Alexander and Miss Linda Dietz in the two characters of Frank and Dora.

The Royalty has reopened with a farcical comedy adapted from the French by Messrs. Maltby and Owen Dove, and now entitled "The Three Hats." This eccentric piece, originally produced at Bath about six months ago, has the advantage of being supported by a fairly efficient company.

An excellent performance of Holcroft's old comedy of "The Road to Ruin" has strengthened the favourable opinions expressed with regard to Mr. Edward Compton's carefully-selected company at the Strand. Mr. Compton's embodiment of Goldfinch, embellished with some fresh touches of character, shows a close study of that odd sporting personage belonging to a past period, and sustains the belief that the son of a comedian highly esteemed by playgoers of a preceding generation inherits many of the histrionic attributes of his father.

The Opera Comique will be reopened this (Saturday) evening for the purpose of introducing to the London stage Miss Carlotta Crabtree, who prefers being known by the simple appellative of "Lotta." This lively actress has for some time past been very popular with American audiences.

Two new dramatic parodies are in preparation. One, on "Pygmalion and Galatea," will be produced forthwith at the Gaiety; and another, on "Claudian," written by Mr. Burnand, will be speedily brought out at Toole's Theatre.

"As You Like It" was played at Dulwich College on Monday night, under the direction of the head master. The representation took the place of the ordinary "Speech Day," and was, at least, sufficient to show that elocution was not a neglected study at the College.

Mr. Charles Du Val, whose monologue is rapidly approaching its 150th representation, will appear on Boxing Day and the Christmas week in the Moore and Burgess room, St. James's Hall, at two performances daily. Mr. Du Val's programme will receive the addition of some new "Speaking Likenesses," his "Five-act Drama," and a number of impersonations from his repertoire, with which the London public have not yet become familiar. During the interim fresh ventilators and additional stalls will be placed in Mr. Du Val's St. James's Drawing-room.

The Christmas edition of "La Vie" is now being played at the Avenue, with new songs, dances, and effects. Miss Camille Dubois sustains the part of Christine, in place of Miss La Rue, who has gone to New York. As the piece stands at present, it may rank with the brightest and merriest of holiday entertainments.

A proposal is being discussed in Canada that next year the Dominion Artillery Association should organise an important prize meeting at Quebec, at which teams from Great Britain as well as from all parts of the Dominion should be invited to compete. Should this idea be carried out, Canada would not send a team of artillery volunteers to Shoeburyness next summer.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS, Etc.

A SUFFERER.—Your commanding officer was only doing his duty in enforcing cleanliness on the mess deck. Instead of abusing him, you should get your messmates to insist on everything, deck included, being at all times clean. Too often men, unless properly looked after, will herd together in a place no better than the location of the animals you mention; and should your commanding officer have found your mess to resemble a sty, we can well imagine his disgust. There was nothing unjust in the punishment he inflicted. We are always ready to help those who have just cause for complaint, but not grumblers, who, by their own conduct, bring down upon themselves that about which they complain.

ERRATUM.—Mr. B. U. Colclough (not B. W.) has been appointed Assistant-Clerk, R.N.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1883.

THE War Office has taken the trouble to issue an official communiqué, contradicting the report that measures are likely to be taken to reinforce the Egyptian garrisons. This contradiction was looked for by all those versed in the ways of official life. If recruiting is progressing unfavourably, we have invariably found that a communiqué is sent round, or a series of inspired articles are inserted, representing the Army to be some thousands of men over its establishment; if a force is on the point of being despatched to any particular part of our dominions, its departure is almost always preceded by the publication of an official paragraph, penned with diplomatic precision, denying that such a movement of troops is contemplated. But, unfortunately, the trick has been played so often that nobody will now be blinded by it, and some other device will have to be had recourse to for gulling a usually gullible public. In the present instance, matters are assuming such a serious aspect in Egypt that, try as it may, the Government cannot close its eyes to facts, but will be compelled, by the voice of reason, shortly to take vigorous action for the protection of British interests. It is all well and good for us to raise our hands, turn our heads and say, "It is your affair." We have voluntarily undertaken a responsibility, and we cannot now withdraw from our position. These things should have been thought of before the decision was arrived at to occupy Egypt. We took the decisive step, and we shall be obliged to abide by the consequences of our acts. Notwithstanding the War-Office contradiction, it is obvious that the Army of Occupation must be reinforced; in fact, nowhere is the necessity for an augmentation of the force at General Stephenson's command more fully recognised than within the walls of the War Office itself, where the utmost is being done to ascertain how many men we could spare, and in what space of time we could have them ready. In ministerial circles, attempts are being made to underrate the difficulties which the disaster to Hicks Pasha's army has created. Every thinking soldier sees how hopeless the task is which Baker Pasha is undertaking. And yet, if the Egyptian forces meet with further reverses, there will be nothing for it but for the British Government to send out not a few battalions only, but something very like an army corps to Egypt. It is simply a case now of the stitch in time. The despatch of a few battalions to Cairo at this juncture would save endless trouble and expense hereafter, but with that blindness and perversity which on all occasions mark the actions of Liberal Cabinets, we are putting off the evil day, hoping that it may not come, or that if it comes, something will have turned up in the meantime to ease the way. Experience shows, however, that such a policy only leads to disappointment. The evil day is bound to come, and when it does, the difficulties of our task will be increased tenfold by vacillation and want of proper forethought. That reinforcements will have to be sent to Egypt, none but the blindest partisans of the Government would care to deny. Then surely the wisest plan would be for those in authority manfully to face the exigency, and push on their preparations, in case the emergency should suddenly arise; not to do as they, apparently, wish to do,—lead people to suppose that matters will right themselves, when it is only too evident that each day adds to the complexity of affairs. It may suit the purposes of a tottering Ministry to think that the dangers of the situation are exaggerated. It is, no doubt, a serious shock to the Cabinet to feel that all its calculations as to the forthcoming Budget stand a chance of being upset. Those responsible for the government of the country have, however, a duty to perform which is higher than any obligations of a Party character. This Egyptian fiasco is one of their own creation, and the only course open to them is to face the danger boldly.

At the recent distribution of prizes to the 2nd Volunteer Battalion of the Royal Fusiliers, Lord Wolseley is reported to have said, "I have seen your guard of honour, and I can only say that I wish every corps in the Regular Army were as well set up and as fine-looking a body of men as those which I see before me, dressed in the uniform of the Royal Fusiliers." Without in the slightest degree detracting from the merit so worthily due to the Volunteers as a body, the obvious question arises,—who is responsible for the unhappy fact of our Regular Army of presumably trained soldiers being so disadvantageously compared with its Volunteer brethren? The country, calmly lulled to sleep and absorbed in roseate dreams of the military oligarchy composed of its Adjutant-General and his satellites, is slow to waken to the truth, and should it shake off its lethargy and open its eyes, would doubtless receive in them a full measure of the official dust which is always in readiness to blind importunate seekers after the light; but it is high time that it should become aroused to the present state of things, and have the fact brought home to it that, however glowing a picture may be depicted on paper, there exists the stern reality of attenuated battalions of half-drilled, under-sized lads, who are neither fit to go anywhere nor do anything; and that whenever a battalion on home service is so fortunate as to contain a few seasoned men in its ranks, they are speedily drafted to supply the deficiency in those of some other battalion which is abroad. Lord Wolseley's admission, which probably escaped him in the ardour of the moment, affords not only food for chastened reflection, but should fill the mind of every one who hears it with dire apprehension combined with mistrust of the powers which have swept aside the matured private, the experienced non-commissioned officer, old regimental land-marks, cherished traditions, and the bulwark of esprit de corps, to give us in return skeleton battalions of infants in arms. Let the nation look to these things before the supreme moment arrives. Otherwise, it may, when too late, awake to the fact that it has unhappily been peacefully slumbering in a fools' paradise.

The introduction of a pair of waterproof canvas slippers, to be carried in lieu of the second pair of boots in the valise on active service, will doubtless be of much comfort to the soldier in more ways than one; but at the same time, very careful judgment should be used by the commanding officer as to when they should be put on. If the soldier should be permitted to change his serviceable boot for the canvas shoe at his own pleasure, as soon as he settles down in his tent at nightfall, the time may come when badly shod feet may be a fruitful source of disaster, for in the event of a sudden call or surprise, there would be no time to effect a change from the canvas shoe to the boot; and it can be easily understood that a soldier lightly shod, rushing into darkness, perhaps in snow, or over rough, thorny, or swampy ground, would not be in as effective a condition for fight as if his feet were thoroughly protected. The battle of Inkerman was an example of night surprise, when the men had to turn out of their tents as best they could, and when most of the regiments, quickly engaged hand to hand with the enemy, would have had no time to exchange a shoe for a boot. Thus, although the canvas shoe will be an advantage under ordinary circumstances, the time when allowed to be put on when encamped in the face of an enemy cannot be too carefully considered.

The experimental trials with the new rifle have now been brought to a conclusion. The practices up to 2,000 yards have been very satisfactory. The new rifle is a splendid weapon for prize shooting and holiday work, but it is a very delicate piece of mechanism, and all too complicated for the rough-and-tumble of active service.

It appears that 6,700 soldiers serving in India have already availed themselves of the option of extending their period of service. No more conclusive evidence could be given of the wisdom of the important changes in the conditions of military service which have been effected by the Marquis of Hartington. Few, except those who have served in India, can understand the disadvantages under which a regiment or battalion serves in that country, unless it has a large proportion of men inured to a tropical climate and familiar with Indian habits.

The remonstrances of the Lieutenant-Colonels, Royal Artillery, affected by the "new Artillery ukase" have not, so far, been productive of any satisfactory result. Their several protests have merely been submitted to the Secretary of State for War; but it has leaked out that the War Office blame the India Office for not offering better terms, while the India Office naturally enough retort that it is nothing to them whether the Lieutenant-Colonels are removed to non-employment or not, nor whether they retire or not, but if they, the India Office, have to pay, they naturally wish to cut down the expense as much as possible. This they have done to some purpose, even to an actual saving of about £300 a year on each officer removed. Thus, while these great public Departments are wrangling over details which should have been settled before these unfortunate officers were removed, the great injustice of their removal at all is being overlooked. That proceeding is entirely the work of the Deputy-Adjutant-General, Royal Artillery, who, in a communication to the General Officers commanding Districts, "has it in command" to direct the Lieutenant-Colonels to be struck off the strength of their districts to non-employment. After January 1 next all these officers will be in receipt of the sum of £328 per annum, when their pensions would, should they retire, vary from £600 to £880. It may be said, why not take their pensions? But in addition to the hardship of being turned out on what is virtually half-pay, at a few weeks' notice, against all rules and regulations, and in the face of a Parliamentary guarantee, they naturally object to being shelved at the age of 47 or 48, when both willing and able to serve, and having, moreover, a claim to employment, or at all events to employed pay and allowances, until they attain to the highest rate of pension, which is the legitimate object of every officer's ambition, and from which they are now virtually shut out. In the late East India Company's Service, there was no such thing as "non-employment,"—a term created for the occasion, and to suit a pressing emergency. So that the officers complain with some amount of reason at their treatment.

A division of the Corps of Commissionaires will be established at Leeds on the 1st prox. The address of the office is 24 Great George Street, where Pensioners and Reservists wishing to join will obtain every information.

If the Volunteers have good cause for complaining that the authorities in Pall Mall treat them with neglect, they certainly cannot make the same complaint with regard to the Press. One of our contemporaries has lately opened its columns to a correspondence on the question,—"Can the Volunteers Fight?" And on Thursday morning two daily papers had leading articles on this same subject. It has long been admitted that the present unsatisfactory position in which the Volunteers find themselves calls for redress. At last, even the War Office admits that a show of doing something is necessary, and a Committee of Commanding Officers has been appointed, and will shortly meet, to consider the condition and general equipment of the force. It appears to us that the writer of the article in the Standard hits the nail on the head, when he says:—"But what a serious and astonishing event it would be, if the Committee soon to assemble were to turn round to the Government and request definite instructions as to the intended place of the Volunteers in war. Yet this is clearly the essence of the whole matter." Yes, this is the question, and on the answer given depends the whole future of the force, for "if," to quote again the Shylock-like utterances of the Standard, "rain falls, will not the Volunteer get wet? If he lies down on damp ground, without camp equipment or a great-coat, is he any less likely to be crippled by rheumatism or pneumonia than his 'Regular' comrade? If you stab him or shoot him, will he not bleed, and require medical attendance? If you starve him, will he not lose his spirit, and presently die? If, then, he has the same human weaknesses, needs the same food, and clothing, and doctoring, and comforting as other soldiers, we should be glad to know whether it needs the collective wisdom of the 'commanding officers' to prove that Volunteers will need in war exactly the same equipment as suits soldiers generally,—no more and no less." If then, in the event of invasion, the Volunteers are to co-operate with the Regulars in the field, the equipment required is already settled. But if they are intended to garrison towns and forts which no enemy would ever attack while there remained a regular soldier in the field, then is the zeal of 200,000 patriotic citizens being deliberately cast aside, at a time when the authorities should be using their utmost endeavours to make every branch of the Army popular, and the sooner the farce is brought to an end the better. We cannot believe that any Government would thus relegate so fine a body of men, capable, if properly managed, of defying any conceivable scheme of invasion, to what would be practically uselessness. The only logical course to pursue is, therefore, to at once provide them with every essential for campaigning as part of an efficient army. "But the expense!" we fancy we hear the advocates of retrenchment exclaim. On this point we may quote the writer of the article in the Daily Telegraph, who says,—"Either the Volunteers should be dissolved as incapable of real efficiency, or their efficiency should be secured. They are either worth the cost of proper training and equipment, or they are worth nothing, and we had better save the annual half-million now spent upon them." This is the state of affairs, and it only remains now for the authorities to apply the remedy. The Channel-Tunnel scheme was discountenanced on the ground of our liability to invasion, and an officer of the Intelligence Department was ordered to draw up a statement of cases of the outbreak of war without an immediate pretext, with a view of proving the same theory. Then, if we are thus liable at any moment to a sudden and unexpected attack, it certainly behoves us to be at least prepared to meet it, when it comes.

A most valuable invention, in the shape of a washable sponge sole, is now being tested at Aldershot by the troops, during route-marching. It is claimed for these soles by the inventor, Herr Wagner, of Berlin, that they are a preventative of blistered or galled feet, and that to men with abnormally perspiring feet, of which a large per-centage will be found in every regiment, they are simply invaluable. This invention has already been adopted in the German Army.

We have several times during the last few months drawn attention to the fact that in the 2nd Battalion Seaforth Highlanders (78th Foot) and the 1st Battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (91st Foot) there were Lieutenant-Colonelcies vacant, and that those vacancies had existed unfilled for a very considerable period, it being now nine months since the occurrence of the vacancy in the Seaforth Highlanders, and six months since that in the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders was created. Until a short time ago, we were under the impression that the extraordinary delay was caused by some extraordinary reason—that it was intended to effect an alteration of Article 30 I. of the present Royal Warrant. No notification of any alteration of the Warrant has yet taken place; but the Lieutenant-Colonelcy of the Seaforth Highlanders was filled up in the Gazette of the 18th inst. Although the promotion, after nine months of consideration, has been given to an officer of the battalion in which the vacancy occurred, and who, under the present Warrant, has no special claim to the step, we by no means feel confident that the promotion referred to heralds the approach of an official notification of a revision of Article 30 I. The grounds for our doubt are threefold. Firstly, that for the last few weeks an ugly rumour has been abroad that Lord Hartington has definitely declined to interfere with this particular specimen of the handiwork of his predecessor. Secondly, the apparent corroboration of the rumour by the fact of the gazetting of the promotion which was supposed to have been delayed for so many months on account of a contemplated alteration in the Warrant. Thirdly, the question,—Why, then, was the promotion given in the 2nd Battalion, when there was a senior Major of the regiment in the 1st Battalion? may be answered by a reference to the service of the senior Major of the 1st Battalion, from which it appears that he himself has a distinct claim, under the Warrant, to promotion in his own battalion, he having not yet received one step of promotion since June 30, 1881. It is quite conceivable that, even had the promotion been offered to Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Kelsey, he would have preferred to have remained in his old regiment a little longer, with the certainty of ultimately obtaining his Lieutenant-Colonelcy therein. Taking all these circumstances into consideration, we fear that even now, after all these months, nothing will be done. However, there is the Lieutenant-Colonelcy in the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, which still remains unfilled, and in which the situation is almost exactly similar; and we shall watch with some anxiety to see how that is dealt with, as some further light may thereby be thrown upon the subject.

COASTGUARD.

Chief Officer—Walter Brinkley, to the Penelope, for Leysdown Coastguard station, vice Turner.

Achilles, Capt. Morant, made a two hours' trial of her machinery in the Channel on Saturday, and left Plymouth Sound on Tuesday to join the flag of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh.

Alexandra, Capt. Harry Rawson, C.B., flagship of Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, was at Malta on Dec. 20. A correspondent writing on Dec. 7 from Malta says:—"The Condor left on Sunday morning for the neighbourhood of Cape Bona, to look for a rock which is supposed to exist some considerable distance from the land, and of which no record is in possession of the Admiralty Hydrographical Department. Some vessel accidentally fell across it, and her captain has made a report to that effect, and as the rock is in the track of vessels making to the eastward the sooner its whereabouts is determined and proper precautions taken to mark its position the better for vessels trading in this part of the world. On the same afternoon the Hecla arrived and made fast, and left on the following day for Fiume to take in torpedoes of new pattern and leave others for alterations. On his return Capt. Wilson will superintend a series of experiments on board the Inflexible in firing torpedoes from her submerged tubes. Her present chief engineer having adopted the plan of admitting air into the tube at the back of the torpedo, it has been found to answer admirably, and has done its work so well that the 'impulse tube' could be dispensed with entirely. Previous to this the firing has not been a success, as it was found that a perfect vacuum was formed at the rear of the torpedo, neither air nor water being able to get in to fill up the space in the tube vacated by the torpedo. The Dee and the Don went out on trial on Tuesday, and was successful as regards the Don, but owing to the boilers of the Dee priming badly, neither horse-power nor speed was obtained, and another trial will have to take place. The Iris arrived on Wednesday, and was placed in quarantine, and the Monarch, Temeraire, and Cruiser left, the former for Naples, and the two latter for Corfu, and they are to be away until the end of January, when it is rumoured that the Temeraire will pay off, all standing. I hear that one of the cylinders of the Superb is considerably out of line with the crank shaft, and that this accounts for the knocking about which the engines have always had, and which no amount of adjustment could get rid of. The Helicon arrived from Naples on Tuesday with Lady Hay and children on board. The ship had a fine passage and did the distance in 34 hours. There is no information forthcoming as to her being paid off, although she has been the same time in commission as the Temeraire. During the past week the rainfall here has been greater than during the same period for many years past, and the Government and other tanks have received sufficient water to last for a considerable time. The weather is still very unsettled."

Audacious, Capt. Tracey, flagship of Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes, C.B., was at Hong Kong on Dec. 18. The Orontes would leave on Dec. 20.

Coquette, Lieut. and Com. Crowe, arrived at Suakim on Dec. 14.

Euphrates, Capt. Cardale, arrived on Dec. 15 at Queenstown, and left same day; has since ran aground, on Dec. 20, on a sand-bank off Tarifa. The women and children on board have been landed at Gibraltar, in charge of a military officer. The Admiralty has telegraphed Rear-Admiral Wilson to send two ships of the Channel Squadron to assist in getting the Euphrates off. Capt. Freemantle has left Gibraltar, with assistance, for the same purpose, and the Himalaya has been ordered round from Malta to take the passengers of the Euphrates on.

Euryalus, Capt. Hastings, C.B., flagship of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., was at Bombay when H.R.H. the Duke and Duchess of Connaught arrived. Great preparations were made for their reception. The vessels of the Bombay Marine, turret-ships, and a number of vessels in harbour dressed rainbow fashion, and as soon as the Cathay was signalled the flagship and Serapis also dressed. As the Cathay reached the inner lighthouse, the flagship fired a salute of thirty-one guns, the men-of-war and several other ships manning yards. The Cathay was escorted into harbour by the squadron of the Royal Bombay Yacht Club, and took up her moorings just off the Apollo Bunder at 2 p.m. Their Royal Highnesses were on the bridge as the Cathay steamed into harbour, the Duke being dressed in the uniform of a major-general wearing the Order of the Garter and the Egyptian medal. At 4 o'clock, the Duchess went on board a steam launch alongside, which was steered by the navigating-lieutenant. The flagship again fired a salute of thirty-one guns, and the Duke, accompanied by the Admiral and other officials, proceeded to the dockyard. On their landing a salute of thirty-one guns was fired from the battery on shore. The Duke and Duchess were received on shore by his Excellency the Governor and all the officials, and a choir of native children sang "God save the Queen" in their own language, and it formed a very interesting part of the ceremony.

Forward, Lieut.-Com. Arthur Furlonger, left Sheerness on Saturday for Portland, en route for Vigo, to join the Channel Squadron. The Forward is to perform the duties of tender to the fleet during the present cruise, there being no despatch-vessel available to succeed the Lively. She is expected to proceed to Australia in May next, to strengthen the squadron under the command of Comdre. J. E. Erskine. She arrived in Plymouth Sound on Dec. 17, and left on Dec. 20 to join the Channel Squadron.

Himalaya, Capt. Palliser, arrived at Malta on Dec. 17; has been ordered to proceed at once to Gibraltar.

Humber, Com. C. H. Hawkins, left the Medway on Sunday for Plymouth, en route for Malta and Zanzibar. The Humber has a heavy cargo of stores for Malta Dockyard and the Mediterranean Fleet. At Plymouth she will take in 40 tons of stores for the East India station, and will embark a new crew for the Dryad, which is to be recommissioned at Zanzibar, Capt. Johnstone and the old crew returning to England in the Humber. She arrived in the Sound on Dec. 17, and left on Dec. 19.

Lion. Com. McKechnie gave a most successful variety entertainment on board, on Friday evening last, when a capital programme was gone through. The chair was occupied by the Rev. Mr. Blunn, B.A., LL.D., chaplain, who introduced the various pieces in a most happy manner. The song "Sailing," given by boy Tivey took immensely, the chorus of over 900 voices being distinctly heard in Keyham Yard. Boys McLeish and Harris acquitted themselves admirably in their negro performance, the dancing being executed with marked precision. Mr. F. Barratt's rendering of "The Englishman" was very forcible, and deserved the enthusiastic applause it obtained. Mr. J. Seymour presided at the harmonium. The band, under the able conductorship of Mr. D. Bower, bandmaster, played selections during the evening, bringing the concert to a close with the National Anthem.

Ranger, Com. Darwall, was at Suakim on Dec. 15.

Sphinx, Com. Caffin, left Malta for East Indies station on Dec. 15, arrived at Port Said on Dec. 19, and left on Dec. 20 for Suakim.

Superb, Capt. Ward, C.B., will be paid off at Malta on Dec. 21, and recommissioned the day following.

Swiftsure, Capt. Aitchison, flagship of Rear-Admiral Lyons, arrived at Callao on Dec. 18, with the Sappho in company.

H.M.S. EUPHRATES.

The Secretary of the Admiralty presents his compliments to the Editor of the Army and Navy Gazette, and begs to inform him that a telegram has been received from the senior Naval officer at Gibraltar, dated the 21st inst., 9 a.m., reporting that H.M.S. Euphrates, which went ashore near Tarifa on Wednesday evening, has been floated, apparently uninjured, and is expected to arrive at Gibraltar this forenoon. The Euphrates will be examined at Gibraltar, and the troops for India will either proceed in that ship, or be transferred to H.M.S. Himalaya, which vessel left Malta for Gibraltar at 7 a.m. this morning.

Admiralty, December 21, 1883.

Vigo, December 10, 1883.

We arrived here on Saturday afternoon, the 8th, having been just four days en route. As soon as we weighed from Portland, on Tuesday afternoon, and cleared the breakwater, we made sail to a strong northerly wind, which we carried down Channel and across the Bay for the next two days, slipping along very quietly and comfortably, going seven to eight knots, with studd-sails set. The weather was beautiful, bright, and clear, more like May than December. We had our usual drills in the evenings, shortening and making sail and reefing topsails. On Friday the wind went round to E.N.E., and freshened till in the afternoon and evening it was blowing a gale, with a heavy sea running. For a few hours the Squadron, with the exception of the Neptune, remained under sail alone, with double-reefed topsails and fore-staysails set. Soon after 4 in the afternoon, Cape Finisterre was sighted, and at 6 o'clock the Squadron tacked, using steam, and stood off the land to the northward, under sail and easy steam till midnight, when we tacked again, and at daylight were once more off Cape Finisterre. On Saturday morning, as we got more to the southward, under the shelter of the land, both wind and sea went down, and by noon it was quite fine again. We came to, and moored off Vigo at half-past 2 in columns of divisions line ahead; the first division, Agincourt and Northumberland, nearest the town; and the second, Sultan and Neptune, outside. The Sultan is anchored abreast of the Northumberland, so as to leave a place at the head of the line, abreast of the Agincourt, for the Minotaur when she arrives. A signal has been made that there will be no drill or evolutions aloft for the next four days, to enable the ships to rattle down, paint, &c., so we will have a quiet week. The weather is very pleasant, though rather cold, and the country is looking very pretty. The members of the Casino de Vigo have, with their usual courtesy, offered us the use of their club during our stay.

The Italian ex-Minister of Marine, Vice-Admiral Acton, has been appointed to command the Italian permanent Squadron, and hoisted his flag on Saturday last on the ironclad Dandolo. He inspected the first section of the squadron now in the port of Naples.

THE ADVERTISER,
WITH A LARGE EXPERIENCE
WHOLESALE WINE TRADE,
CAPITAL AND CREDIT HERE AND ABROAD,
COMBINE with GENTLEMEN of INFLUENCE of the ARMY and NAVY, to ESTABLISH A CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY,
FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF WINES AND SPIRITS, ON A NEW PLAN.

The commercial status and great experience of the advertiser would enable the new Society to buy on the best terms, that, as compared with Societies employing intermediaries, would represent the saving of a large per-centage on the cost prices; again, it would not be saddled with the possible losses from the depreciation of Stocks, or otherwise, of other Departments. The Wine Department, per se, is said to be the one that yields the most profit to the Co-operative Stores.

To give the new undertaking a fair start, and as an earnest of his confidence in its success, the Advertiser would give his services for a term without remuneration or profit to him whatsoever. Full explanations at an interview, which can be arranged by addressing BETA, care of Mr. West, 49 George Street, Portman Square, W.

OROIDE GOLD JEWELLERY (REGD.)

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. CHLORODYNE.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, Esq., 33 Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London.

Dear Sir,—We embrace this opportunity of congratulating you upon the wide-spread reputation this justly esteemed medicine, Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself, not only in Hindostan, but all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES and Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a Liquid Medicine which assuages Pain of every kind, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without Headache, and invigorates the Nervous System when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff), discovered a remedy to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE.

The General Board of Health, London, report that it acts as a charm, one dose generally sufficient.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of COUGHS, ASTHMA, COLDS,
BRONCHITIS,
EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION, HYSTERIA, and is the true Palliative in
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.
GREAT SPECIFIC for
DIARRHŒA,
CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

IMPORTANT CAUTION. The immense sale of this remedy has given rise to many unscrupulous imitations.

N.B.—Every bottle of genuine Chlorodyne bears on the Government stamp the name of the inventor,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE.

CO-OPERATION. — COOPER COOPER and CO. also invite attention to the new System of Co-operation in the purchase of Tea by persons living in the country through the medium of the Parcels Post.

CO-OPERATION.—This system will apply to every kind of TEA offered for Sale by COOPER COOPER and CO., and if followed out will practically enable them to place before customers in every county town and village in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, in the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, in the Hebrides, and the Orkneys, Tea of the same choice kinds as sold in their various Establishments in London, at the same prices, with the addition of the nominal sum of one halfpenny a pound.

The Army and Navy Gazette can be obtained in Paris of our Agent, Mr. J. W. S. NEAL, English Stationer, 248 Rue de Rivoli, to whom Advertisements and Orders for the Paper may be sent.

THE London Gazette occasionally notifies some appointments to the Reserve of Officers, and the official Army List shows, under that delusive heading, a long list of names of officers from all branches of the military services; but, apart from these notifications, and from its appearance in the Army List, there is no evidence whatever of the existence of this imposing "Reserve." In October, the list comprised:—19 Generals; 39 Lieutenant-Generals, all with the honorary rank of General; 67 Major-Generals, all having the honorary rank of the higher grade; 105 Lieutenant-Colonels, of whom 41 have the title of Major-General, and 52 that of Colonel; 279 Majors, nearly all having higher brevet or honorary rank; 505 Captains, of whom 147 are Field Officers, either honorary or by brevet; and 222 Lieutenants. From the diversities in the previous services of these officers, and in the modes and times of the removal of most of them from the Active List, it would be extremely difficult, if not quite impossible, to arrange them satisfactorily according to seniority. In the official Army List, this difficulty or impossibility has been evaded by placing them in two divisions, and alphabetically. The first division consists of those who are on "retired pay," or pension; the second, of those "who have retired from the service, or who hold commissions in the Auxiliary Forces." We fail to see the advantage or the object of dividing the List in this way. If those who have served in the "Regulars" were separated from those who have not had that experience, the reason and use of the division would be evident. The placing of the names in each rank alphabetically has, at least, the merit of simplicity. In Hart's Annual Army List, the names are arranged in one list, and according to seniority, as far as such a jumble can be so arranged. The numbers we have given include 281 officers belonging to the Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteers, who ought to join their respective corps, as soon as the latter were called out for service. Some changes have occurred since October, but they do not materially affect the numbers, or the proportions in the several ranks. For this body of officers, as a reserve, there is no work and no pay in peace; and it is difficult even to conjecture how, in the present condition of our Army, they could be employed in war. The "Active List" would suffice to supply Generals and Staff for any number of troops we could prepare for the field. In the event of our being involved in a great European war, or in any other emergency, which would necessitate the preparation of two "Army Corps" for active service, every man of the Army Reserve would be wanted to fill the ranks of those two corps. It is evident, therefore, that the Reserve of Officers would not be needed to command that reserve of men which would be at once absorbed. The Yeomanry, Militia, and Volunteers are fairly officered; at least, they have few vacancies, and none certainly for General Officers. We have been told, with much exaggeration, no doubt, that in the army of one of the South-American Republics, there are 25 generals for every private soldier. With our reserves, the disproportion is infinitely greater, for we have 169 General Officers and 487 Field Officers to command,—not a single soldier! The real strength of the "Reserve of Officers" is less than its numbers; for serious physical and mental defects, and even absolute and undoubted disability to perform any military duty, are not disqualifications for admission. After making a large deduction, however, on this account, there would still remain several hundred officers able and willing to serve again, whose prospects of employment are very remote. To tramp the streets, like labourers frozen out in winter, shouting "We have no work to do-oo-oo," would be undignified and useless; to memorialise the War Office or Parliament would be unavailing. Nothing is left, then, for these officers but patient resignation to their position on the shelf where "Army Reform" has placed them. Yet there remains one slender chance of employment for some of these disappointed but still zealous warriors. If war should call two "army corps" to the field, the numbers of men and lads who would be left behind as unfit for a campaign cannot be estimated (with last year's experience) at less than 30,000. Here would be a fine field for work, if only the proportions of the several ranks in the "Reserve" could be altered.

A reserve, whether of officers or men, to be efficient, should be a regimental reserve, in which every officer or man should have an assigned and suitable position in some regiment or corps, which he should be prepared to join at short notice. The "Reserve of Officers," as it now appears, is merely a list of names of officers who have served, or are serving, in the various parts of our military system; taken fortuitously, without regard to qualification or efficiency, and even comprising men who hold important positions in our remotest possessions. It is absolutely useless, except for the purpose of enabling the Government to give a plausible but fallacious answer to any awkward question that might be asked in Parliament about the means of officering the large additions that must be made to our Army and Auxiliary Forces in case of war, and in the improbable contingency of the present establishment and its visionary reserves being completed under a scheme which has proved to be the lamentable failure so repeatedly predicted in this paper. Among the delusive titles and unreal systems from which the crazy edifice of "Army Reform" has been constructed, there is none more unreal and delusive than "The Reserve of Officers."

THE Colonies are, one and all, turning their attention to "self-defence." That they should do so is not to be wondered at, when it is remembered that the mother-country has left them defenceless; but that they should so suddenly see the necessity of establishing themselves as Maritime Powers, is passing strange. No doubt, there are politicians in this country who will regard the growing Naval and Military strength of our Colonies with pleasure. There are those who will hail these signs of the Colonies pursuing their own policy with gladness, simply because they foresee in them the shadow of that coming event they so ardently desire should be brought about—"the cutting of the painter"—while there are other politicians, of a different stamp, who view these signs of self-reliedness with gladness, because they perceive in them a new source of might, power, and dominion for that Empire over which we boast that the sun never sets. Be this as it may, the fact remains that we have set our Colonies a very hard task, which none has more readily worked at than the Colony of Victoria. Before ever the troops were recalled, she provided herself with a despatch-vessel, the Victoria, whose commander, Captain Norman, was well known in the days when British merchants shipped excisable goods as wares on which no duty had to be paid, and Collectors of Customs made fortunes by winking at the practice. None were so blind in those days as those who would not see—when an envelope enclosing bank-notes to a good round sum was slipped into their hand on the arrival of a ship in Hudson's Bay. And now that harbour is to be placed in a proper state of defence against smugglers, pirates, and the Queen's enemies. The Nelson, old two-decker, followed by the Cerberus, a ship appropriately named to guard the gate between Port Phillip Heads, were not sufficient to secure the safety of wealthy Melbourne. Forts had to be built, gunboats and torpedo-boats had to be bought. A Navy has to be created. The Childers torpedo-boat has just been launched and tried—a boat named after one of the most lucky of Victorian public servants, and a rising English Cabinet Minister. More of these sixty-tonners are to follow. But will any one who knows the Victorian coast venture to say that these will make the Colony safe? Is an enemy obliged to force Port Phillip Heads to attack Williamstown, Brighton, or Melbourne? Surely not. Are there not Westernport, with its two entrances, Louttit Bay, and numerous other landing-places from which the Golden Colony can be invaded? And how is Victoria to defend all these? Surely the task is as yet too great. We feel convinced it is; and we would say the same of every other Colony. These, it is our duty to defend. They are not old enough, they are not sufficiently populated, to permit of their developing that Naval and Military organisation which alone can hope to successfully cope with foreign aggression; and until they, one and all, can develop such an organisation, it is the duty of the mother-country to retain them under her immediate protection. We are, therefore, well pleased to find that the Admiralty are not only going to raise the Australian command from that of Commodore to Rear-Admiral, but also that the change will necessitate the Australian Squadron being materially strengthened.

THE recent action of the Government in supporting the abolition of the C.D. Acts is bringing forth such a state of things in the service, that England will soon be able to boast that she possesses a Pestilent Navy. Indeed, matters have reached such a phase, that the Admiralty have been obliged to issue an order, the like of which has never before come within our ken. The spread of that contagious disease which the Act effectually prevented when in force, has, since its repeal, progressed at such a rate, that great difficulty has been found of late in procuring healthy seamen to man our ships. The Admiralty, "having had under consideration the spread of this pestilence at the home ports, and the extent to which seamen are incapacitated on this account, thereby causing great inconvenience when drafts are being prepared for foreign stations, have been pleased to direct, on December 21, that, in future, simple cases of uncomplicated disease are not to be exempted from draft abroad." Truly, a diseased Navy will England soon possess! For, so great is the dearth of seamen at this moment, that not only are the "simple, uncomplicated cases" to be sent to sea, but "aggravated or complicated cases," on board ship, "are to be sent to a Naval Hospital for special survey, and for opinion as to whether the complication is grave enough, or likely to be so prolonged, as to justify exemption from draft to foreign service." Thus do the Admiralty admit that the action of the Government, in repealing the C.D. Acts, for political and party purposes, has interfered with the health and efficiency of the Navy. No one can blame the Admiralty for this disgraceful state of affairs. Their Lordships deplore it immensely, but, of course, are helpless. The Navy, at the same time, is in a worse sanitary condition than ever it was in prior to the adoption of the Act in 1866. The bounds of moderation are now past, and it is the duty of the Press to grasp this disgusting, revolting topic, and to speak plainly, and make its voice heard and power felt throughout the land, so as to save our seamen and our soldiers, the defenders of our country, from a disease which incapacitates them from the due performance of their duties, entails untold misery on generations to come, and whose ravages are now so great as to necessitate the Admiralty issuing the horrid, pestilential order we have deemed it our inexorable duty to quote. The Admiralty, we admit, are powerless in the matter. Lord Northbrook and the Marquis of Hartington have both admitted in the Legislature the misfortune of suspending the C.D. Acts. But they were unable to withstand the onslaught of the ignorant humanitarians who have succeeded in enlisting the support of Radical constituencies to force the hand of the Government. We have always condemned the action of those who brought about the suspension of the Act, and regard them now as criminally liable for the results of their insensate policy. And now, when the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty admit that the measure thus forced upon the country is fatally affecting the Naval service, "whereon, under the good providence of God, the wealth, safety, and strength of the kingdom chiefly depend," surely, it is high time the Government interfered to prevent that service becoming a disgrace to civilised society, and the hotbed of a pestilence, whose after-effects on the nation at large are too dreadful to contemplate.

Lord Northbrook's selection of Captain John C. Purvis for the post of Senior Naval Officer at Gibraltar will be viewed with satisfaction by the numerous friends of that gallant officer. He was reluctantly compelled, through ill-health, aggravated by an accident while on duty, to strike his broad pendant at Jamaica, and return last summer to England on sick leave, much to the regret of those serving under him, as well as every one with whom he was brought in contact, both officially and socially, and was eventually obliged to resign his important appointment. We, in common with a large majority of Naval Officers, trust that he will be able to complete the regular term of service in his new appointment, and are sure that success in every way will mark his career at "the Rock."

We understand that Captain Henry F. Nicholson, C.B., has been selected to succeed Captain Barnardiston as Senior Officer in charge of H.M.'s Dockyard at Bermuda. This will place at the disposal of the Admiralty the command of the Temeraire, to which Captain Domvill has already been named as likely to succeed.

A memorial has been forwarded to Mr. Gladstone, in favour of the abolition of the power of Naval Courts-martial to inflict penal servitude in certain cases of insubordination, to which the Prime Minister has replied that he has handed the memorial over to Lord Northbrook, who, he promises, will give the matter full consideration. It is to be hoped that the Admiralty will study the efficiency of the Navy when considering this memorial, and not pander to a senseless agitation. Flogging could well be substituted for penal servitude for all cases dealt with in the memorial.

A second edition of Sir Thomas Brassey's work on the Navy will shortly be issued, revised and corrected to date of publication, so as to retain for these volumes their position as a work of reference on all subjects connected with the war navies of the world.

We are informed that the accident to the Euphrates is entirely attributable to the increased strength of the current, and its altered direction, caused by the recent severe gales which have visited the Spanish coast, and that no blame is attached to either Captain Cardale or Navigating Lieutenant Charles Robinson, two officers of the highest ability and caution as navigators in the service.

Mr. Goold, Foreman of Works at Halifax Dockyard, a civil engineer by profession, and nephew of Commander James Goold, R.N., has proceeded to England on leave. Advantage, however, appears to have been taken of his absence from the Dockyard, by certain officials interested in the abolition of the appointment of Foreman of Works, to induce the Commander-in-Chief to recommend the Admiralty to cancel Mr. Goold's appointment, on the ground that the buildings of the yard are in a dreadful state considering the amount of money annually voted for their maintenance; but from the manner things are managed at Halifax, we fail to see how any blame can be attached to him for the faults of others. The Naval Storekeeper will not mind, perhaps, explaining.

The Tenedos appears to be in such a bad condition that the Admiralty have been forced to send Mr. Glen to Halifax to examine her timbers. A provisional survey having brought to light rotten timbers, the Tenedos has been ordered to Bermuda to be placed in dock, and left Halifax for this purpose on December 2. Mr. Glen has been directed to thoroughly survey this old tub, and to return and report to their Lordships as to her actual state and condition. We hear that several timbers of the Tenedos have been found to be almost like touchwood, and it is said that she is not by a long way the only ship in the Navy in a similar unserviceable and dangerous condition.

It is with deep regret that we have to announce the death of Lieutenant James C. Farie, R.N., serving on board the Belleisle, which occurred on Christmas Day. Lieutenant Farie, believing he would retain his appointment for the usual term of three years, was only married two months ago. By some mischance, he succeeded in giving offence to the Admiralty, and, en revanche, was straightway appointed to a ship on the East Indies station. The medical officers of the Belleisle, however, interposed, representing to the Admiralty that, as Lieutenant Farie was suffering from incipient phthisis, or consumption, contracted by exposure in the Channel, it would be unwise to send him abroad until properly restored to health. This report appears to have been regarded at the Admiralty as one which connived at malingering, and Lieutenant Farie was forthwith ordered to proceed to Devonport Hospital, 300 miles away, instead of to Haulbowline Hospital, hard by, to be medically inspected. The report of the doctors at Devonport fully confirmed that of their comrades on board the Belleisle, to which ship Lieutenant Farie had to return. The journey, at this inclement season of the year, proved too much for him; his lungs were thereby affected so seriously, that it soon became evident that his case was hopeless. On Christmas Day he expired, the victim of Admiralty persecution, misrule, and revenge. Truly their Lordships have exacted their "pound of flesh"! No wonder Naval officers love them so! Had it not been for them, poor Farie might have recovered, and lived to be an ornament to his profession. But the journey and the weather, in his state of health, proved fatal. Surely an officer suffering from incipient phthisis should never have been subjected to such a frightful ordeal, especially when there were two medical officers, a staff surgeon and a surgeon on board the Belleisle. Were this sort of treatment accorded to a sick convict, the prison officials would, doubtless, be suspended, at the very least; but under the autocratic, irresponsible inquisition which now reigns at the Admiralty, not only the honour, but the very lives of Naval officers seem to hang upon a thread.

According to the "Movements of H.M.'s Ships," issued by the Admiralty on Dec. 26, the Himalaya and Euphrates had arrived that day in the East Indies! Is no one responsible at the Admiralty for the correctness of these official documents?

Lieutenant Arthur M. Farquharson has been appointed Flag-Lieutenant, and Mr. William F. C. Row, Paymaster, R.N., Secretary, to Vice-Admiral Sir William M. Dowell, the new Commander-in-Chief on the China Station.

According to the St. Petersburg newspaper Novosti, which makes a specialty of Naval news, Sir Edward Reed has sent in to the Russian Minister of Marine designs for some ironclads, on the principle he has recently advocated in the Times. We hesitate to give credence to the news, for the influence of the late Chief Constructor perished with the downfall of Admiral Popoff, two years ago, and neither the present High Admiral, Prince Alexis, nor the Minister of Marine, Admiral Shestiakoff, is at all well disposed towards Sir Edward Reed.

The French Admiral Galibert, in command of the Madagascar Expedition, has recently been distinguishing himself by bombarding open villages and trading stations on the coast of the island, mostly inhabited by British subjects. As a result, a vast amount of British property has been destroyed, for which, no doubt, the French Republic will not object to pay. At Vohernur, after destroying their property, the captain of the Boursaint most considerately took the British residents on board, for transhipment to the Mauritius, where, of course, they have arrived destitute. Surely it is time for this country to protect her own interests in Madagascar.

We learn from Cronstadt that reports are current there that Admiral Pestchouroff, the Commander-in-Chief of the Black Sea Fleet, will very shortly be appointed Russian Naval Agent in France and England, his present position being taken up by Vice-Admiral Pilkin, the head of the torpedo service in the Baltic.

Captain Doubasoff, who figured so prominently in the Turkish War, in connection with the torpedo operations on the Danube, was placed on the Retired List early in the year, for insubordination and inattention to duty while acting as head of the torpedo flotilla at Cronstadt. Recently his friends have been interceding for him, and we observe in the Gazette of this week that he is posted to the Atlantic cruiser Africa as Captain.

In view of the considerable addition to the Russian Navy estimates for next year, owing to extensive extra outlay on shipbuilding, the Minister of Marine has been requested by the Council of State to keep his expenditure within the usual limits by making reductions in other items. In consequence of this, the estimates for home and foreign navigation have been lessened by reducing the projected number of ships to be commissioned, and a saving has been effected thereby of 1,066,364 roubles.

The French ironclad squadron in Chinese waters will shortly be strengthened by the addition of La Gallissonière (launched in 1872, 6-in. armour, six $9\frac{1}{2}$-in. and four $4\frac{3}{4}$-in. guns, speed 13 knots), which vessel will carry the flag of Rear-Admiral Lespès. Should circumstances render a further increase of the squadron necessary, the ironclads Turenne and Montcalm will probably be despatched to Tonquin. The former of these is a formidable cruising ironclad of modern design, though built of wood, and has just completed her trials prior to entering upon her first commission. She carries four $9\frac{1}{2}$-in. and two $7\frac{1}{2}$-in. guns, and is protected by 10-in. armour. The second ironclad, the Montcalm, is now almost useless as a fighting vessel, as she is now fifteen years old, and her wooden hull is rapidly giving out. When new, her speed was only 11·6 knots per hour, and she is deficient in strength of armament ($6\frac{1}{4}$-in. guns) and armour (6 in. thick). These defects are, however, to some extent counteracted by great handiness and seaworthiness, and the vessels of her class are, therefore, often employed as flagships on distant stations.

The Swedish corvette Vanadis, which dragged her anchors in Portsmouth Harbour during the late heavy gales, is the vessel on board of which Prince Oscar is making his voyage round the world. She was constructed of wood at Carlskrona in 1870, has a displacement of 2,130 tons, engines of 1,400 horse-power, and steams $11\frac{1}{2}$ knots per hour. Her armament consists of eight $6\frac{1}{4}$-in. rifled Finspong, and eight 7-in. smooth-bore guns. The King of Sweden is passionately attached to the sea, and was himself brought up in the Navy. Prince Oscar is the fourth Royal Prince at present serving actively in the Navies of their respective countries, the others being the Duke of Edinburgh, commanding the Channel Squadron, Prince George of Wales, in the Canada, and Prince Henry of Prussia, in the Olga.

A painful sensation has been created in German Naval circles by some unguarded remarks made before a court of inquiry at Hamburg by a German Admiralty official of high standing. This gentleman was appointed by the German Government to act as expert to a court which had assembled for the purpose of inquiring into the loss of the German steamer Cimbria, by collision with the steamer Sultan, of Hull. The mode of proceeding adopted by the expert was to subject a few scraps of iron which had composed a portion of the Cimbria's hull, and which adhered to the bows of the Sultan, to various tests and experiments; and from the results obtained, published it as his opinion that the ill-fated vessel, which was built at Greenock in 1867, was badly constructed, both as regards material and workmanship, and that she was far inferior to vessels built in Germany. Apart from the fact that this question had nothing whatever to do with the point at issue, it is generally acknowledged that the material in the expert's possession was quite insufficient to enable him to form a correct estimate of the Cimbria's strength and build, and that he was not justified in making so grave a charge against English shipbuilders. An unfortunate circumstance connected with this affair, is that the official in question is known to be a Protectionist in shipbuilding matters, and he has therefore laid himself open to the charge of "puffing up" the German trade at the expense of that of another country. The Cimbria trial has again drawn attention to the remarkable fact that the great German Transatlantic steamship companies persistently refuse to have their large passenger steamers built anywhere but on the Clyde, which circumstance has given rise to much bad feeling in certain quarters. It is a well-known fact that the German Admiralty has offered every facility to foreign Governments who may desire to have vessels-of-war built by private firms in Germany, and to this it was due that the Chinese vessels were so ordered. The case of the Ting Yuen, however, is likely to shake the faith in such offers, as that vessel was ordered in Germany under the distinct condition that she should be navigated to China by seamen of the Imperial Navy. At the last moment, when the vessel was ready for sea, the German Government cancelled their promise.

In an article on the French Naval Estimates, the Avenir Militaire observes that there are 10,000 workmen more in the French than in the English arsenals, having to share about the same sum in the way of salary; that the climate enables the French to make a greater number of hours; and that, consequently, they should get through a larger amount of work. It appears, however, that the contrary is the case. The Avenir finds fault with the French system, which is rather too Republican-Socialist. Thus, in France a man once admitted into the Government dockyards is certain, unless he commits some serious fault, of remaining there until he becomes entitled to a pension, while recommendations are of greater influence than personal value. In other words, a unskilled or idle man enjoys the same—and many enjoy greater—privileges than the skilled workman who pays attention to his business. The writer expresses his approbation of dividing men into categories, as in England.

Several officers of the Bombay General List having lately petitioned to be placed under the same scale of pensions as officers of the local service, the Secretary of State has intimated his inability to comply with the request.

We learn that Surgeon-Major Sir Samuel Rowe, K.C.M.G., will shortly retire from the Government of the Gold Coast.

It appears that there is, or is to be, a Blue Ribbon in the French Army. We see that the War Minister, General Campenon, has just addressed a circular to the Military Governors of Paris and of Lyons, and to the commanders of the various Army Corps, with the view of obtaining the names of the soldiers who have distinguished themselves by their sobriety, so that he may forward them to the Temperance Society.

The Prussian Government has given orders for the demolition of the well-known defensive works erected by the Danes at Duffel, in Schleswig-Holstein. These fortifications played an important part in the war between Austria, and Prussia, and Denmark, and the Prussian Government, in having them demolished, is following the same course it adopted in rasing the small fortresses of Wittemberg, Colberg, Erfurt and Gravdenz, being of opinion that they render no service in the event of war; and that it is far better to have a few large fortresses which, with their circle of detached forts, answer the purpose of retrenched camps. It is upon this system that the eastern frontiers of Germany are protected by the fortresses of Kiel, Königsberg, Thorn, and Posen, and the western frontier by Strasburg, Metz, Coblentz, and Cologne.

A French paper, called the Archives de Médecine Militaire, in its number for December 1 gives us some very curious information with regard to what it calls "the terrible ravages" committed by typhoid fever in the ranks of the Tunis expeditionary corps. "All the columns on the march," says the writer, "and all the towns and posts occupied by the troops were attacked. Figures give one an idea of the malignity of the scourge. Out of 20,000 men, 4,200 were struck down." And the author of the official report, Dr. Czernicki, says that neither Tunis nor the Medical Corps was to blame for the loss of men which ensued, but the Administration. The typhoid fever was not caught in Tunis, but was conveyed there by men who before embarking for North Africa spent a fortnight or so in some barracks at Toulon "of notorious insalubrity, and well known as a hot-bed of fever." The 28th Battalion of Chasseurs, which reached Toulon in an excellent sanitary condition, had no sooner disembarked on the other side of the Mediterranean than it lost 36 men; and the 128th, the 25th, 65th, and 135th Regiments all, according to their doctors, contracted the disease at the same place. Dr. Czernicki has also a good deal to say of the way in which the fever patients were neglected, exposed to suffocating heat, suffering from want of water, want of linen, and want of bedding. Many of them remained during half the time the fever lasted on stretchers or on the ground, with their uniform on, and simply a blanket thrown over them. And it was not typhoid fever which played the greatest havoc with the expeditionary corps. It is fortunate for the gentlemen responsible for the sanitary condition of the Toulon barracks that they have not to deal with Napoleon I., who was always very terrible when the lives of his soldiers were uselessly sacrificed in unhealthy quarters.

It was to the sound of the "Marseillaise," and salutes fired from the Richelieu and the Trident, that the Commander-in-Chief of the Army of Tonquin left Toulon on the 23rd, on board the transport Winh-Long, Captain Douzans, crew 352, "one of the finest transports afloat," says a French paper,—"and pity we have not some more of them, and were obliged to charter English ships, like the Cormorin and the Cholon." The Winh-Long, in addition to Generals Millot, Brière de l'Isle, and Négrier, and staffs, sailed with 1,200 tons of ammunition on board, 5,000,000 rations, 15,000 lb. of ice, &c. She touched at Algiers, where she took on board 17 officers, 792 men, 8 orderlies, 12 horses, and a reinforcement of 24 serjeants and corporals and 176 men for battalions already in Tonquin. The Winh-Long next touched at Philippeville, where more troops were taken on board, the total being 37 officers, 50 non-commissioned officers, 1,171 rank and file, and 26 horses, which, with the crew, makes a good ship-load. The Winh-Long hopes to reach her destination on February 2, and she is being followed by the Européen and the Cormorin, which will arrive about ten days later. The other transports under orders for Tonquin are the Sarthe, the Annamite, and the Shamrock. It appears that Admiral Courbet was able to employ but a small force against Sontay—too small a force to enable him to invest the place, and hence 10,000 of the enemy managed to escape by the southern gate. The Admiral, in fact, was obliged to leave garrisons at Hanoi, Batang, and other places, for, as the French say, they are nowhere masters a gunshot from their outposts. According to the Avenir Militaire, matters passed in this way. Admiral Courbet directed his principal attack at a point formed by two arms of the river, about 350 yards from which Sontay stands. The garrison had strongly fortified the other side of the town, being convinced that the flotilla would not be able to make its way up the river under the fire of the batteries which protected it. The Admiral first opened fire against the fortifications on the land side, but did not assault the place at that spot. He re-embarked his men, the flotilla succeeded in getting up the river above Sontay, and the enemy, thus taken by surprise, were soon driven out of their advanced works, and forced to take refuge in the citadel. This feat of arms was not accomplished without some loss, and independent of the men returned as killed or wounded, we believe that a good many men of the attacking force were more or less injured by pointed bamboo sticks. The Admiral, seeing that his troops were fatigued, and knowing that the citadel must yield, did not press the attack any further on the 16th, and during the night the remainder of the garrison evacuated the place and made good its escape. Few persons entertained doubts about the French being able to capture Sontay, and yet it is clear that but for good generalship and pluck, they would have been obliged to pay dearly for their victory. They had no Chinese Regulars to contend against, and they were able to make use of their gunboats. When they find themselves opposed to the Celestials at a distance from any water-way, they will certainly require all the reinforcements now on the way out, or under orders to sail. It appears to be generally desired in France that the Jules-Ferry Cabinet should not push matters to extremes, and should avoid war with China, while maintaining its pretensions to the delta of the Red River. The Government organs declare that Bac Ninh will not offer the same amount of resistance as Sontay did, and that the Chinese are thoroughly demoralised. On the other hand, one hears a good deal of a Chinese garrison of 12,000 regulars, reinforcements arriving, and determination to fight. Nous verrons! It is rather surprising to find at this crisis the French papers supplied with their latest intelligence viâ London or New York.

The German pamphlet, "France,—Is She Ready for War?" by a Prussian officer, has elicited a few observations from M. Jules Richard, who seems to think that the curse of his native land is explained in the following lines of the pamphlet:—"At the head of the War Office, which deals with all that concerns the Army, is the Minister of War, who is responsible to the President and to the Chambers?" Politics are, therefore, mixed up with everything which concerns the Army, from the purchase of cloth to the appointment of a General-in-Chief. According to M. Jules Richard, politics proved the ruin of the French Army in 1870. This was certainly the case to a great extent; the war itself was political. Napoleon III. himself acknowledged that the march to Sedan was political. But we think that M. Jules Richard is going rather too far, when he writes:—"When at St. Privat, our old Army inflicted on the Germans double the loss it sustained itself (20,000 Germans against 12,000 French), if politics had not haunted the mind of the General-in-Chief of the French Army, it is probable that he would have broken through the circle which was about to close round him." M. Jules Richard admits the superiority of the German Army, and that everything is still in a state of transition; but with all the disadvantages under which his country labours, the writer is evidently of opinion that it would be very dangerous to attack France, and here we quite agree with him.

The French "Society of Aid to Wounded Soldiers" makes known to the public that, since operations assumed a large scale, it has despatched numerous articles to the troops serving in Tonquin, such as wine, spirits, preserves, machines for making ice, filters, mosquito nets, linen, woollens, tobacco, and what the Society calls other objets de distraction. Patriotic gifts are asked for, and will no doubt be forthcoming.

The plans or maps which have hitherto served in Germany for the Kriegspiel are about to be superseded by a new form of plan, invented by Captain Riddersted, of the Swedish Army. It has been found that the maps, as at present used, offer too few changes in the terrain, and that the nature of the ground is not clearly marked on the same. Captain Reddersted obviates these defects by forming his maps of papier-maché in such a manner that the nature of the terrain is shown in relief, and as the map is formed of four interchangeable parts, an almost unlimited number of variations can be obtained from one and the same set.

The German War Office is seriously considering the question of adding to the defences of such fortresses as are situated on navigable rivers, by constructing a number of ironclad gunboats. Two such vessels, named the Rhein and Mosel, are already attached to Coblenz, but they have not proved very successful, as their engines are not sufficiently powerful to enable them to stem the rapid current of the Rhine at more than a creeping pace. It is, therefore, probable that they will be removed to some more favourable river, and that they will be replaced by stronger vessels.

MARKSMEN.

SIR,—As I have not noticed any reference to this subject in any of the service papers, will you allow me to make a suggestion through the medium of the Army and Navy Gazette, that men who qualify as marksmen in the first part of the course may be allowed some reward or distinction for their good shooting, although they fail to make the required number of hits in the newly-invented practices of "head and shoulders" and "figure targets"? I have just had the pleasure of superintending the annual practice of the band of my regiment, a corps well known in India for its high figures of merit under the old system. They made an average of 205·14 in the individual firing,—i.e., in the practices from 150 yards to 800 yards. Of 33 men who fired, 22 made 195 or over, that is, were qualified as marksmen as far as they had gone. They had had some practice at the new targets, but when the critical time came, 13 of these men failed to make the required number of hits at the two extra practices. Some of the best and most deserving men thus lost their marksmen's prizes, and when the proper time comes will have to take off the marksman's badge won by their good shooting last year, and which some of them have won for many years together. The band-serjeant, an average good shot, and a man who had taken the greatest interest in the training of his men, lost his marksman's badge for the same reason, the only prize which he as a serjeant could hope to obtain under the new regulations, and probably, instead of being elated by their splendid average, they are all disgusted with the result of their course for 1883. I believe this will be or is already the case with many other regiments, however good their figure of merit may have been hitherto. Cannot something be done to remedy this very unsatisfactory state of things? If the authorities consider that to earn a marksman's prize a man must be able to hit these targets a fair number of times, could not they permit those who have really fired well according to the old system, and made a score of 195, to wear the badge as an honorary distinction? This would certainly stimulate men to make a good score in the first part of the course, for they would know that they would be rewarded for it, although they might not be afterwards successful at a practice at which they are not allowed to use their own judgment, but have to fire according to the laws of gravity, which laws are not always to be relied on, especially when firing with a strange rifle or in varying lights. I believe, too, that this amendment would encourage serjeants to take more interest in their own and other men's shooting, than when, as now, they are so easily deprived of the only reward they have a chance of winning for a good individual score. Although they may not be lucky enough to win a money prize, non-commissioned officers and men would always be proud to win a badge which they can wear conspicuously for a whole year. I will not trespass on your space any more, but I hope that something will be done—the sooner the better—to prevent all ranks being hopelessly discouraged in the most important part of a soldier's training.—I am, &c.,

HYTHE FIRST-CLASS EXTRA.

Preparations are to be made at Sheerness Dockyard for the construction of a new war-vessel of the Mariner type. She will be commenced on the building slip immediately after the launching of the unarmoured composite corvette Pylades, which will take place early in the New Year.

The Admiralty have determined, we hear, on continuing the occupation for a further term of years of the Cadets Hospital at Dartmouth, held under a repairing lease. This building with a dilapidated roof bids fair to swallow up a good deal of money.

A vacancy exists for the appointment of a retired lieutenant, R.N., or of a lieutenant retired with the rank of commander. Only single men without children or widowers are eligible for the appointment. Officers should address their requests to the Secretary of the Admiralty, on or before Feb. 1 next.

The monitors of the Royal Naval School, New Cross, have again sent us this year their well-written and, to Novicrucians, highly interesting little magazine, appropriately named the Novicrucian. Well may they be proud of their school, for no finer record could be published than is to be found in the following opening lines of the magazine:—"We came back in brilliant spirits, for the summer term fairly ended in a blaze of glory. The school had shown itself triumphant in work and athletics; the three candidates for the Universities—Joynson, Turton, and Moynihan—had all won first classes; and our Oxford Examiner's report was more than favourable. All our previous faults had been corrected, and if the school was still weak in classics, it was only because our champions are still young in years, and the study of the Ancients is still somewhat novel. But our crowning victory was our conquest over the Household Brigade. It is true, the heroes of Waterloo and Kassassin fell before our bat and ball.. True it is that Fortune, as ever, favoured the brave; true it is that the ground was as our crack slow bowler would have prayed; true it is also that the leader of our foes had to leave in the afternoon; but true is it also that though our captain was most stupidly run out, when apparently safe for a century, we won in a canter. We do not expect to repeat this feat this year, if the Guards again deign to play us; but let us one and all remember that the battle is not to the swift or the strong, but to the plucky and united, and that 'Victory changes her men.' We write in high spirits, for once again our theatricals are revived, and the Novicrucian welcomes the glad news. We anticipate a full house and many plaudits; and our cup of happiness is filled by hearing that the Council have granted Pitt a scholarship of £45 in consideration of his having won first place in Greek and second in Latin at the Cambridge local examinations, and his distinguished papers in mathematics in July."

ARTILLERY ORGANISATION.

SIR,—To the many letters which have appeared lately in the papers on matters relating to the Royal Artillery, its needless waste, the stagnation in the promotion of its officers, and its cumbrous organisation, I venture to add one more on the last subject.

The Royal Regiment of Artillery now comprises what were formerly four distinct regiments, namely, the (former) Royal Artillery, and the three Indian regiments (Bengal, Madras, and Bombay). The separate lists which still exist, for promotion only, will soon be merged into one, on the extinction of the old Indian lists. Promotion will then flow, with a more or less sluggish current, in a general list; and, unless some such change as I am about to suggest be effected, officers will be shifted from one branch to another, as vacancies occur. The regiment, as at present organised, is formed into three main divisions or branches—Horse Artillery, Field Batteries, and Garrison Artillery; and these are subdivided into Brigades. The Horse Artillery is in two Brigades, called A and B, each containing 13 Batteries, designated, like the Brigades, by letters; the Field Artillery is in 4 Brigades, of from 18 to 24 Batteries each; and the Garrison Artillery is in 11 Brigades, of 8 or 9 Batteries each, exclusive of Militia and Volunteer Artillery.

Now, the officers of these three distinct branches are all drawn from one source, the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, and are all placed on one list, in which they remain during the whole period of their service. That they should all receive the same training at the R.M.A., no one can doubt, and that they should all be placed on one list on obtaining their commissions is also proper. But I would suggest that after a limited period (say five years), they should be put in three separate lists; and that after a further period (say two years), no exchanges should be allowed from one list to another. In short, that at the end of seven years from the date of first commission, an officer should be fixed for service as a Horse-Artillery, a Field-Artillery, or a Garrison Artillery officer; and that he should receive promotion in his own branch only, instead of from the general list, as now. Perhaps, after attaining the rank of Regimental Lieutenant-Colonel, it might be expedient to make further promotions from a general list. This scheme may seem complicated, but I think it would work more satisfactorily than the present rule of general promotion.

My reasons for the foregoing suggestions are,—young officers, on first obtaining their commissions, are posted to vacancies, wherever they occur, except in the Horse Artillery, for which lieutenants are selected from the other branches. The smart, dashing, young man who would make an admirable H.-A. officer would, during the first years of his service, be noticed as suited for that branch; and the more scientific and less dashing (I do not mean less daring) man would find more congenial work among the big guns and their appliances, while the Field Artillery offers its own variety of service of light or heavy guns to the average man. I think, therefore, that during the first five years' service officers should be liable to be transferred, and eligible for exchange from one branch to another, as their peculiar fitness for one or the other was developed. A young man who had joined and found the H.A. a congenial service would never after take kindly to the slower and more solid work of either of the other branches; nor would one who became deeply interested in the work of G.A. care much for the light, rushing work of his jacketed brother. The F.A. officer might well be content with his position in the principal fighting body of the Artillery.

I would give a further period of two years, during which exchanges or transfers might be permitted in cases where eventually officers were found more suited for another branch than that to which they had been posted. According to the present system of promotion, if a jacket falls vacant for a Major, a man who has never served in the H.A., but would like the change, has interest (and this always will have its effect), and is transferred. But if my suggestion were adopted, the senior H.A. Captain, presumably better qualified, would get the promotion. A great amount of expense, too, would be saved to the officers, for changes in uniform and appointments; and to the country, for unnecessary charges for sea passages.

My letter has run on to a much greater length than I intended; yet I must say, before concluding, that I am quite aware that the above scheme of separating the officers into three lists would involve also the division of the Royal Artillery into three distinct bodies,—distinct in every sense, instead of being, as at present, virtually divided, while nominally only one.—I am, &c., GOLUNDAUZE.

Lieut. I. Gairdner, of the Rambler, has arrived in England, superseded at his own request.

Arrangements are now being made at Chatham for the opening of the large new fitting-out basin, early in the approaching year. The new basin, which has a water area of upwards of 30 acres, completes the chain of new basins constructed at this dockyard, the whole of the works connected with which have been in progress for upwards of twenty years. The fitting-out basin was completed several months since, but the delay in opening it has arisen in consequence of its having been found necessary to dredge away the channel approaches, so as to permit the largest armoured vessels to enter or leave the basin at any stage of the tide.

It is stated that the services rendered at and after the inquiry held in connection with the Daphne disaster by Sir Edward Reed, M.P., have induced the Government to confer upon him a marked proof of their confidence in his judgment in the shape of an important appointment, and that this will be made public in a few days.

The committee on torpedo instruction, which the Admiralty have appointed to consider and report as to how the increased instruction in torpedo work desirable for officers and seamen can be imparted, will now consist of Capt. W. E. Gordon, Capt. A. Buller, C.B., and Com. W. H. May. Admiral Hamilton was first appointed as chairman, but Capt. Gordon takes his place.

NAVAL EXAMINATION.

SIR,—In a letter you published last July, I called attention to the "fatal effects" of the arithmetic paper set at the examination for Naval cadetships, when 61 per cent. of the marks were obtained by the 31 successful candidates, eight obtaining only the exact minimum (125), and five not more than 10 marks in excess of that number. It is gratifying to find that the examiners have this last November modified the difficulties of the arithmetic paper, and the 33 successful candidates have gained over 76 per cent. of the marks, and the least number obtained was 138. The first candidate who failed stood in the list No. 40. Of the two unsuccessful candidates, who gained more marks in the aggregate, one failed in dictation, and the other in French. Comparing the results of the last four examinations, in June, 1882, the 24 successful candidates obtained 87 per cent. of the marks for arithmetic; November, 1882, 71 per cent. of the marks were obtained by the first 33, and 75 per cent. by the first 24; June, 1883, 61 per cent. by the first 31, and 64 per cent. by the first 24; in the last examination, 76 per cent. by the first 33, and nearly 81 per cent. by the first 24. In Scripture, the average was not very high, 50·75 per cent. having been obtained, and last June nearly 60 per cent. A good per-centage was obtained in algebra and geometry.—I am, &c. A. W.

THE CLIMATE OF CYPRUS.

"Two Sides to the Question" observes:—"In your issue of Sept. 29, you ask the question why Cyprus, in the face of the evidence concerning its climate given before the Commission appointed to inquire into the organisation of the Army Medical Department in Egypt, should continue to be a five years' station. Those who know the island well are aware that its climate is neither 'pestilential' nor 'unhealthy.' But the character of the climate is not the principal ground upon which the question deserves to be reconsidered. The reasons in favour of the reduction of the term of five years' service in the island for the Departments of the Army are far weightier, and deserve a respectful consideration. Regimental officers have an equal opportunity in Cyprus as elsewhere for keeping up their military knowledge, &c.; and so far, regiments have not been quartered in the island for a longer period than two years. But with officers of the Department it is not so, more particularly with those who belong to the learned professions. In Cyprus, these latter are shut out from the avenues of knowledge and the fields of experience which are open to them at most stations, and which it is absolutely necessary for them to have the opportunity of entering if they are to be expected to make progress in their profession, and to be familiar with the discoveries of modern thought and science. In Cyprus, there is little scope for an energetic man, except outside his own peculiar profession, and no opportunity of keeping himself abreast of the great world of thought outside the island. The small garrison limits to a very narrow area the field of labour and experience, and more particularly is this the case with medical officers. The duties of officers and men of the Departments generally is light, which to some may appear to be an inestimable boon; but to those who are anxious to make progress in their profession, it is a serious drawback to be stationed for five years in a place which offers no advantages for improvement. The question is not one of individual interest; it concerns the service at large, which is benefited or otherwise by capability, or want of capability, on the part of any officers of the Departments. Can it be considered advisable that under any consideration men who, to retain their power of usefulness, must keep up their knowledge and increase their experience, should be debarred for five years from almost every chance of keeping pace with the ever-advancing knowledge of the times? Five years in a man's youth are of the utmost consequence, and ground which is then lost can, by some, never afterwards be regained. What is then lost is not only an individual loss, it is also a loss to the service to which he belongs. The authorities have already decided to make Cyprus a three years' station for all men employed departmentally as butchers and bakers. Would it not be well for it to be considered whether the Army generally would not gain by the privilege being extended to all ranks of the Departments, &c., who now for five years are nearly buried alive, and who emerge from their term of service, like a prisoner from his cell, almost entirely ignorant of what has been going on in the outer world during that period."

Mr. Francis Elgar, consulting Naval architect and engineer in London, formerly of Portsmouth Dockyard, was on Friday unanimously elected by the Glasgow University Court to the John Elder Chair of Naval Architecture.

An Admiralty order recently promulgated directs that until further orders men of the seamen class will not be permitted to purchase their discharge until they have completed six years' service in man's rating instead of five years as heretofore.

The defects in the Wanderer and Dolphin, both of which have just undergone unsatisfactory trials at Sheerness, are being made good with all possible despatch, in order that they may be ready for further trials at once. Both vessels will be completed for sea as soon as they are accepted from the contractors.

The officers and students of the Marlborough gave a musical and dramatic entertainment on board their vessel, last week, to a very large and fashionable audience. The engine-room of the ship, which has been completely cleared out and made into a gymnasium, was used as the theatre, and was everything that could be desired. Two farces, some glees, and a few songs composed the programme, as well as a clarionet solo, with piano accompaniment (which was admirably performed), and there was some excellent comic acting. The arrangements reflected credit in every way upon the young students and their instructors.

THE ROYAL MARINES.

AN article which appeared in the Morning Post of December 20, on the Royal Marines, has called forth strong expressions of opinion in letters which followed in the issue of the 21st. The article itself certainly sets forth categorically the grievances under which the corps suffer, and in doing so has raised the ire of one who signs himself "Lieutenant, R.M.," which must evidently be a misprint for "R.N.," since no Marine officer could write of his own corps in the terms used. In remarking upon the claim of the senior Marine officer in command of a detachment afloat to punish his own men, "Lieutenant" says:—"The Captain of Marines has power to punish his men for all offences connected with his duty as a soldier, unless the offence is so grave that the punishment adequate is of so severe a nature that the Captain of the ship is not allowed to delegate the infliction of it even to the Commander, who is second-in-command, and not the Captain of Marines as stated in the article." This is a misleading statement to those who may not be well up in the subject. It is perfectly true that there are Captains of Marines, in command of detachments, who have this power delegated to them, but there are others to whom it is denied by the Captain of the ship, who will only recognise the Commander as, next to himself, eligible to punish; and this is one of the chief points sought to be redressed,—that is to say, that the Admiralty Regulations should place a certain power of punishment in the hands of the senior Marine officer in every ship, without leaving it to the Captain to delegate it to him or not as he pleases. The question of second-in-command can, of course, have no reference to the command of the ship; that can only fall to a Naval officer, of whatever rank he may be. But, without drawing the line so fine as the date of a commission, there can be no doubt the Captain of Marines, who is the immediate commanding officer of a large body of men, must be considered in a different position to any Lieutenant of the ship, except when at any time the latter may be left (from circumstances) in the temporary command of the vessel herself. "Lieutenant," again, says that the duties of the ship are "carried out by the Lieutenants, assisted by the Sub-Lieutenants, Warrant Officers, Midshipmen, &c., and if one of these officers has cause to complain of the conduct of a Marine under his orders, it is to the Commander, who can thoroughly appreciate the circumstances, and not to the Captain of Marines, to whom he should apply." We fail to see the point in this argument as to why the Commander should so "thoroughly appreciate the circumstances." Surely a Captain of Marines, and there are few under from 18 to 20 years' service embarked, is as fully able to appreciate, or, in other words, to understand a charge of neglect of duty, disobedience of orders, or other offence as a Commander, who, very possibly, has not been nearly so long a commissioned officer. Again, "Lieutenant" says that "officers prefer a shore life after 20 [he does not say whether years of age or of service], and that those who can afford to pay others to go for them do not go to sea at all, but remain in barracks, abuse Naval officers as a body, and cry out louder for a radical change in the mode of maintaining discipline on board men-of-war." Here, again, "Lieutenant" is in error. It is true that Marine officers are permitted to exchange on the foreign-service roster, by which exchange one of the parties will avoid embarkation for the time being, but when he again reaches the top and becomes first, he must go afloat, and therefore there can be no such continued long-shore service as that suggested. The tone of this letter is much to be regretted, as it is written throughout in a spirit of acrimony, so much so, that it is evidently the exponent of one who is at variance on every point with Marine officers, and who would advocate their being kept down with an iron grasp. Such letters will, unfortunately, tend to engender a more than unfriendly feeling between two branches of the service that should work amicably together. Most officers on both sides are willing so to work, but here and there a firebrand appears on one side or the other to do all he can to prevent it. It is very certain that the spirit expressed in the letter of "Lieutenant, R.M." would not be approved by the majority of Naval officers. Another letter on the subject, from "R.N.," is more temperate, and merely says:—"A captain of Marines not being a sailor, it is evident neither he nor his subalterns could give the necessary orders to their men for performing the regular work of the ship in which they assist, such as shortening sail, &c." This is certainly true, but it is not the point aimed at by Marine officers. They have no desire to arrogate to themselves any Naval command or duties whatever. What they aim at is to be the more immediate representatives of their men, that reference be made to them on all points touching their interior economy, and that all punishments, except those necessary to be referred to the Captain of the ship, be in the hands of the Captain commanding the detachment. Such disputations as these give rise to various impolitic suggestions, one of which has been to hand over the Marines as a body to the Horse Guards. Such a course would be at once to sink their identity, and they would gain no better status on board ship. The men would certainly prefer their present administration, and by far the greater part of the officers are better satisfied to remain as they are, under the Board of Admiralty, than to wish for a change to the War Office or Horse Guards. There is no more loyal body of men to its head than are the Marines to the Admiralty; but there are exceptions to every rule, and where numbers exist, there must necessarily be some dissentients from the general feeling; and so it is in the feeling between the Navy and Marines; as two bodies they are always ready to hold out the right hand of fellowship; but as individuals there must be exceptions here and there. It is to be hoped a happy Christmas, when peace and good-will should prevail, may wipe out any ill-feeling that may have been engendered by the late correspondence.

THE FRENCH FORTIFICATIONS.

WHATEVER else the French have neglected, one thing is certain, they have not overlooked the importance of a proper system of fortification, and vast sums have been expended within the last ten years to render the capital impregnable, and to fill up any gaps in the line of outer fortifications which were found to afford the Germans any advantage during the famous siege of 1870-71. The first of the lines of defence extends from the Belgian to the Swiss frontier, begins at Longwy, passes, speaking generally, over Verdun, Toul, Epinal, and ends at Belfort, raised to the rank of a fortress of the first rank. In looking at this line more in detail, it will be observed that in the north, Longwy and Montmédy blockade the railway from Diedenhofen, while Sedan has been dismantled, its citadel only having been retained. The next point in the long chain is Verdun, situated on the Meuse, which commands the railway leading from Metz into France. Surrounded since 1872 by strong forts, it has been transformed, almost as an equivalent for the loss of Metz, into an important place d'armes, the outer circumference of which measures about 24 miles. On the left bank of the Meuse is placed a strong fort, on the height south of Marre, and in its front the three strong redoubts of Glorieux, Regret, and Dugny; while on the right bank, in front of the line of Belrupt, Haudainville, and Belleville altogether five forts and two redoubts have been constructed. The fourth link in the chain is Toul, also a strong place, since the surrounding heights—as, for instance, the well-known Mont Michel, which the Germans utilised with success in the last war—have been drawn into the circle of fortifications. Formerly, there was no fortified position between Verdun and Toul, while now, in the same distance—measuring hardly 30 miles—six blockading forts may be counted; Saint Michel and Commercy, formerly open, have been recently fortified; in front of Verdun lies also the fortress of Etain. We now come to the most important part of the first line of defence, the fortifications of the Vosges, the central point of which is Epinal, which has in so far been newly fortified that the heights to the north (distant four miles), and those to the east and south-east (distant from two-thirds to one mile), have each been crowned by a fort. The blockading forts planned along the principal mountain passes and roads in front of Epinal number altogether 12. Among the first are included Fort Parmont, near the town of Remiremont, closing the approach from Münster into the valley of the Upper Moselle; Fort La Roche de la Haye, south of Saint-Dié, not far from Fraize, closing up the road from Colmar; near Le Thilot, a fort of the same name, blockading the approach from Thann, and east of it a fort near Maurice. Finally, there is Belfort, created a highly important stronghold, comparable in strength to Metz or Strassburg, with a circumference of about 30 miles. South of Belfort is the group of fortifications of Montbéliard, forming the extreme southern end of the first line, and consisting of the works on Mont Bart, where the Lisaine enters the Doubs, and the works near Pont de Roide, on the eastern bank of the Doubs, intended to close the roads leading from Switzerland into France. This is the first line of defence, behind which lies a second one, formed of the fortifications of Besançon, Dijon, Langres, Epernay, and Rheims, to which Chagny and Nogent-sur-Seine may be added. Besançon, on the Doubs, is intended to cover, with Langres, in the first place, the rich Franche-Comté; with this view, the works of Montfoucon and Fontain have been completed, while several others are commenced. As by the Act of July 17, 1874, which authorises for all these works the expenditure of 88½ million francs—a sum which probably will be found insufficient—fortifications are to be erected facing Switzerland and Italy supplementing the defence of the eastern frontier against Germany, the works of Besançon are intended in the first place as a bulwark against Switzerland, and next against Germany. The next position of importance is Langres, considerably enlarged since 1872, the works on the right bank of the Marne, three of which are completed, being especially strong. Langres is, as regards dimensions, at present one of the largest places d'armes of France, the circle described by the outer forts measuring nearly 32 miles. Dijon, the old capital of Burgundy, was until 1870 an open town; only under Garibaldi, some provisional fortifications were thrown up. If all the projected works of Dijon are completed, the old Burgundian capital may be reckoned amongst the strongest places France possesses. The Forts de la Motte Giron, Hautville, and D'Orgeur, are finished; for two others, the Forts d'Asnières and Neuilly-les-Dijon, the works have commenced. South of Dijon, it is proposed to fortify Chagny. As Langres may be considered the principal redoubt behind the right wing of the works facing towards Germany, Rheims, with its fortifications (which, however, have at present only been projected, or are in their first stages of construction), will rise behind the left wing. Laon, north of Rheims, has been strengthened; and here, as at La Fère, a new fort has been built, Vitry-le-Français has been retained as a blockading-place on the Marne, and on the railway leading from Bar-le-Duc over Châlons to Paris. Behind this second line of defence is placed, as a redoubt for the whole system of fortification, the monster fortress of Paris, a bulwark of such grand and enormous dimensions as to make every other fortress in the world appear small and insignificant compared with it. Three chains of forts surround the capital, the outer forts being pushed so far forward as to form a circle eighty miles in circumference, while the enceinte of the city itself measures nearly twenty miles. The old forts of Paris, which have, on the whole, remained as they were in 1870, form the second inner line of defence, of a circumference of thirty-five miles. Within the terrain of the fortress, and protected by the outer forts, there lie now seven towns, including Versailles, Saint-Germain, Saint-Denis. By a special Act, passed on March 27, 1874, £2,400,000 were granted for fortifying the capital. Among the new forts of the outer line of defence, may be mentioned that in the north two are placed at Cormeilles and Sanois; in the east, the forts of Vaujours and Chelles (near Lagny); in the south, on the left bank of the Seine, Forts Palisau and Villeras; in the west, Fort Saint-Cyr and the heights of Marly. Thus Paris forms a gigantic fortress, the investment and siege of which, as it took place in the last war, will no longer be possible. To do this, it would be necessary to occupy a circumference of nearly two hundred miles. But it is evident that for the defence of such a bulwark a very considerable force is required, which would be just as usefully, or even more so, employed at other points of the country. The question whether this conglomeration of forts and fortresses would be as valuable for the defence of the country as is confidently expected, may be variously answered. But this may be said, that France possesses on her eastern frontier, in her numerous and partly strong fortresses, quite an "extraordinary power of resistance," and has created "obstacles of some magnitude on all the high-roads," which may render difficult and retard the operations and movements of foreign and hostile armies to a very great extent.

The Army.

1st Dragoon Guards. The regimental adjutancy, which fell vacant by the death of Lieut. Waters, is to be filled by Lieut. Paterson, a transfer from the 3rd Hussars, of which he has been adjutant since his promotion from the ranks in Aug., 1880. The adjutancy of the King's Dragoon Guards has been filled almost uninterruptedly from the ranks since Waterloo, its duties being undertaken from 1818 to 1870 by former non-commissioned officers, in Capts. Henry Hill, 1818 to 1836; Richard Hollis, 1836 to 1845; Emmanuel Bradbury, 1847 to 1855; David Wale, 1855 to 1862; John Nethercote, 1862 to 1867; and Henry Barker, 1867 to 1870. In the past ten years, three officers who have served in the ranks have undertaken the duties, two out of their number dying in India, in Lieuts. Oglander, Hennah, and Waters.

3rd Dragoon Guards. The Queen has approved of Brevet Major Wardrop being appointed extra Aide-de-Camp to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

5th Lancers. Capt. Little has been appointed Aide-de-Camp to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, vice Brevet Col. Stewart, C.B., 3rd Dragoon Guards.

6th Dragoons. Major Froom has gone up to Etshowe, to do duty with the troops. Lieut. Breton has returned to Pinetown, ill, and is about to be invalided home. Capt. Crosse, Lieut. Rant, and Rdgmr. Hughes reached Natal on Nov. 22. Huts are being erected for the married families. The uncertainty of the regiment remaining in Natal, or going on to India, or returning to England, causes a great deal of expense and inconvenience to the married people, who are unable to make any definite arrangements. Our latest news from the Etshowe camp speaks of dull routine life among the military stationed there. Up to Nov. 19 nothing was known as to the future movements either of the troops or as to the disposal of their present "guest," Cetewayo. There is a prevalent notion among the military authorities that the Home Government has not yet decided on their Zulu policy of the immediate future. Until this is decided no definite orders can reach the troops at Etshowe, which is in close communication with Capetown. The monotony of camp life at Etshowe was broken by the holding of some races recently. Major McKean had a spill, but we are glad to learn that the gallant officer is little the worse.

8th Hussars. Lieut. Burn has been appointed an extra aide-de-camp to the Viceroy of India.

10th Hussars. It is probable that Capt. Lord Alwyn Compton, A.D.C. to the Marquis of Ripon, will resign his appointment on the Viceroy's Staff in time to proceed home with his regiment.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Col. H. Finlay relinquishes the command of the Royal Artillery at Colchester on the 1st prox., on which day his five years' appointment will expire.

The services of Capt. St. J. St. G. Ord have been placed at the disposal of the Colonial Office, with a view to his appointment as aide-de-camp to Sir J. H. Glover, the newly-appointed Governor of Newfoundland.

Coldstream Guards. Col. E. Chaplin, late of the regiment, died on the 23rd inst., from a tumour on the brain. He had been indisposed for some weeks past, and the indirect cause of his illness is believed to have been a carriage accident, which occurred to him and his sister-in-law, Lady Castlereagh, about a year ago, but from which until recently he had apparently entirely recovered. Col. Chaplin was the second son of the late Rev. H. Chaplin. He was born in 1842, and was educated at Harrow.

5th Northumberland Fusiliers. Major Dyke has been posted to the 2nd Batn. on promotion, and ordered to hold himself in readiness to embark for India about the 20th prox., to join head-quarters.

15th East Yorkshire Regiment. The Deccan Herald says :—"This popular regiment bids us an affectionate farewell to-day (Nov. 27), as it leaves Poona for Bombay, for the usual service there, before proceeding home. The regiment paraded the other morning in front of the Grand Stand and trooped the colours, in the presence of Major-Gen. Sir John Ross, K.C.B., and staff. The strength of the regiment amounted to about 650 men of all ranks, and the march-past, which was superbly rendered, was made in columns consisting of eight strong companies. They then reformed line, and saluted the major-general. Three sides of a square were formed, and Sir John Ross, the general officer commanding the division, addressed Col. Hallowes, the commanding officer, and congratulated him on the splendid appearance, the efficiency, and the soldierly bearing of the men under his command, expressing his own sincere regret at having to lose them in consequence of their speedy departure from the station. All classes of the European community will endorse the general's opinion cordially, and re-echo his regret. For, whether for their calico and other balls, or their children's sports, or their sky races, band entertainments, or other amusements, the East Yorkshire Regt. have had no equal, and their popularity, therefore, is enormous, and honourably earned. This popularity, we believe, they have attained everywhere they have been stationed; and while bidding them a regretful adieu, in the name of the community, we are sure we only give expression to the earnest good-wishes of all, when we bid them god-speed, and the same success and popularity wherever they may be, and a safe and pleasant and speedy journey home."

16th Bedfordshire Regiment. Lieut. Butcher, 2nd Batn., a probationer, wing-officer, 42nd Bengal N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from July 11, 1882.

30th East Lancashire Regiment. Lieut. Martindale, a probationer, officiating wing-officer, 5th Goorkhas, is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from July 3, 1882.

41st Welsh Regiment. See 6th Dragoons.

42nd Black Watch (Royal Highlanders). The Cyprus Herald has the following :—"The mail steamer from Larnaca, on the 22nd inst., bore from the shores of Cyprus a gentleman who formed one of the band of 'pioneers of civilisation' which landed in the island in 1878, to pave the road for men of more gentle professions. We need scarcely say that we allude to Capt. Scott-Stevenson, of the gallant old 'Black Watch,' who during his five years of honest devotion to his duty to the Cyprus Government as Assistant-Commissioner and Commissioner in the Kyrenia District has left a mark which his worst enemy can hardly help acknowledging. Any one knowing the little town of Kyrenia for the period named can testify to the truth of our statement. The inhabitants of Kyrenia, or many of them, may yet live to regret the loss of their former Commissioner. How many times, we would ask them, have they publicly thanked him for his devotion to their service; boats, we may almost say lives, saved by him and men led on by him while their fellow-country-men were smoking their narghilehs, and watching with morbid indifference the work of destruction carried on by nature's warfare? Ask them to call to mind the state of their town four years ago and compare their recollections of its then state to the present, and then to appeal to their consciences whether they ought not to be grateful to Capt. Scott-Stevenson for his zeal in their behalf? Besides the good opinion of many of the natives, we may say that Capt. Scott-Stevenson has left the island with the heartiest good-wishes for his future career in life, from the many true friends he has made here or brought with him."

51st King's Own Light Infantry. Lieut. Johnson, a probationer, officiating wing-officer, 27th Bengal N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from Oct. 18, 1881.

62nd Wiltshire Regiment. Lieut. Elderton, a probationer, wing-officer, 7th Bengal N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from Dec. 18, 1880.

67th Hampshire Regiment. Lieut. Fagan, a probationer, officiating squadron officer, 15th Bengal Cavalry, is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from July 10, 1882.

75th Gordon Highlanders. The services of Lieut. Stewart have been placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government, for service with the Egyptian Army.

87th Royal Irish Fusiliers. The regiment has just put up in the Garrison Church at Aldershot a very handsome memorial brass, to the late Col. Beasley, and the non-commissioned officers and men of the regiment who were killed, or died of wounds or disease, in the late Egyptian campaign. The tablet was made and designed by Messrs. Hart, Son, Peard, and Co. The names of the non-commissioned officers and men are inscribed on the brass, and the brass is let into a handsome marble slab. Col. Beasley served for upwards of 30 years in the Royal Irish Fusiliers, and was present with it during the Indian Mutiny, 1857-58 (medal). He commanded the regiment throughout the active operations of the Egyptian campaign, but a few days after the battle of Tel-el-Kebir he was taken ill, and died on Sept. 20, 1882. He was granted the 3rd Class Medjidie for his services, and it was notified in the Gazette that he would have been recommended to her Majesty for the dignity of Companion of the Order of the Bath, had he survived. The casualties of the regiment at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir were three non-commissioned officers and men killed, and 34 wounded. Col. Stevenson, C.B., who at present commands the regiment, accidentally shot himself in the hand with his revolver, and was invalided home a few days afterwards. Major (now Lieut.-Col.) Todd assumed command of the regiment on Col. Beasley's death, and brought it home in November, 1882. The regiment on arrival in England was again quartered at Aldershot till September last, when it embarked in the Jumna for India, under command of Col. Stevenson, C.B. The regiment is at present stationed at Rawul Pindee.

89th Royal Irish Fusiliers. The head-quarters and service companies are expected to arrive at Portsmouth from India on Feb. 23.

90th Cameronians (Scottish Rifles). Lieut. Colomb, a probationer, officiating wing-officer, 39th Bengal N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from Oct. 18, 1882.

91st Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. Major Forbes-Robertson, from the 93rd, has accepted the 2nd lieut.-colonelcy of the regiment, which has been vacant for some months, it having been refused by Col. Moore, C.B., V.C. The Cape Times of the 5th inst. says :—"It is not often that the departure of a regiment from one station to another is attended by such a public demonstration as that which took place on Saturday afternoon on the occasion of the 91st Highlanders leaving Cape Town for Natal. The 91st have of course exceptional claims on the good-will and regard of the inhabitants of the Cape, the regiment having since its formation been frequently and honourably associated with some of the most stirring events in South African history. But apart from this, officers and men have during their three years' stay in this town, succeeded in gaining for themselves the respect of everyone. The readiness with which Col. Robley and his gallant Highlanders have on all occasions rendered most willing services, in whatsoever way required, for the benefit of the town, will long be cherished in kindly remembrance. Nor will the excellent good conduct of the men during the time they have been amongst us be forgotten. Under these circumstances it was not surprising that their departure has been a matter for more than ordinary regret."

93rd Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. Col. Macpherson completes to-day his five years in command. He is to be succeeded in command by Lieut.-Col. Nightingale, Col. Moore, V.C., C.B., who was offered the 2nd lieut.-colonelcy of the 91st, obtaining the 2nd lieut.-colonelcy.

The Auxiliary Forces.

MILITIA.

The training of the Militia of the United Kingdom in the year now closing has been exceptionally important, from the facts that the Irish regiments were again called out, after an interval of two seasons, four battalions being brought over to Aldershot to drill with the Regular troops there; and that the force which went under canvas for the full period exceeded 50,000, of the two arms of artillery and infantry. Twenty-one brigades of artillery trained in England, Scotland, and Wales, and 14 in Ireland; three battalions of engineers in England and Wales; 106 battalions of infantry in various parts of Great Britain, and 27 in Ireland. The battalions which were brought over from Ireland were the 5th Royal Irish Rifles (South Down), 4th Royal Munster Fusiliers (Kerry), 5th Connaught Rangers (Roscommon), and 3rd Royal Irish Regiment (Wexford). These regiments while at the great camp were conspicuous for their fine physique, and for their soldierly conduct, drill, and discipline, and Major-Gen. his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, who had two of the battalions in his brigade, specially complimented them before they left for home. Arrangements are now being made at the War Office for fixing the dates and places of next year's trainings, which will commence in the case of the recruits of some of the regiments as early as February. The reports of the inspecting officers on the corps inspected this year have in most cases been very favourable. A War-Office return gives the following as the effective strength of the Militia at the date of the inspection of the several corps from 1870 to 1882 :—1870 (Irish Militia not trained), 88,661; 1871, 107,661; 1872, 116,080; 1873, 115,982; 1874, 112,679; 1875, 116,207; 1876, 114,925; 1877, 117,950; 1878, 105,876; 1879, 127,749; 1880, 130,331; 1881 (Irish Militia not trained), 127,868; and 1882 (Irish Militia not trained), 118,701, the latter total comprising 18,062 artillery, 1,229 engineers, and 99,410 infantry, including rifles.

THE ABOLITION OF THE BAYONET.

Sir,—Reforms, whether in religion, law, or medicine, are not seldom initiated by laymen, owing, may I presume, to the absence from the lay mind of the peculiar conservative bias which habit and tradition tend to establish in the professional mind. This consideration has emboldened me, a civilian, to send to you, the editor of a journal for warriors, a proposal for a reform for which I venture to submit experience shows the necessity,—I mean, the abolishment of the bayonet as a weapon unsuited to modern warfare. I need hardly say the conditions of the present are vastly different from those of the old muzzle-loading days. The returns of those killed and wounded by the bayonet in the Franco-German war show how insignificant a part the bayonet plays in actual warfare, though certainly it looks well at a review. But I contend, not only that the bayonet is of little use, but seriously detracts from a soldier's value. In the first place, it represents so much dead-weight to be carried on a march which might be replaced by an equal weight of ammunition. The second, and as I believe, great drawback to it is, that the soldier is encouraged to regard it as a weapon to fall back upon when his ammunition is expended ; consequently, he does not husband his ammunition, but recklessly blazes away. The colony from which I write has witnessed grave disasters to the British arms. Until ammunition failed, the Zulus were kept at bay at Isandlhwana ; when that happened, all was soon over. My contention is that had our men been without bayonets they would have fired so steadily, especially when their ammunition began to run low, that their fire would have been far more deadly than it was. At the commencement of that fight our men had, if I remember rightly, 70 rounds per man in their pouches. For (say) 600 men, this represents 42,000 shots. Now, remembering that the Zulus come on in dense masses, and the great penetrative power of the weapon with which our men were armed, it is evident that had they fired with very moderate steadiness and precision, the enemy must have been defeated. The disaster of Feb. 27, which has just overtaken our troops in Natal, seems to have been partly due to the exhaustion of the supplies of ammunition, indirectly due, as I contend, to the traditions of "cold steel." The enormous difference which the quality of the shooting makes in warfare has never been more strongly brought out than in the war now going on with the Boers. They are, I believe, chiefly armed with Westléy-Richards carbines, a weapon much inferior to our men's, yet, undisciplined as they are, they manage to inflict heavy loss upon us, at, it would appear, a trifling loss to themselves. Oppose ten men provided with but one round apiece to ten others at a dozen paces' distance, without ammunition, but with fixed bayonets, and can there be a doubt as to the defeat of the cold steel? Undoubtedly, there are cases where the bayonet has proved useful, but the question is whether, on the whole, the soldier would not be better without it. It might be replaced by a bowie-knife, useful for many purposes, as well as serving for self-defence in a hand-to-hand encounter. To me, as a civilian, it appears wonderful that so little pains are taken to make soldiers good shots. In actual warfare the object fired at is often moving, and the range continually varying. Instead of accustoming soldiers to fire at moving objects, they are taught to fire at fixed objects at known ranges. Snap-shooting is another accomplishment in which they get no practice. In fights at close quarters, in villages, or among good cover, excellence in this particular may be of great importance. Cheap and excellent targets for accustoming soldiers to fire at objects moving transversely could be made on the principle of the metronome, which is that of a pendulum with the centre of oscillation fixed near to the bob, the upper and lighter end holding the target. For end-on movement, a more expensive target would be required. Some time ago, I proposed to the War Office authorities the construction of a target of this description. The target consisted of a dummy figure of sheet-iron resting on a low two fore-and-aft wheeled trolly running on a single rail, supported by props at a height of about three feet above ground, the figure to be maintained in an upright position by means of counterbalance weights on each side attached to it by inclined rods, so that the centre of gravity of the moving target would be below the point of support on the rail. The end-on movement could be communicated by means of an endless wire cord supported on grooved rollers fixed to the trestle-work carrying the rail, and carried over a drum worked by horse or man power in a sheltered spot to one side of the line of fire. Such a target, capable of moving some 500 yards end on, would afford very good practice to the soldier in judging distance, and, what is of such great importance, habituate him to looking to his back-sight for every shot. It may be objected that the large amount of ammunition that would be expended in making our soldiers expert shots would involve a large additional expense, but such an objection is very short-sighted. One good shot is worth two indifferent ones. Our men are few and expensive; no pains ought, therefore, to be spared in making them really efficient. A great deal of expenditure on ammunition might be saved by teaching short-range snap-shooting with heavy pea-rifles, instead of the regulation arm. England has more experience of war under varying conditions than any other nation. With us the Temple of Janus is rarely closed, yet we are content to follow the lead of Continental armies, instead of leading ourselves in matters of reform. Would it be too revolutionary to try experimentally the reform I propose, by depriving one or two of our regiments of their bayonets and increasing the amount of ammunition carried? Being a professional man myself, I am well aware of the liability of an outsider to err in criticising professional practice ; but the importance of the subject to Englishmen is so great that I venture to incur the risk of a snub, rather than let it be overlooked for want of attention being drawn to it.—I am, &c.,

REGIMENTAL DEPÔTS.

"1. In order to ensure greater uniformity of system at regimental depôts, the depôt companies of Line battalions will, from January 1, 1884, be lettered A, B, C, D, and all officers, non-commissioned officers, and men then with, or who may join the depôt, will be posted to companies irrespective of the battalions from which they came, so as to form only one depôt. 2. It is essential that all officers and non-commissioned officers detailed for duty at the depôt should be selected for their special qualifications for dealing with recruits and young soldiers, and no trained soldiers of bad or indifferent characters are to be sent to do duty at the depôt. 3. Officers commanding must live at the head-quarters of the regimental district, and will be held strictly responsible for everything connected with the discipline and interior economy of the regimental depôt. 4. For purposes of promotion one general roll will be kept of all non-commissioned officers serving with the regimental depôt and home battalion. On the depôt roll the names of all non-commissioned officers, with the home battalion according to their seniority will be entered in red ink ; and similarly all depôt non-commissioned officers will be inserted in red ink on the home battalion roll. The interests of the depôt and home battalion non-commissioned officers will be thus protected, as well as the efficiency of the service ; for no depôt or battalion non-commissioned officer will be promoted or passed over without the mutual concurrence of the officers commanding the regimental depôt and the home battalion. Should any difference of opinion arise between these officers the question will be referred by the officer commanding the depôt to the general officer commanding the district, whose decision will be final. This will not prevent commanding officers appointing unpaid lance-serjeants and lance-corporals, without referring to each other. 5. When making promotions above the rank of serjeant the interests of non-commissioned officers serving with the foreign battalion must be considered, so that they may have a fair share of promotion to the higher grades at the depôt. With this view officers commanding battalions abroad will, at the end of each quarter, transmit to the officer commanding the regimental depôt the names of any non-commissioned officers whom they may wish to recommend for promotion to vacancies existing in the establishment of the depôt for colour-serjeant, quartermaster-serjeant, or warrant rank. 6. Non-commissioned officers sent home from the foreign battalion for discharge or transfer to the Reserve will remain on the establishment of the foreign battalion until so discharged or transferred. Non-commissioned officers sent home as invalids, and not discharged will be absorbed on the establishment of the depôt or home battalion, and the vacancy in the foreign battalion will not be filled up until such absorption takes place. 7. All recruits, except those enlisted at battalion head-quarters, will be sent to the depôt, to be trained ; and when accommodation admits, they will be kept there for three months, and then sent in batches to join the home battalion in accordance with G.O. 50 of 1883. 8. During the recruit's stay at the depôt, he is to be thoroughly instructed in Part I. of the Field Exercises, in the Manual and Firing Exercises, and, where facilities admit, he must go through the recruit's course of musketry. But where there are no rifle ranges available, the recruits should, after ten weeks' training, be sent to the home battalion, where, as soon as practicable, their course of musketry practice must be carried out. 9. Depôt recruits, on joining the home battalion, should be sufficiently advanced in drill to take their places with their companies for instruction under the company officer. Whenever, after the prescribed period, a recruit, from sickness, absence, or any other cause, is not sufficiently instructed to join the home battalion, he will be retained at the depôt. A special report of all recruits so retained over three months will be forwarded to the Adjutant-General with the monthly returns. 10. As a general rule, serjeants of long service should be selected for duty at regimental depôts. 11. Invalids sent home from the foreign battalion who are reported fit for service will join the home battalion. Invalids for discharge, and soldiers sent home on completion of their period of service with the colours, will be disposed of as may be directed by the Adjutant-General. 12. When both battalions of a regiment are abroad, officers commanding these and the regimental district must exercise their discretion in respect to the promotion of non-commissioned officers, taking care that the establishment is in no way exceeded. In the above case, all men unfit for foreign service will join the depôt. 13. Paras. 10, 11, and 13, and the last seven lines in Para. 14, of Sec. XVIII. of the Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army, are hereby cancelled, and in Para. 8 of that section the last two lines will be amended as follows :—'When it happens that both the Major and Captain at the depôt are married.'"

Christmas was observed this year in the usual festive manner on board the ships in the home ports. Leave was granted to enable as many men and boys as possible to spend their Christmas with their relations or friends on shore, and everything was done to make our seamen and Marines contented and happy. The lower decks were profusely decorated for the occasion in the good old English manner, and an unstinted supply of good cheer was provided from the canteen funds for those who had to remain on board. But why the Channel Squadron has been sent abroad at this season of the year remains a mystery.

The corvette Rover has been ordered to be brought forward for commission at Sheerness early in 1884.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1883.

AS we anticipated some months ago, Aden is to be converted into a first-class fortress. Last year, Colonel Crossman, R.E., C.M.G., reported the defences of the place to be weak, and quite inadequate for the protection of the coal and shipping in the harbour. The India Office lost no time in acting on this report, and the Inspector-General of Fortifications was asked to send out an Engineer officer to prepare plans and estimates for new fortifications. Captain Lewis, R.E., who has made a special study of coast defences, was the officer selected for this duty. His proposals are now before Government, and it is understood they will be adopted. They include a scheme for the improvement of the present forts, and for the construction of new works, at an estimated cost of £94,000. The heaviest guns now mounted at Aden are the 9-in., rifle, muzzle-loading guns of twelve tons. These guns are scarcely fit to cope with ironclads of the third class. Yet there can be no doubt that so important a place as Aden should be made secure from the attack of ironclads of the second class, of which both France and Russia possess several in Eastern seas. A second-class ironclad may be considered to be one carrying armour and backing equal to about $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. of iron. This cannot be penetrated at 2,000 yards by a gun of less calibre than the 10-in., rifle, muzzle-loading gun of 18 tons. All the guns on the Aden defences, moreover, are mounted on the open-barbette system, and are consequently much exposed to the fire of small-arms and machine-guns. The masonry parapets of the forts are weak, and incapable of resisting the fire of even the light and medium guns now mounted in modern ironclads. There are no armoured defences at present at Aden. It is proposed to remedy the above defects by largely remodelling the three forts, which dominate the harbour, on the principle of a combination of the barbette and casemate systems. The present armament is to be supplemented by a proportion of the new breech-loading 10·4-in. guns of 26 tons. This new gun is a most formidable weapon, and as an armour-piercer is stated to be superior to the 12·5-in. muzzle-loading gun of 38 tons. It is intended to place the new guns in cupolas protected by light armour, which are to be constructed in the form of turrets with sloping sides, and which can be worked by manual labour. A dominating position for a new high-level battery has also been chosen. This battery will be armed with light and medium guns, for firing down upon openings in the decks of ships, and for disabling their funnels and signalling masts. All possible landing-places are likewise to be protected by light guns, suitably placed. When the above works are completed, Aden will undoubtedly become an exceedingly strong place. It will be able to defend itself without the aid of ships. It is to be hoped that the defences of other great coaling stations, such as Singapore, Hong Kong, and the Cape, may be soon placed in the same condition. It is quite as necessary to strengthen our coast defences as to add to our Navy. Fortifications and shipbuilding should go hand-in-hand together. The aim of the Government should be to render our harbours throughout the world as independent as possible of Naval means, so that, in the event of war, the ships of the Fleet may be free to protect our commerce, or may be available when required for concentration to fight a Naval battle.

There are at present 72 Major-Generals on the Active List, besides H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught and Major-General Dormer. There are, therefore, still seven Major-Generals above the establishment to be absorbed. Up to March 31, 1885, only 15 retirements from the list of General officers will take place, five by age, 10 under the five years' clause. Generals Napier and Wardlaw, Lieutenant-Generals Sir E. Walker, C. J. Foster, and J. Conolly should retire by age; General Street, Lieutenant-Generals Ewart, Lord Chelmsford, and W. H. Seymour, Major-Generals Crealock, Marshall, Trevor, Woods, W. K. Macleod, and Howard Vyse will retire under the five years' clause, unless they are employed. As one at least of these may be saved from retirement by employment, not more than 14 vacancies are likely to occur previous to March 31, 1885, providing for the promotion of seven Colonels, and reducing the number of Major-Generals on the Active List to the number fixed by the establishment. By this it will be seen that the reduction of the number of the Major-Generals to the proper limit will not take place until the end of the year 1884-5, that is, a year later than the time named by Mr. Childers when Secretary of State for War.

Major-General Sir C. Pearson, Commandant of Netley Hospital, is, we regret to learn, suffering from a rather severe illness.

As some remarks in the Times lately on the appointment of an officer from another regiment to the command of a cavalry regiment may have given pain to the friends of the 2nd Lieutenant-Colonel of the Corps, we are glad to be able to state that this latter officer's not having succeeded to the command has only arisen from the peculiar disadvantages under which the regiment has laboured for the last three years, which rendered it advisable that an officer of more than ordinary capacity for cavalry drill should at once have command. The 2nd Lieutenant-Colonel is not only considered thoroughly capable of discharging the duties which he would have to fulfil in an ordinary way in commanding his regiment, but he holds high testimonials from our two foremost cavalry leaders (Sir Drury-Lowe and Sir Baker Russell), as to the way in which he exercised command of his corps during nearly half the time of its active service in the last campaign.

We believe the reduction in the Royal Regiment of Artillery, owing to the inability of the authorities to obtain recruits, will consist of gunners from each garrison battery, two entire batteries of Horse Artillery, and a rearrangement of Field Artillery, the depôts for which it is proposed to concentrate at Colchester, Hilsea, &c. The stupendous folly of the authorities in reducing a branch of the Army which cannot be easily or quickly manufactured, will only lead to an extravagant expenditure at no distant a date.

We hear, though we can scarcely credit the report, that as yet no steps have been taken in the case of Brigade-Surgeon Elkington, and the Medical Officers of the Brigade of Guards continue in a state of most unpleasant dissension. Something ought clearly to be done, and that soon, either to strengthen the hands of Dr. Elkington, or to terminate a state of affairs which cannot be to the advantage of the public service.

According to the Times, we are to have more harking-back. We are told that "an important step is about to be taken to bring about a reorganisation of the Royal Artillery by re-establishing the Field Artillery depôts, which were abolished on the introduction of the present brigade system, about two years ago. Four depôts, one each at Colchester, Newcastle, Hilsea, and Fermoy, will be formed. The experiment of sending recruits direct to their batteries to learn their riding and other drill has not been found to answer so well as the old plan of instructing them in the large garrisons, and orders will shortly be issued for making the necessary changes required to create anew the requisite centres." We commend those who have originated this latest "reform" for their wisdom and good sense.

We notice Lord Wolseley, on addressing the 23rd Middlesex Rifle Volunteers attached as a Volunteer Battalion to the Royal Fusiliers, recently expressed his pleasure at seeing them in the national uniform—scarlet. Can it be Lord Wolseley is changing his mind?

It is believed at the service Clubs that the reorganisation and consequent break-up of the Royal Artillery into distinct branches and regiments cannot be much longer delayed.

The following, from the Madras Mail, is a fair specimen of the paragraphs which we are continually coming across in the columns of the Indian papers:—"The 2nd Battalion Somerset Light Infantry, stationed at Kamptee, is under orders to sail for Rangoon early next month. The battalion is now over 400 below its proper strength, and will lose 70 to 80 invalids and time-expired men before it embarks. No draft seems to be under orders to bring it up to its proper strength; its 1st Battalion or Brigade Depôt cannot, we understand, supply the regiment with men. It seems very strange such a skeleton of a regiment should be selected for Burmah." The Adjutant-General has several times attempted to make out by a judicious use of figures that not only is recruiting proceeding most vigorously, but that the Army is full up to its strength. But where are the men? The unofficial accounts from regiments are all to the same effect. We want men, and cannot get them. How are we to reconcile statements so diametrically opposite?

Preliminary reports on the new rifle have been received at the Horse Guards. This weapon has as yet been tried by only one regiment at Aldershot, the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade, to which corps ten rifles were issued. These will shortly be handed over to another regiment for further experiments.

It having been found that the regulation sword of the mounted branches is all too heavy for the cavalry soldier of the present day, it is in contemplation to shortly issue a much lighter weapon. This is, indeed, a happy thought; if the "man" is not fitted for the weapon, the difficulty is easily got rid of by making the weapon suitable for the "man." But why not carry this brilliant idea a step further, and supply our cavalry boys with wooden swords, which, in a charge, would probably be quite as effective in their hands as the new steel one which has already been tried by the 4th Hussars?

During the present year, we have had to chronicle the deaths of Surgeon John Wyer, aged 94, and Surgeon Moses Griffith, aged 95. These two veterans were the absolutely last surviving officers of the Army Medical Department who took part in the Peninsular War, and had outlived their Waterloo brethren by many months. The last surviving Army doctor who shared in the glories of June 18, 1815, died April 29, 1880, in Assistant-Surgeon George Evers.

The proposed alteration of Clause 30 I. of the Royal Warrant of July 1, 1881, will not now take place. The officer of the 72nd, Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Kelsey, to whom the 2nd Lieutenant-Colonelcy of the 78th Highlanders was offered, refused the step, and allowed a junior, Major Murray, to go over his head, so that there was no necessity for any revision of the existing regulations.

We learn that the difficulty with regard to the Second Lieutenant-Colonelcy of the 91st Highlanders will shortly be overcome, and steps will be taken, on an early date, to give the promotions long overdue. Colonel Moore, V.C., C.B., has declined to leave his present regiment, the 93rd, and Major Forbes-Robertson has accepted the proffered promotion.

At the present juncture, a number of officers have volunteered their services for employment in Egypt, with an expeditionary force, or otherwise. We are informed that in not a few instances these offers have been accepted, and that the lucky individuals are held in readiness for immediate embarkation, if necessary.

The four-gun service batteries of Field Artillery not having realised the anticipations of the authorities, it is proposed, we understand, once more to give them six guns.

We are told that if only the papers would leave officers alone they would soon cease to be dissatisfied, and that schemes drawn up for the regeneration of the Army would have a fair chance. But if officials would only follow the course they recommend the papers to adopt, there would be no cause for dissatisfaction, and there would then be no need of Military regeneration.

General Sir H. W. Norman, K.C.B., assumed the duties of Captain-General and Governor of Jamaica on the 24th inst.

It is a source of general complaint among Yeomanry officers that, whereas Captains and Subalterns have shown a commendable desire to fall in with the views of the War Office, and attach themselves for long or short periods to Schools of Instruction, but two Lieutenant-Colonels have thought it necessary to set an example, though the shortcomings of commanding officers are proverbial. If Field-Officers hang back from attendance at the School of Instruction, it is in the nature of things that troop officers will do so. We hope to find notice taken of the matter, and orders issued compelling Regimental Lieutenant-Colonels to qualify under the same terms as subordinates are required to do.

With the object of promoting emigration among retired officers of the Army and Navy, chiefly to Canada, a new company is talked about, to be called the Naval and Military Co-operative Emigration Society. Some years since a similar experiment was tried in South Africa, and many military and naval men made a considerable amount of money by settling in British Kaffraria. In connection with the new venture, model farms are to be started, for the training in agriculture of the sons of the settlers. When capital and labour—for it is to be presumed that most of the emigrants will take out some amount of money with them—go together in this way, success ought to be sure.

The Committee appointed to revise the dress of the Bengal cavalry regiments has finished its sittings. It is believed that the main recommendations made are as follows:—That the number of colours be reduced from seven to three—khaki, blue, and scarlet; that the uniforms of the officers of each regiment should consist of two suits only, a lightly braided parade jacket, to take the place of the tunic and patrol jacket, and the mess jacket, so modified as to be convertible into full dress when required; also, that the braiding of all the regiments should be similar, so that even if an officer changed from a blue to a scarlet regiment he could still utilise the gold lace on his new uniform. The inexpensive blouse would of course be retained by all regiments that desired it. The cost of the complete revised uniform—not including accoutrements—should not exceed 400 rs. to 450 rs.

The various Aldershot Committees have had a brief respite, during the Christmas holidays, from their seemingly interminable "labours." The Consultative Committee on Army Tables (of which Colonel Harrison, C.B., C.M.G., R.E., is president) will have long and tedious work, and much change may be looked for in its composition ere its deliberations are brought to a conclusion. The necessity of this Committee is not apparent, not very long ago the question having been thoroughly dealt with, and a series of exhaustive tables published in December, 1877. Little has recently been heard of the Committee appointed for the purpose of revising the rules of the War-game, proper, of which Major-General Willis, C.B., is president. We understand that it is not likely the Kriegs-spiel will be again played at Aldershot, at least for some time to come, the tactical work on the modelled ground being considered all that is necessary at present. The Cavalry Committee on Saddlery and Equipment (Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick FitzWygram, Bart., president) have been very busy recently, and results of importance in the shape of proposed reduction of weight of the appointments of both horse and man, during peace and war, may be looked for shortly. It is rather singular that while, on the one hand, it is proposed to reduce the weight of the present regulation Cavalry sword, on the other hand, the weight of the new Infantry weapon has been increased by half a pound. The crowning achievement of the Committee on an Active-Service Dress for the British Army has been the production of a singular garment, the name of which is unknown, and colour uncertain. A number of these "coats" are, we believe, now being made for the purpose of further experiment and report, and so on, ad infinitum. It is at least open to doubt whether this garment will ever become the active-service dress of the British soldier. As to the Committee on the valise equipment and actice-service kit for the soldier, they are still busy with all sorts of inventions and devices, and seem as yet to have got little beyond the point reached by Sir Thomas Steele's Committee, early in 1880. Thus, briefly, stands the Aldershot Committee-work of 1883. The new year will assuredly bring a fresh tale of these subterfuges, while outside the Army everybody is satisfied, for is not all this Committee-work proof positive that "something is being done"?

The Repulse, for safety, has moved from Hull to Grimsby, where she is at present lying at her own anchors. THE CHANNEL SQUADRON.

Vigo, December 21, 1883.

The Minotaur and Achilles have arrived, and the Forward is expected every hour. Why the Admiralty cannot supply us with a better despatch-vessel, one more suited to the purpose, when the Enchantress is lying idle, few of us can understand. The Minotaur, with the Vice-Admiral commanding on board, has since proceeded to sea with all despatch, and not the Achilles, to assist the Sultan in getting the Euphrates off Tarifa Point. The rest of the fleet will follow to-morrow morning, or possibly to night, if the telegram from the Admiralty is urgent. The weather here is warm and bright, the thermometer showing 59 degrees in the shade, and the bay looks lovely. I regret to have to announce two casualties this week. On Wednesday a royal-yard man, named Whittey, of the Sultan, fell from aloft, and was killed instantaneously. Alfred Jenkins, an able seaman of the Agincourt, met his death in a similar manner yesterday, and was buried to-day on shore.

On Wednesday a steam launch fitted with two torpedoes was sent from each ship to the flagship. The four boats then proceeded behind a point of land, and from there made an imaginary night attack on the Agincourt. The torpedoes, however, not being charged with air, were only "dropped" to represent firing. The previous day all the steamboats of the squadron were away in charge of Capt. Meade, of the Agincourt, performing steam tactics, a lieutenant and sub-lieutenant from each ship being in charge of the respective boats.

It is understood that the Admiralty have decided to alter the three sister turret-ships, Hydra, Gorgon, and Cyclops, in the same manner as the Hecate, and a sum for the purpose will be included in next years' estimates.

GREENWICH PENSIONS FOR SEAMEN'S WIDOWS.

The Admiralty, by an Order in Council, issued last Friday, have made the following provisions for granting pensions out of the funds of Greenwich Hospital to widows, and allowances to children, of petty officers, non-commissioned officers, seamen, and Marines, Royal Naval Reservemen, and Naval Artillery Volunteers, who may be killed or drowned in the service of the Crown, &c. For widows of able seamen and other persons in the same category, including Marines and Marine Artillery, 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. per week, and 1s. 6d. per week for each child dependent on the mother. For widows of second-class petty officers, corporals of Marines and Marine Artillery, 4s. to 5s. per week, and 1s. 6d. for each child dependent on the mother. For widows of first-class petty officers, serjeants of Marine and Marine Artillery, 4s. 6d. to 6s. per week, and 2s. for each child dependent on the mother. For widows of chief petty officers, colour and staff serjeants of the Marines and Marine Artillery, 5s. to 6s. 6d. per week, and 2s. for each child dependent on the mother. Rates in excess of the foregoing scale may, at the discretion of the Admiralty, be awarded in cases needing special relief. If a widow remarries, her pension will be suspended, but the allowance to the children may be continued. If she again become a widow she may revert to the pension she previously enjoyed. Should she become eligible for a pension on account of the death of her second husband, she may either revert to her original pension, or be granted the pension for which her second marriage rendered her eligible, whichever is most to her advantage. Pensions and allowances are tenable, subject to good behaviour, and are granted at the discretion of the Admiralty. Any assignment, sale, or contract relating to a pension or allowance out of Greenwich Hospital Fund is void. If in receipt of parish relief, in respect either of herself or her family, the payment of the pension and allowance will be suspended, and in no case will the pension or allowance be paid to the parish authorities. The widow will be required to make a declaration monthly, or whenever it may be considered necessary, before the duly authorised person as to her continued widowhood, and of any particulars required in reference to her family. Boys above fourteen and girls above sixteen will, as a rule, be ineligible for allowances. Applications should be made at the proper age for placing children in orphanages or other institutions at the expense of Greenwich Hospital funds. Should the opportunity of so placing a child be declined, or should a child be withdrawn from a school, home, or charitable institution where it is being maintained, such child will in ordinary circumstances be ineligible for an allowance. If the claim of a widow to a pension be not established before her death, the amount of the pension to which she would have been entitled if living, will not be allowed to her representatives. These regulations apply from June 4, 1880. In the event of men included in the order not leaving widows or children, bnt leaving parents or other relatives dependent upon them, gratuities not exceeding one year's full wages may be given at the discretion of the Admiralty to such parents or relatives, provided the annual expenditure in such gratuities shall not exceed in any one case the sum of £500. The same Order in Council embodies a new scheme for Greenwich Hospital Corps. The complement of the school will not exceed 1,000 boys, sons of (a), warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, petty officers, and men of the Royal Navy and Marines; (b), men of the Royal Naval Volunteers; (c), men of the Royal Naval Artillery Volunteer Force, killed, drowned, or disabled in the service of the Crown; (d), other seafaring persons and men drowned on lifeboat service. Claims for admission to the school will be judged by a committee of selection appointed by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty in the following order of precedence, special consideration being given to the length, nature, and merits of the father's services:—

Class 1.—Orphans—Both parents dead.

Class 2.—Orphans—Father killed or drowned on duty in the service of the Crown, or on lifeboat service, or who has died from the effects of injury or disease caused by extraordinary exposure or exertion on service within 12 months after being certified to be ill; mother living.

Class 3.—Orphans—Father dead, mother living.

Class 5.—Sons of men now serving—Both parents living.

Class 6.—Sons of life pensioners and of men entitled to the benefits of Greenwich Hospital—Both parents living.

Class 7.—Sons of persons eligible whose claims may be considered exceptional, although not coming within the foregoing classes.

Boys will be eligible for admission between 11 and 14 years of age.

The order further sets forth that it would be of advantage to admit boys for special instruction in navigation, nautical astronomy, and seamanship, and authorises the admission of boys ultimately destined for sea service, either in the Navy or in the Mercantile Marine, under such conditions as may seem desirable to the Admiralty, and on payment, the amount whereof shall be decided by them. Provision is also made for an increase of teaching power in the school; and the salaries of the medical officer and the cashier are increased by £20 and £50 respectively.

In consequence of the large number of Reserve men now drilling at the Royal Naval Reserve battery at Stornoway, it has been resolved by the Admiralty, on the recommendation of the Duke of Edinburgh, when Admiral-Superintendent of the Naval Reserve, to erect an additional battery there, to contain three guns, a magazine, and superintendent's office. It has also been resolved to erect a sea-wall extending along the whole frontage of the batteries. Tenders having been invited by the Admiralty, they have accepted the offer of Messrs. Ross and M'Kenzie, Stornoway, at a cost of about £3,500. At present the number of Reserve men drilling at the battery is about 400, under 15 instructors, and all are under the superintendence of Chief Officer Joseph Heathcote.

The Queen's Physician, Dr. Fairbank, has written strongly recommending LENTILLA, or TONIC DAILY FOOD. It cures indigestion, heartburn, constipation, liver and stomach complaints, &c., besides having such wondrous nourishing properties. Makes soups, porridge, biscuits, puddings, custards, &c. GUNNERY TRIALS.

The Emperor of Brazil, accompanied by the Comte d'Eu, Minister of Marine, the Adjutant-General of the Army, and several Naval and Military officers, recently attended a series of trials near Rio, ordered to be made, with a view of selecting a light shell-gun for the Brazilian service. On a platform constructed for the purpose, the following guns were mounted: — A Whitworth 9-pounder, a Hotchkiss 37 millimètre revolving cannon, a Nordenfelt 1½-in. single-barrel shell-gun, and a Nordenfelt 1-in. English Admiralty pattern anti-torpedo-boat gun. At a range of 300 mètres, the following targets had been erected:—1. Twenty-eight millimètre steel-plate, with wood backing of 110 millimètres thickness. 2. Three iron plates, each 13 millimètres thick. The last two plates were placed close together, but the front plates were 40 centimètres apart. 3. An iron plate, 102 millimètres thick, solid. The Nordenfelt 1½-in. shell-gun was fired first. Two rounds were fired at No. 1 and one round at No. 2 target, the three shots completely penetrating the targets. The English Admiralty pattern one-inch gun was then fired at No. 1 target, which it penetrated to 21 millimètres. Fired at No. 2 target, its steel shot penetrated the first two and indented the third plate. All the shots fired from these guns struck the targets. The Hotchkiss 37-millimètre gun was then fired. Out of 14 rounds, only two struck the target aimed at. One shell penetrated No. 1 target to 25 millimètres. The other shell penetrated the first two plates of No. 2 target, indenting the third plate. The Whitworth 9-pounder gun was fired at No. 3 target, which it penetrated only to 58 millimètres. The Gazetta de Noticias, in reviewing these trials, speaks most highly of the performance of the Nordenfelt guns, stating that the results obtained have greatly pleased his Majesty the Emperor of Brazil and all the Ministers and officers present at the trials. In Turkey, trials have been made of the same Nordenfelt shell gun regarding which the Eastern Express of Dec. 4, in a lengthy article, which we abridge, supplies the following information:—A trial of the Nordenfelt 37-millimètre shell gun, which took place at Tchataldja, near Constantinople, on Dec. 1, in the presence of a commission composed of their Excellencies Ristow, Ali, Server, and Husni Pashas, and Hakkan, Hassan, Mehemet, Edhem, and Ali Beys. His Majesty the Sultan appointed Ristow Pasha, a German artillery officer, to act as president of the commission. In the trials for penetration, a solid steel shot completely penetrated four Cammell compound-plates of a total thickness of 60 millimètres, at a range of 500 mètres. There is a report abroad, however, that this plate was turned the wrong way, that is to say, that the iron surface, instead of the hardened steel, was opposed to the gun. The trial can, however, easily be repeated, should any doubts exist. Three iron plates of 30 millimètres thickness were also pierced, the shot indenting the fourth plate. Experiments were then made to establish the effect of the fragments of bursting shell. For this purpose, a target consisted of a Cammell compound plate, 20 millimètres thick, behind which was a wooden screen at a distance of five mètres, composed of 1-in. planking 2½ mètres high and five mètres long. At this target eight common shells were fired. When the screen was examined, it was found that 48 shell splinters had passed completely through the screen, and that 24 had embedded themselves therein. The accuracy trial was carried out at a range of 2,000 mètres, at a target five mètres square. Out of six shots fired, two struck the bull's-eye. Two targets 2½ mètres square were then placed five mètres apart, and at these 15 shots were fired, at a range of 800 yards, in 1 min. 5 sec., the aim being changed from target to target at each shot. Of these, five shots hit the left and three the right-hand target. Ten shots were then fired in rapid succession at a target one mètre square and 200 yards off. The gun was only sighted for the first shot and not relayed. Seven shots struck the target. Ristow Pasha expressed his satisfaction with these results.

"Light Bob" writes:—"Some time ago, a sealed pattern of sashes, with whistle and chain, was sent to commanding officers of Light Infantry regiments with a view to their reporting as to the advisability of the issue of this sash to the serjeants. Now, Sir, in the event of this being done, I should hope something of the same kind will be authorised for officers. I have spoken to several Light Infantry officers on the subject, but they all say our sash is too light to bear the weight of the whistle and chain. So it is; but that difficulty is very soon overcome by sewing the sash over a patent leather belt made like a pouch-belt. I have had one made, and find it is not only capable of holding the weight of the whistle and chain, but greatly adds to the smartness of the appearance of the sash. Light Infantry in these days have hardly any distinction, and the revival of the whistle and chain would, I am sure, give great satisfaction to many regiments."

A memorial to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Bombay Army who fell during the Afghan War of 1878-81 has been erected in St. John's Church, Kolaba. It consists of an arcade of nine arches, running along the eastern wall of the nave, and filling the space above the principal entrance. The great majority fell at Maiwand, and in the sortie from Candahar.

HOW TO AVOID THE INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF STIMULANTS.—The present system of living—partaking of too rich foods, as pastry, saccharine and fatty substances, alcoholic drinks, and an insufficient amount of exercise—frequently deranges the liver. I would advise all bilious people, unless they are careful to keep the liver acting freely, to exercise great care in the use of alcoholic drinks, avoid sugar, and always dilute largely with water. Experience shows that porter, mild ales, port wine, dark sherries, sweet champagne, liqueurs, and brandies, are all very apt to disagree; while light white wines, and gin or old whisky largely diluted with soda water, will be found the least objectionable. ENO'S FRUIT SALT is peculiarly adapted for any constitutional weakness of the liver; it possesses the powers of reparation when digestion has been disturbed or lost, and places the invalid on the right track to health. A world of woes is avoided by those who keep and use ENO'S FRUIT SALT, therefore no family should ever be without it. CAUTION.—Legal Rights are protected in every Civilised Country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "ENO'S FRUIT SALT." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions, in Sixteen Languages, how to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at ENO'S Fruit Salt Works, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C. ENO'S Patent.

Reviews.

Tropical Trials. By Major Leigh Hunt and Alexander Kenny. (W. H. Allen and Co.)—The authors of this book have already published a similar one, entitled "On Duty Under a Tropical Sun." It evidently made an impression in some quarters, for the authors have received many letters from ladies, requesting them to write a book containing suggestions as to the maintenance of health, clothing, travelling, and the management of children, for the guidance of women in the tropics. Hence comes the present book, Tropical Trials. The reader must remember that although each book is complete in itself, the former is intended for women, and the latter for men in the tropics. It would be strange if the ladies who made the above-mentioned request do not feel satisfied with the way in which it has been treated. The authors have prepared quite a comprehensive work on the subject of health in the tropics, one which most probably will be accepted as an authority more attractive than any that has been brought before their attention, from "Buccle's Domestic Medicine"—that octogenarian octavo volume—down to the "Weekly Pennies." The authors have published in these two volumes not a medical work purely, but one in which the ingredients of common-sense (when dealing with ailments of women and children in the tropics) is supposed to take a part.

India and Tiger-hunting. By Col. Julius Barras (Rastall and Son.)—The very many lovers of "sporting,' in the most comprehensive sense of the word, who have already been attracted by Col. Barras's first volume on India and Tiger-hunting, will no doubt unanimously welcome the advent of volume No. 2, which treats of "Tiger-hunting, and other Adventures." It is written in the same attractive manner as its predecessor, and is full of adventure. The two volumes would form a very "stunning" present for young lads fond of exciting stories.

An Explanatory Arithmetic. By C. Eastcot Spickernel. (Simpkin, Marshall, and Co.)—This useful little work is designed as a school test-book, by which a course of reading may be carried out intelligently and quickly. Its speciality seems to be that with it pupils may be required to read and think for themselves, and not to depend too much on oral instruction. The idea, which is a good one, is carefully carried out.

There is considerable variety and very considerable merit in the English Illustrated Magazine for January. The number opens with an engraving of Matthew Arnold, from a drawing by F. Sandys, which does not require any particular observation. In all probability those who have studied the engraving on the frontispiece will not feel any inclination to pass a complimentary verdict on it, quite the contrary. However, there is a great deal of other matter in the magazine which amply repays for the shortcomings of Mr. Arnold's portrait, particularly the paper contributed by Mr. Archibald Forbes, "The Emperor and his Marshal;" and still more particulary by one, and a bright one, Alfred Caldecott's translation of "The Hares and the Frogs," from Esop's Fables. It is quite a gem. If we take into consideration some beautifully executed landscape drawings, this number of the English Illustrated Magazine may be called inferior to none of its predecessors.

The Service Almanack, for 1884, published by Messrs. Harrison and Sons, contains an increased amount of useful and interesting information for naval and military men. The historical portion is not all that could be desired, but n this it is difficult to attain even an approach to absolute accuracy. Those who seek it generally consult more pretentious works than the very brief summaries given in annual publications. On other points, such as the composition and uniforms of the Indian armies, the descriptions of our war medals, details of Army expenditure, and occurrences of the year, this almanack may be referred to with great advantage.

SOLDIERS' MONEY.

SIR,—By notifying the fact that the following sums have been published in the London Gazette during the present year, as awaiting the next-of-kin of deceased soldiers, you may convey the news of a "windfall" to some of your readers:—

Corpl.	McCristol	£518	18	4
”	Henry Burrell	152	9	10
”	S. Hadaway	102	7	10
Private	W. Kirby	124	19	9
”	M. O'Neil	109	2	1
”	Fred Poole	112	16	11
”	W. Randall	181	12	3
”	W. A. Thomas	124	13	8
”	Patrick Casey	106	11	11
”	William Jukes	148	17	0
”	Thomas Holland	164	0	5

One would think that the authorities would be only too glad to publish figures like the above, as a spur to recruiting; but London-Gazette and Army-List notification is now the rule, instead of seeking for the next-of-kin in newspapers likely to be seen by the persons interested.—I am, &c.,

EDWARD PRESTON.

Mr. Horace Walpole, C.B., has been appointed Assistant Under-Secretary of State for India.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Made simply with boiling water or milk. Obituary.

Major-Gen. E. B. Ramsay died on Christmas Day, at his residence in West Cromwell Road, aged 57. The deceased was a younger son of Sir Alexander Ramsay, second baronet, of Balmain, Kincardineshire, and uncle of the present baronet, and he was born in the year 1826. He entered the Army in 1844, became capt. in 1856, major in 1862, lieut.-col. in 1870, col. in 1875. He served with the Turkish Contingent in 1855, and retired as major-gen. in 1876.

Major-Gen. S. C. Law, Bombay S.C., died on Wednesday, at Folkestone, aged 57. He entered the Army in 1844, became capt. in 1859, major in 1864, lieut.-col. in 1870, attained the rank of col. in 1875, and that of major-gen. in 1878, and placed on the Retired List.

The Western Morning News says:—"A much-respected and widely-known inhabitant of Plymouth, Col. W. H. Adams, has died within the past few days. Col. Adams was the son of the late Capt. Adams, a very old resident in the town, who, during the latter part of his life, lived in Portland Square. The colonel was born in Malta, and while still very young was sent to the Military College at Sandhurst as a cadet. In due time he joined the 36th Regiment of the Line, at that time stationed at the Plymouth Citadel, and was soon after sent to Ireland. Subsequently Mr. Adams was appointed professor of fortification at Sandhurst. He held this post for twenty-five years, and in 1870 retired from active work, and settled in Plymouth. About the beginning of December the deceased gentleman caught cold, and rapidly lost strength. On the 20th, at the ripe age of 78, he passed away, leaving a large circle of friends to regret him."

Capt. William Stephens Arthur, R.N., died at Penzance on Wednesday, Dec. 19, aged 87. He entered the Navy in 1811, and was wounded, when a midshipman, in the attack on Fort Eric in 1814. He was promoted to lieut. in 1821, com. in 1824, and capt. on the H.I.K. List in 1856.

London Amusements.

Without attempting to describe the various forms in which our metropolitan holiday entertainments were presented on Christmas Eve and Boxing Night, it will suffice to record that they are collectively creditable to all engaged in their production, and that some exhibited remarkable proofs of modern managerial enterprise. The DRURY LANE pantomime of "Cinderella" is probably the most costly fairy spectacle ever seen upon the English stage. It is said to have involved Mr. Augustus Harris in an expenditure of nearly £9,000, and there is no reason to believe the estimate in any degree exaggerated. Miss Kate Vaughan proves a charming representative of the heroine, and Mr. Harry Nicholls and Mr. Herbert Campbell, as the two sisters, are exceedingly funny without the slightest approach to vulgarity. All the members of the very numerous company illustrating the popular fairy story exerted themselves with great effect, and the result must be pronounced a singularly well-deserved success.

In "Little Red Riding Hood," at Her Majesty's, chiefly supported by the Vokes family, and especially framed as a pantomime for the juvenile portion of the community, there is also agreeable evidence of much taste and expenditure having been employed. At the Gaiety, the parody of "Pygmalion and Galatea," written by Mr. H. Pottinger Stephens, and entitled "Galatea, or Pygmalion Re-versed," is interpreted in a lively manner by the clever acting of Miss E. Farren and Mr. Edward Terry. The pantomimes at the Crystal Palace, the Standard, Surrey, Grand, Britannia, and Pavilion Theatres are especially noteworthy, as being associated with mirthful action and elaborate scenic effects.

At the OPERA COMIQUE "Lotta," the American comic actress, has failed to make the success expected from her great reputation in the United States; but we must wait for her appearance in a better drama than the clumsily-concocted piece called "Musette," before forming a definite opinion of her abilities. Miss Lotta is in the unavoidable position of not being so young as she was, and the voice of maturity is somewhat out of harmony with her assumption of the dress and manners of a schoolgirl. Exuberant animal spirits carry her safely through her personation to a certain extent, but the dialogue Miss Lotta has to speak, however suitable to eccentric Transatlantic tastes, is occasionally found to jar on English ears, and to irritate an audience with insular notions of feminine propriety. In other characters, it may be reasonably anticipated, Lotta will gain greater favour.

The INTERNATIONAL THEATRE, opened 13 years since as the "Holborn Amphitheatre," and since known by the very vague titles of "The Connaught" and "The Alcazar," is not likely to improve its fortunes by such a drama as "Mizpah," the work of Mr. Benjamin Sykes. The ludicrous conspiracy of a gang of London Socialists to destroy the public buildings of the metropolis in order to advance popular progress only invited the derision of the audience, and not even the advantages of a comfortable pit, cushioned, backed, and carpeted to the very verge of the footlights, would reconcile the occupants of the seats to such a conglomeration of melodramatic absurdities.

The English Opera Company, under the direction of Mr. T. H. Friend, will commence a short season at COVENT GARDEN THEATRE early in January, with Victor E. Nessler's romantic opera of "The Piper of Hamelin."

The NOVELTY THEATRE, in Great Queen Street, passing under the management of Miss Nelly Harris, will be opened on Saturday next with "The New Magdalen," in which Miss Ada Cavendish will represent her original character.

Before January closes, Mr. Bruce's theatre in Coventry Street, Piccadilly, is expected to be opened under the title of THE PRINCE'S. The programme will be on the first night composed of Mr. W. S. Gilbert's play of "The Palace of Truth," acted by a company including Miss Lingard, Miss Sophie Eyre, Miss Tilbury, Mr. Anson, and Mr. Kyrle Bellew.

"Recommends itself not alone to those of limited means, but to the wealthy, who, when frequenting large gatherings, whether at racecourses, theatres, public meetings, or even on that sacred thoroughfare, the king's highway, have known what it is to be robbed of their valuables."

OROIDE GOLD WATCHES,
The "SERVICE" KEYLESS WATCH,
Open face, jewelled in eight holes, Two Guineas, post free.

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose."
